Hist. of Fairfield Co., Conn., D. H. Hurd, 1881 MHS-9/7/83 Se 68 Log 507

Richard Crabb.—His name first appears on the roll of the general meeting of the freemen, at Hartford, for the election of magistrates, Jan. 16, 1639; and April 9, 1640, he is present as deputy, and must have been a man of some note. He came to Stamford with the company from Wethersfield, and is on the list of those who paid the hundred bushels of corn to the New Haven colony, and of those to whom the first assignment of land was made. He received ten acres. His land must have been assigned him west of the present limits of the town, as he is spoken of subsequently in the records as belonging to Greenwich.

Rev. Richard Denton came with his parishioners from Wethersfield. His name heads the first list of the new colony, and stands third on the list of those who paid for surveying the tract. He received fourteen acres, only two of the settlers exceeding him in the assignment of land.

Jeffrey Ferris, made freeman in Boston in 1635, came with the first settlers, is on the list of those who paid for the survey, and received ten acres at the first assignment of land. Savage says he was from Watertown, Mass., where he was made freeman, probably May 6, 1635, whence he came to Wethersfield. He sold his lot in Wethersfield, of forty-five acres, to John Deming. He came with the first colony from Wethersfield, and in 1656 is one of the eleven Greenwich men who petitioned to be accepted under the New Haven jurisdiction. His will, found on the Probate records at Fairfield, is dated Jan. 6, 1664. He wills to the four boys he brought up ten pounds sterling apiece if they live with any of his children until they are eighteen years old, the money then to be put out for them until they are twenty years of age. His will names also his wife Judy, son James, son Jonathan Lockwood, and Mary Lockwood, son Peter's three children, and son Joseph's two. Judy Bowers, his widow, receipts for her widow's portion, March 6, 1667. His marriage contract with his wife Susannah, widow of Robert Lockwood, of date May 28, 1661, pledges certain legacies to the children of Robert Lockwood, deceased, and mortgages his Greenwich lands and "housings." He died in 1666. The name Ferris is from Leicestershire, house of Feriers, from Henry, son of Gualchelme de Feriers, to whom William the Conqueror gave large grants of land in the three shires of Stafford, Derby, and Leicester.

Tradition invests the emigration of this family to this country with the hues of romantic adventure,—the ancestress, high born, following her plebeian lover out into this Western world, to share with him here the fortunes which English aristocracy would not allow there.

Daniel Finch, made freeman in Boston, 1631, and enrolled same year among Watertown settlers. In 1636, he was constable in Wethersfield, whence he came with the Stamford settlers, 1641, and is on each of the three first lists of the colony. He received nine acres in the first distribution of land. Savage supposes he was from Watertown, Mass., and that he came in the fleet with Governor Winthrop; that he was made freeman May 18, 1631; that he went to Wethersfield in 1635 or 1636, where he was constable in the latter year. He also makes him remove in 1653 to Fairfield, where he married, Dec. 25, 1657 Elizabeth, widow of John Thompson, and died March 1667. His marriage agreement with Elizabeth Thompson is on the Probate records at Fairfield.

John Finch is assigned by the town in October 1642, six acres, with marsh and upland, as the other men. He died here in 1657. He sold his house and home-lot in 1653 to Richard Ambler.

Robert Fisher was here early, if not with the first colony. He had land assigned him by the town, as appears from the testimony of Thomas Morehouse March 17, 1649, in which he says that John Whitmore sold to his son John the land which was Robert Fisher's by gift of the town.

Robert Gildersleeve came with the first company from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of settlers. He received, in the first distribution of land, thirteen acres. While here he was a representative from the town in the General Court at New Haven.

William Graves received a house-lot in the distribution of November, 1642.

John Holly was here, as present records show, as early as 1647. William H. Holly, Esq., copied from the records several years ago the birth of John, son of John Holly, in October, 1642, which would suggest that the family may have been here even as early. He purchased land on the 26th of 12th month, 1647, of William Newman, and from that date his purchases of real estate are numerous. He was a noted man and much in the public service. In 1679 he gave his house and lot to his son Samuel, and land to his son John, reserving to himself and wife half the fruit of the orchard. He also gave land at the same date to his son Increase. In his will, on record at Fairfield his legatees are his wife Mary, and his children John Samuel, Increase, Elisha, Jonathan, Elizabeth Turney, Bethia Weed, Hannah Hoyt, and Abigail.

Thomas Hoyt, or Hyatt, received three acres of woodland. This name was spelled very variously on the records,—Hoyette, Hyat, Hyot, Hioute, Houl Hoyt, Hoight, Hayt, Hiat, Hoit, and Hoyte. Thomas "Hyat" died here in 1651. I suppose him and Simon to be the ancestors of the Stamford Hoyts. The inventory of his estate was rendered in court in 1662, amounting to £132 2*s.* 3*d.* The court gave to the widow her third, and made Cornelius Jones administrator, to divide the rest among the six children. The administrator was so well pleased with the case as to take for his wife the widow Elizabeth, and their marriage is on record, 1. 8. 1657. The children are recorded as giving receipts to their father-in-law Cornelius Jones, as follows: Caleb, Dec. 23, 1661; Ruth then become Mrs. John Wescot, Feb. 9, 1667; Be ı, 13. 8. 1674, for twelve pounds eleven shillings ı pence; Thomas, 21. 8. 1674, a like sum; and ɔrah gives similar receipts, 30. 9. 1669. These pts are for their several portions of their father, nas "Hiat's" estate. John "Hiat," of "Younk- N. Y., gives receipt, July 6, 1689, for twenty ıds, current pay, to the said Cornelius Jones, his er-in-law. After careful collation of names I am ɔle to distinguish among the settlers the two ly names Hoyt and Hyatt. Within twenty-five 's of the settlement I find these different ways of ling the same name. On pages 113 and 114, ords No. 1, the estates of both Thomas Hyatt and on Hoyette are receipted for by the heirs of both. hese receipts we have the following different spell- ı: Hoyt, 1662; Hiat, 1669; Hoyte, 1661; and the miscuous entry of these receipts for the two es- ɜs would seem to indicate that they belonged to same family. Joshua, son of Simon, spells his ne Hyot. When the name became settled in its) leading forms, Hoyt and Hyatt, as distinct family nes, I hardly think the records will show.

Simon Hoyt was probably here with the first set- rs. I take the liberty of entering his name in one the places whose name has been effaced by time. ɜ died here in 1657, and his name occurs quite often the records of the town. The inventory of his es- ɜe is on record, dated Oct. 9, 1657, and amounting two hundred and twenty-five pounds. After his ath his widow Susanna, it appears, married a Bates. is children, as indicated by receipts given for their ɔrtions of their father's estate, were Joshua, Moses Westchester, John, Samuel, Benjamin; Mrs. Samuel inch, and Mrs. Samuel Firman. In the distribution the estate of their mother, then Susanna Bates, eb. 1, 1674, besides the above names, appeared also ıat of Thomas Lyon, who probably had married one f her daughters.

Robert Husted was one of the company who re- eived land in October, 1642. He had come from Iount Wollaston, now Braintree, Mass. He is prob- bly the father of that Robert Hustis who, according ɔ Bolton's Westchester, went from Fairfield to West- hester in 1654. His will, dated July 8, 1652, makes ɜquests to his son Angel of all his lands in Green- vich, with housings; to his son Robert all his lands n Stamford, with cattle and housings; to his wife a naintenance and other bequests; and to his daughter Ann, ten pounds. In 1654 his widow, Elizabeth, by will makes bequests to her son Angel, of Greenwich; to Robert, of Stamford, and to her daughter Ann, the wife of Richard Hardy. In the will of Robert the name is Husted, and in that of the widow the name is written Hustis, and both are equally distinct, and that they refer to the same family is also as clear as the form of the name. The names of the children are also changed from Husted to Hustis, though in the second will the name is spelled both Hustes and Hustis.

Jeremy Jagger came with the first company from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of the colony. He received, in the first distribution of land, three acres.

John Jessup came with the first colony from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of the colony. He received, in the first distribution of lands, five acres. In 1664 he represented Westchester in the Connecticut Assembly. His name is spelled on our records, Gesseppe, Giseppe, Gesoppe, Gishop.

Richard Law came with the first settlers from Wethersfield, is on the second and third lists of the settlers, and received, at the first assignment of land, eleven acres. He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas and Frances Kilborn, of Wethersfield, who was born in 1612.

John Lum was here in 1642, and received a house-lot in the distribution of that date.

William Mayde (Mead) received, Dec. 7, 1641, five acres, house-lot, with woodland. The wife and son of William Mead died here in 1658.

John Miller received from the town, in October, 1642, five acres, house-lot, and marsh and upland, as the other men. This name is on Chapin's list of the Wethersfield colony, where he was in 1630. He died soon after coming to Stamford, in 1642, leaving three sons.

Matthew Mitchell came with the settlers from Wethersfield. His name stands next, on the first list of the colony, to the minister's, and heads both the next two lists. He paid about three times as much as any other of the settlers towards the survey of the land, and received twenty-eight acres in the first distribution of the land.

Thomas Morehouse is on the list of those who shared in the first distribution of land, and received seven acres. In 1649 he was here, as appears from his testimony in court. Savage makes him in Fairfield in 1653. His will and inventory are on the Fairfield records, Sept. 11, 1658. His wife Isabel is mentioned in the will, and children, Hannah, Samuel, and Thomas, the last of whom was to be paid his portion in four years; Mary in five years; and so each child one year later; and if any of them die before seventeen, their part to be divided, if unmarried.

William Newman hath assigned to him by the town, in October, 1642, two acres marsh and three acres woodland. In 1659 complaints having been made to the court in New Haven respecting the "sizes of shoes," the court, hearing that William Newman had an instrument which he had brought from England, which "was thought to be right to determine this question, did order that the said instrument should be procured and sent to New Haven, to be made a 'Standard,' which shall be the rule between buyer and seller, to which it is required that all sizes be conformed." Mr. Newman was evidently a man of note in the young colony, and once represented the town in the General Court.

John Northend came with the colony from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of the settlers. He received in the first distribution of the land eight acres.

John Ogden received, Dec. 7, 1641, ten acres, house-lot, with woodland, like the first company. In 1642 he agreed with Governor Kieft, of New York, to build a stone church for twenty-five hundred guilders. In 1644 he was a patentee of Hempstead L. I.

Richard Ogden, brother of the above, went to Fairfield, where he became a man of note.

—— Pierson received, in the distribution of November, 1642, a house-lot. The Christian name is obliterated, but that of Henry is given to the Pearson who emigrated with Mr. Denton in 1644. A Jacob Pearson (Pierson) was landholder in 1661.

Thomas Pop received, Dec. 7, 1641, a house-lot, with woodland, the same as the first company. This name should probably be Pope, and he probably went soon after the colony settled here over to Hempstead.

James Pyne received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, house-lot, and woodland, the same as the first company. He went to Hempstead, L. I., and was accepted as freeman from that town of the Connecticut colony in 1664.

Thurston Raynor came with the first company from Wethersfield. His name on each of the first three lists stands next to Matthew Mitchell. In the first distribution of lands he received twenty acres. He sold his lot in Wethersfield, which contained three hundred and thirty acres, to Richard Treat. On reaching Stamford he was appointed to the New Haven court with senatorial honors. This distinction places him among the foremost of our pioneers. From Stamford he went to Southampton, L. I., where he was held in honor.

John Renoulds appears on the list of the settlers of Wethersfield, from which place he probably came with the first settlers of Stamford. His name is on the second and third lists of the colonists. He received, in the first allotment of land, eleven acres.

John Rockwell received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, home-lot, and woodland, as the first company.

Daniel Scofield received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, home-lot, and woodland, as the first company. He died in 1671. His children were Daniel, John, Richard, Joseph, Sarah, the wife of John Pettit, and Mary. His widow Mary became the third wife of Miles Merwin. The son Joseph suffered so much from hardships in King Philip's war as to lose his life in 1676, giving his estate to his brothers and sisters. His will, dated Sept. 4, 1664, gives to his wife one-third the estate, with use of the house for her lifetime; to his daughter Sarah, five pounds; and to her two children, five pounds; and to the other four children, Daniel, John, Joseph, and Mercy, the rest of the estate. His wife and two of the sons, Daniel and John, were made executors.

John Seaman came with the first company fi Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first tl lists of the colony, and he received in the first dis bution of land three acres.

Simon Seiring appears on the records, in 1642 landholder, where his name is spelled Cymon. H reported on the list of those who went, in 1644, v Mr. Denton to Hempstead, L. I.

Samuel Sherman came with the first settlers fi Wethersfield. His name appears on each of the three lists of the new colony, and he received, in first distribution of land, ten acres. He was assist in the New Haven court in 1662, and his reappo ment for the next two years. He was also sent to General Court of Connecticut, after the union the town colonies, in 1665. In his sale of ho and land, in 1654, he is said to be "now living Stratford." In leaving Stamford he probably t every member of his family, as the name does subsequently occur on our records. The descenda of this pioneer of Stamford have numbered m. very eminent men, among whom are John Sherm the present Secretary of the Treasury, and Gen. W T. Sherman.

Vincent Simkins came with the first company fi Wethersfield.

George Slauson came probably from Sandwi Mass., with Thomas Armitage, in 1642. He appe in our account of the first church of the town as a le ing member, and he was also evidently a man of not civil life. I suppose him to have been the represe tive from the town in 1670. He had three children appears from his will, dated Dec. 16, 1694,—Elea John, and a daughter who married John Gould. died Feb. 17, 1695. His son John married, in 16 Sarah Tuttle, of New Haven, and had a son J born in 1664, and Jonathan in 1667. The wife this John was killed Nov. 17, 1676, by her brot Benjamin Tuttle, who was executed for it the foll ing June. He then married a second wife, Elizab Benedict, and had a daughter Mary and a son Thon He died in 1706. He was doubtless the ancesto the present Slason families in town.

Thomas Slawson in November or December, 16 received a house-lot, and three acres "in the fiel besides. Savage says he did not stay long in St ford.

Henry Smith came with the first company fr Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first th lists of the new colony, and in the first distribut of land he received three acres. Whence he came Wethersfield is not known. He was promoted freeman in 1670, and died in 1687. He had a John, mentioned in his will, and a daughter Rebec who married, July 2, 1672, Edward Wilkinson, Milford, and a daughter Hannah, who married Lawrence.

John Smith, Sr., received, Dec. 7, 1641, two ac house-lot, and woodland, the same as the first co ny. He and his son John went to Hempstead, L. I.

hn Smith, Jr., received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, use-lot, and woodland, as the first company. In 75, John, Jr., in a deposition, gives his age at sixty ars, and says that while in Stamford he was called ck John Smith, for distinction.

John Stevens received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, use-lot, and a woodland, as the first company. The scendants of this pioneer have been quite numerous.

Samuel Swain, in September, 1642, is engaged to ild at the common charge of the townsmen a mill, appears from a record of that date, and his name curs later in the records.

James Swead received a house-lot in the distribu-n of November, 1642.

John Towne received in the distribution of Novemr, 1642, a house-lot.

Capt. John Underhill had assigned to him in Octor, 1642, house-lot, eight acres, and woodland, as e others. He was made a freeman in Boston in 31.

Andrew Ward.—This name appears in the first cord of the "Corte holden at Newtown, 26th April, 36." He was one of the five worthies, who thus d in their hands the destinies of the new settle-ent at Newtown (Hartford), and so those of the ate. The record states that he had been dismissed om the church of Watertown, Mass., on the 28th May last, and he with his associates are authorized renew the covenant. He continued a member of e court until September, 1639. At the session held ctober, 1639, he is nominated by the court to be pre-nted for the vote of the county for magistrates in pril next. In 1637 he is reported in the records of e General Court as collector of Wethersfield, and doubtless came to Stamford with the Wethersfield ttlers. His name is on each of the first three lists the pioneers, and during his life here he was a ominent man. He was chosen magistrate for the olony in 1646 to represent it in the higher branch the New Haven court. His will, still found on cord in Fairfield, bears date June 8, 1659, and akes bequests to his wife Esther, son John, daughter arah, daughter Abigail, and his two youngest sons, ndrew and Samuel. It is stated also that his other ildren had received their portions. From this pioeer of the town have descended eminent names.
Henry Ward Beecher gets his middle name from him, nd his daughter Mary was grandmother of Vice-resident Aaron Burr.

Jonas Weed came to Watertown in 1631, where he as made freeman, and thence to Stamford in 1642.
He died here in 1676. His will, on record at Faireld, dated Nov. 26, 1672, makes his legatees his wife Mary, and his children John, Daniel, and Jonas;
Mary, wife of George Abbott; Dorcus, wife of James Wright; Samuel; John Rockwell for Elizabeth; arah; and Hannah, wife of Benjamin Hoyt. His dministrators were his wife Mary, and his sons Daniel and John. The widow died in 1690. His son John married Joanna, daughter of Richard "Westcoat." The son Jonas married, Nov. 6, 1670, Bethia, daughter of John Holly, and to him the father gave, in 1671, the house where he was then living. The descendants of this Jonas Weed have been very numerous here, and they have, also, always been among our prominent citizens.

Thomas Weeks went from Wethersfield to Hadley and returned to Wethersfield, from which place he probably came with the first company of settlers to Stamford. His name is on the second and third lists of the colonists, and he received, in the first distribution of land, six acres.

John Whitmore came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on the second and third lists of the colonists, and he received, in the first distribution of land, ten acres.

Jonas Wood, Sr., came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first three lists of the colonists, and he received, in the first distribution of land, eight acres. He was among the settlers of Springfield in 1636, from which place he went to Wethersfield. In 1648 he brings an action against Thomas Newton, of Fairfield, when he is reported as from Long Island. In 1654 he was in Southampton, L. I., as appears from an action against him in the court of magistrates at New Haven. In that action he is called Hallifax Jonas by Richard Mills, of Stamford, in his testimony. In 1658, Jonas Wood (O) and Jonas Wood (H), both of Huntington, L. I., agents for the inhabitants of the same, desire to join with this colony (New Haven). In May, 1662, on the petition of Huntington, L. I., he is appointed by the General Court in Hartford the first townsman and custom-master. He became on Long Island a man of some prominence. His name heads the list of those to whom the town of Huntington was granted in 1666.

Jonas Wood, Jr., came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on the second and third lists of the colonists. He received, in the first distribution of land, seven acres.

Edmund Wood came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first three lists of the colonists. He received, in the first distribution of land, seven acres.

Jeremiah Wood came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first three lists of the new colony.

Francis Yates is on Chapin's list of the residents of Wethersfield, between 1634 and 1673. He went to Stamford, where he stayed until 1644, when he removed with Mr. Denton to Hempstead, L. I.

The healthful climate and fertility of the soil soon attracted other settlers, and not much time elapsed ere the little colony was rapidly being augmented by an enterprising class of people. The following is a list of those who came in between the years 1643 and the breaking out of the Revolution: Joseph Arnold, Richard Ayres, Sr., Samuel Baker, John Banks, John Beachgood, John Beldin, Matthew Bellamy, Samuel Blackley, Joseph Blackley, Josiah Blackman, William Blanchard, Israel Boardman, Richard Booloch, Ephraim Bostwick, Nathaniel Borden, Richard Bouton, Daniel Briggs, Samuel Brooker, Samuel Bryan, Richard Chester, Daniel Chichester, William Clements, John Cluggstone, John Clock, Thomas Corey, Cary Conklin, James Crawford, Nathaniel Cross, Cornelius Curtiss, Francis Dan, Richard (Daniels) Daniel, John Davis, Rev. GRIST-MILL.

One of the greatest inconveniences usually met the early settlers of any section is the want of mi for grinding grain. The pioneers of Stamford go this matter their early attention, for as early as Se tember, 1641, an order was passed for the erection a mill at a common charge. It was promptly erect and "set agoing," but during the same year was se to private parties.

THE PERFIDY OF THE DUTCH TRADERS.—THE DERHILL MASSACRE.

The following concise statement of an affair wh at one time wore a threatening aspect, endanger the very existence of the community, is from the p of the late Rev. E. B. Huntington:

"Some of the Dutch traders had stripped an dian, who had been tempted by them to drink much, of a valuable dress of beaver skins. On covering from his drunken fit, the insulted red m revenged himself by killing two Dutchmen, and f to feast his memory with the great revenge amon distant tribe. He could not be found. The Du governor at New Amsterdam, Kieft, sought an opp tunity to punish the Indians for the revengeful de The next winter the Mohawks fell upon two of Hudson River tribes, and after killing their warri scattered the remnant in utter destitution to find f and shelter from the piercing cold among the Du on the South. The time for a civilized revenge h now come; and at the instigation of Kieft, with sanction of his counselors, more than a hundred those helpless fugitives from their savage foe w sent from their quiet sleep on earth to the spirit wo of their race by a blow from the Dutch soldiers sudden that they could not even beg for life.

"Then Indian blood was stirred. Savage vengea awoke. With almost electric despatch Indian war pledged to Indian warrior, and clan to clan, the di vengeance on their foe. 'More than fifteen hund warriors,' according to De Forest, rallied from confederacy of eleven clans to constitute this ave ing army. 'A fierce war blazed wherever a Du settlement was to be found; on Long Island and Manhattan, along the Connecticut and along Hudson.' From Manhattan to Stamford the c was desolated, Dutch and English alike atonin the inexorable spirit of Indian revenge for the i ries that had been heaped upon the Indian's race.

"Within hearing distance of the Stamford se ment* were three Dutch settlers who had excited wrath of the restless and brave Mayano. He n met them, armed as they were, with his bow arrows, and brought two of them to the ground. third only saved himself by a well-directed b which laid the fearless savage at his feet; and daring of the fallen sachem had made the exte nation of his tribe a necessity to the safety of whites. A company of soldiers were immediately dispatched to capture them. At Greenwich they were directed by Capt. Patrick to the rendezvous of the maddened Indians, but on reaching it not a soul could be found. Proceeding on into the Stamford settlement they find Patrick with his own former comrade in arms, our Capt. John Underhill. They immediately suspect him of having given the Indians notice of their approach. They taunt him with the treachery.

"He who had led his trusty men so successfully against the bravest of the New England savages could not brook such insolence from Dutchmen, even though in arms. He contemptuously spat in the face of their leader and turned to walk away. A pistol-ball brought him to the ground in death, and the Dutchmen returned to the pursuit of their savage foe.

"Underhill, who had been no friend to the Dutch settlers, now sympathized with their mortal hatred of the Indian enemy. He had already signalized his bravery in the Pequod war. His was already a name of terror to Indians far and near; and to his presence our Stamford colony had doubtless owed their comparative exemption thus far from savage invasions. It was no time for him to rest inactive when his friends and neighbors were exposed every hour to some sudden and relentless massacre. He offered his services to the Dutch Governor, and was at once sent into the field. The troublesome Indians about Stamford were the first to feel his power. With one hundred and thirty men he started from New Amsterdam on a cold and cloudy morning in the February of 1644. They were able to land at Greenwich Point that evening in a furious storm. With the early dawn of the next morning the resolute captain was again on the march. All day did the sturdy Dutch soldiers, under their valiant leader, plod their toilsome way through the snow until, at eight in the evening, they had reached the vicinity of the hostile camp. Soon the clouds gave way, and a clear, bright moon, flashing from the snowy crystals, lighted their way to their horrid work. By a little after ten they filed round the southern spur of a ridge stretching towards the northwest, and the village, a triple range of wigwams, lay reposing before them, awaiting their attack. With marvelous celerity the captain circles the doomed village with his trusty men. Now spring upon them, as hounds unleashed upon their prey, the stalwart forms of more than a hundred warriors, all prepared for their death grapple with the foe. But neither their sudden rush, nor their wild war-cry, could intimidate their assailants. Coolly they are received, a tenth of them captured, and the rest impetuously hurled back. For a whole hour the unrelenting struggle went on. A hundred and thirty men wrestled in mortal strife with more than five hundred of the enemy, and when the doomed Indians were at length driven back within their lines of defense, one hundred and eighty of their fallen comrades were already still and stiffening in the blood-stained snow. Nor would they yet raise the flag of truce or cry for quarter. Each undaunted spirit, left beneath such shelter as his own or his neighbor's wigwam could give, continued the fight. This was the opportunity for which Underhill was prepared. He called for fire. Torches lighted the wigwams. Indian men, women, and children, issuing from their burning homes, were driven back to perish in the flames. Before the morning dawned more than five hundred who, the night before, had gone to their usual rest, were now sleeping their last sleep with the unconscious dead.

"By noon of the next day the victors had already reached Stamford on their way home, having in this signal chastisement of the Indians of this neighborhood secured the perpetual peace of the English settlements."

INDIAN DEEDS, ETC.—THE STAMFORD PATENT, 1685.

The following is a copy of the Indian deed which, in consideration of "twelve coats, twelve bowes, twelve hatchets, twelve glasses, twelve knives, four kettles, and four fathom of white wampum," was conveyed, July 1, 1640, to Capt. Nathaniel Turner for the New Haven jurisdiction the lands at Stamford:

AGREEMENT WITH PONUS AND ONAX, 1655.

"Our agreement made with Ponus, Sagamore of Toquamske and with Onax his eldest son: Altho' there was an agreement made before with the said Indians and Capt. Turner and the purchase paid for, yet the things not being clear, and being very unsatisfied, we came to another agreement with Onax and Ponus for their land from the town plot of Stamford north about 16 miles and there we marked a white oak tree with S. T. and going toward the Mill River side we marked another white oak tree with S. T. and from that tree west we were to run four miles, and from the first marked tree to run four miles eastward, and from this east and west line we are to have further to the north for our cattle to feed, full two miles further, the full breadth—only the said Indians reserve for themselves liberty of their planting ground: and the above said Indians, Ponus and Onax, with all other Indians that be concerned in it have surrendered all the said land to the town of Stamford, as their proper right, forever, and the aforesaid Indians have set their hands as witnessing the truth hereof, and for and in consideration hereof, the said town of Stamford is to give the said Indians 4 coats, which the Indians did accept of for full satisfaction for the aforesaid lands, altho' it was paid before, hereby Ponus' posterity is cut off from making any claim or having any right to any part of the aforesaid land, and do hereby surrender and make over, for us or any of ours forever, unto the Englishmen of the town of Stamford, and their posterity forever, the land as it is butted and bounded the bounds above mentioned. The said Ponus and Onax his son having this day received of Richard Law 4 coats acknowledging themselves fully satisfied for the aforesaid land.—Witness the said Indians the day and date hereof, Stamford, August 15, 1655.

THE SOLDIERY OF STAMFORD—THE HEROES OF FOUR WARS.

The French and Indian Wars—List of Soldiers—Stamford in the Revolution—List of Revolutionary Soldiers—List of Stamford Loyalists—War of 1812—List of Volunteers.

THE record of Stamford's soldiery from the period of the French and Indian wars, in the second quarter of the eighteenth century, through the various conflicts which our country has passed, to the close of the great Rebellion, 1861–65, is one in which the citizens of this old town may justly feel a patriotic pride.

THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WARS.

From the town records of this period we find that Stamford was alive to the emergency, and in 1757 it was voted that if the "Lord of London shall send regulars into this town, the town will bear the charge of accommodating them with what shall be necessary for them."

In December, 1758, it was voted that Col. Hoyt, Mr. Abraham Davenport, and Ensign Holly be appointed a committee to supply His Majesty's regular

Hist. of Stamford, Conn., Rev. E. B. Huntington, 1868

£472 and 17s., a large estate for those days. It is on record at Fairfield. His executor seems to have been Robert Usher, as receipts to him are on record from two of his sons, Jeremy and John, for their full portions of their father's estate. He died in 1658. An account of his sympathy with those who were disaffected towards the New Haven colony will appear in its appropriate place.

JESSUP, JOHN came with the first colony from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of the colony. He received, in the first distribution of lands, five acres. In 1664 he represented Westchester in the Connecticut Assembly. His name is spelled on our records, Gesseppe, Giseppe, Gesoppe, Gishop. John Jessup was in Hartford, 1637, Wethersfield, before 1640, Stamford, 1641, Long Island about 1654, representative from Westchester, 1664, and back on the Island again, 1673. This name is thought to have come from Yorkshire, England. (See Gen. Reg., Vol. X., page 358.)

LAW, RICHARD, came with the first settlers from Wethersfield, is on the second and third lists of the settlers, and received, at the first assignment of land, eleven acres. He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas and Frances Kilborn, of Wethersfield, who was born in 1612. Mr. Law is not on the Wethersfield records as a landholder, like the most of the settlers who came with him. But he is reported in the colonial records, in 1638, when he is appointed with George Huberd, from Wethersfield, to trade in beavers with the Indians, on the Connecticut river. No other Wethersfield man was to do so, under penalty of five shillings "per pounde, to be paide pr. evry pounde they soe trade." He is also reported in the case of the estate of John Oldham, as indebted to it £6 4s. 11d. A further account will be given of him in the chapter devoted to biography.

LUM, JOHN, was here in 1642, and received a houselot in the distribution of that date.

1768, and had Sarah, b. '70; Esther. '71; Lewis, '73; Noyse, 1777.

SKELDING, Thomas, 1701. married Rebecca Austin and their son, Thomas, was b. in '03

ST. JOHN, David, blacksmith, 1758, is allowed by vote of the town to settle at Woodpecker Ridge.

James, and Hanna Hait, m. Sept. 19, 1753, and had a large family.

SELLECK.—This family, natives of Wales, as the tradition is, were in Boston as early as 1643. Two of the sons of David and Susanna Selleck of Boston,—Jonathan, born, May 20, '41, the very year of our settlement, and John, b. April 21, '43, came to Stamford about the year '60. Jonathan had house and land recorded to him in '63.

Jonathan, married Abigail, daughter of Richard Law, and had his first child, Jonathan, born here, July, 11, 1664. He had two other sons, David, b. Jan. 21, '66, and John, who graduated at Harvard, in '90. These sons all died, so Savage tells, us before the father's death, which is recorded as taking place, Jan. 10. 1712–13. This Jonathan was a prominent man, and at his death he bequeathed his Latin, Greek and Hebrew books to the Rev. Mr. Davenport.

JOHN, the other pioneer of this name, made freeman, 1669; married Sarah Law, a sister of his brother Jonathan's wife and had children, Sarah, b. August 22, 1669; David, b. Dec. 27, 1672; Nathaniel, b. April 7, '78; John, b. June 7, '81; Susanna, b. Feb. 2, '83, and Joanna, b. May 31, '86. This John was a wealthy ship-owner and captain. Under date, Feb. 25, '68–9, the town granted Mr. John Selleck a piece of waste land by the landing place to set a dwelling-house, or ware-house. He was taken prisoner on a voyage to England, in May, '89, by the French, and never returned to Stamford. His estate was settled here in 1700, and was very large. A branch of this family went just after our revolutionary war to Oyster Bay, on Long Island, where, down to the present day there are found worthy representatives of the name. Abigail, wife of Maj. Selleck, d. Dec. 20, '11.

STONE, John, in 1701, sells to Zach. Roberts, sen. of Bedford, the land and house he bought of Samuel Dean. He was one of the townsmen for a number of years.

STUART, Charles, was here in 1763.

STUDWELL, Joseph, was here in 1667. Thomas was here in March, '67–8, and binds himself to pay for, or return a catalogue of goods, among which were hatters tools. As security, he mortgaged three acres of meadow in the East field.

STURGES, Christopher, admitted inhabitant by vote in town meeting, 1718, and had a son, Jabez, b. here, '21. For several years after '23, he is enrolled among the town officials. His wife, Mary, d. Feb. 17, '46–7.

STURDIVANT, Wm. In 1682, Nicholas Webster, receives from the townsmen a piece of land in the rear of his lot, which had been layed out to this Wm. Sturdivant.

TALMADGE, Thomas, was here in 1709, and by vote admitted an inhabitant. He married Mary Weed, and had a daughter Hannah. He had married again in '21, when his son James was born.

THOMPSON, John, "gunsmith and resident in Stamford," sells house and lands to Jonathan Selleck, May 7, 1667. He was here, also, in '69 and in '70—sold land to Richard Webb.

TRYHERN, (Tryon) Edward, appears on the land record as early as 1684. One of his daughters married John Webster. Sarah, his wife, died here, Sept. 2, 1702, and his death occurred May 14, '74; down to which date his name is found quite frequently in the records.

THORP, Charles, was living here in 1733, when his son Edward was born.

TODD, John, jr. was an inhabitant in 1774.

TURNEY, Joseph, had lands laid out to him in 1686 on the WHITING, Joseph, is in business here, 1724, and same year had recorded the birth and death of a daughter, Sarah. His wife Abigail died in '33, and he married Hannah Beachgood, Jan. 25, '33–4.

WHITE, James came from Huntington, L. I. in 1717. In company with Michael Waring and Thomas Brush, he purchases of John Holly a tract of 246 acres, bounded by the New York State line on the north, by hills east of Great Meadow on the east, by Stony Brook on the north, and Miannus river on the west. He married Elizabeth Waring, Feb. 30, 1720, and had children, Timothy, Sarah, Jacob, Richard, Uriah and James. The family are still in possession of a part of the first purchase made by James, the pioneer, on Long Ridge.

WIATT, Nathaniel and Mary, had son Henry, born in 1726. He was among the town officials in 1737.

WHEATON, Benjamin and his wife Ruth had son Samuel, born here in 1750–1. How long the family had been here does not appear. The marriage of Jemima Wheaton to Reuben Holly is recorded in 1748–9. Samuel Wheaton and Mary Skelding were married in 1776, and had here, Mary, Samuel S., John S. and Eliza Ann. The Wheatons of New England, are said to be descended from an immigrant from Swansea, Wales, who settled in Rehoboth, Mass.

WILLSON, John, b. 1765, began the practice of medicine here, and was the father of a family of physicians. That his father's family were living here previous to his birth, our records do not show; though his descendants suppose that they were.

WILMOT, Zophar and Sarah Webb, married Dec. 29, 1760, and had children; John, b. July 9, 1762; Enos, April 18, 1766: and James, Nov. 17, 1769.

WILMOT, Joseph and Hannah, had a son Isaac, b. Nov. 20, 1775.

WILLIAMSON, John, married Mercy Hoyt, Sept. 17, 1746, and had children, Joanna, b. May 5, 1748; and Mary, Sept. 8, 1750.

fies, proposed to give the profits of the land "to helpe mainetaine such as shall bee Imployed in teaching children to Reade."

In May, 1674, the Connecticut court desire Mr. Jones "to take the paynes to dispence the word of God to the people of Rye once a fortnight on the Lord's day till the Court, October next, and then this court will take further order concerning them and for Mr. Jones satisfaction." Mr. Jones remained in Huntington, preaching and laboring with general acceptance down to his death. He is not known to have left children.

Law, Richard, was perhaps the first civilian among the Stamford settlers, the acknowledged legal adviser of the community for more than a quarter of a century. His scholarly and clerical abilities gave him great advantage among the settlers. Though not one of the first twenty to inaugurate the settlement, he was at Wethersfield, arranging to join the colony at the opening of their second season in their new home. He probably took with him from Wethersfield, as his gifted help-meet, Margaret, the oldest daughter of Francis Kilborn; and their home, though not the most expensive, was to be one of the most honored of the colony. Their family, though not to remain through other generations to honor the town they were so helpful in founding, was to furnish names to give a new luster to the state whose highest civil and judicial seats they were to fill. From the first he seems to have been the scribe of the colony. His pen was equally ready for the records of the town, the church, and the courts. He was the only town clerk appointed for about twenty-four years. He was the ready lawyer, in the age preceding, technically that profession among us. He was oftener a deputy in the general court at New Haven than any other of the settlers, and apparently more in demand when there. As constable, he was noted for a fearless and tireless efficiency. He seemed to have exercised a sort of personal discretion in regard to prosecutions, which was not always most acceptable to parties who would dictate his official duty. John Mead once had good proof of his fidelity, never to be bribed

He had sought the help of the constable to recover damages from a neighbor for some harm done by him. The sharp-eyed official saw at a glance that there was no ground for the attachment, and refused the process. Mead scolded and threatened, but to no purpose. He then goes into court with an action against him for neglecting his official duty. But the angry plaintiff soon finds himself a sorry defendant, with but a miserable advocate. Law had him put under trial for scandalizing the church, for slanders and defamatory reports and for disturbing the peace of the church and the town. To all which nothing in extenuation could be said, and the court exculpating their officer, sentenced Mr. Mead to make full acknowledgement at Stamford, to the satisfaction of the church and Mr. Law, to pay Mr. Law ten pounds for his expense in the trial, to pay ten pounds more for disturbing the jurisdiction, and then that he and his brother or some other acceptable man, be bound over for his good behaviour. After the sentence Mr. Mead made the fullest confession and retraction, and Mr. Law was left thenceforward to prosecute his official business unhindered.

Mr. Law had married in Wethersfield, Margaret Kilbourn, by whom he had three children; Jonathan, b. 1636–7; Abigail, who married, May 11, 1665, Jonathan Selleck of Stamford; and Sarah, who married, Oct. 28, 1669, John Selleck, also of Stamford. The son Jonathan, married June 1, 1664, Sarah Clark, daughter of Dea. George Clark of Milford, and removed to Milford, where he was a man of note. His son, Jonathan, b. Aug. 6, 1674, graduated at Harvard College, 1695; was chief-justice of Connecticut for sixteen years and governor of the state from 1741 to 1750.

Mr. Law probably died in Stamford, though there is no record to show it. His will, the last document in which his name appears, bears date March 12, 1686–7. His widow had probably died before this date as no mention is made of her in the will.

There is a paper, entered on the town records in 1686, bearing date Feb. 15, 1680, which speaks of the misunderstanding under which he had given his son, Law, his land. It seems that the son removed from Stamford to Milford, and this removal was a source of dissatisfaction to the father. Still adhering to the former grant to his son, he now insists on dividing the lands which had come into his hands since that former gift, to his daughters, the two Mrs. Selleck, so that they may each have a half as much as he; for which he says "the word of God is clear, and good reason for it, and why any Christian man that loveth righteousness and equity should be against this, I see not."

MITCHELL, REV. JONATHAN, was son, not of Jonathan, as Sprague's Annals of the American Pulpit has it, but of Matthew Mitchell, the wealthiest and otherwise most noted of the lay settlers of Stamford. He was born, so Savage supposes, at Halifax, Yorkshire, Eng., and in the year 1624, according to Mather. He came with his father, in the James, from Bristol, in 1635, to Cambridge, Mass., and thence to Concord and Springfield, and in 1640 to Stamford. He remained here probably until he entered Harvard College, where he graduated, A. B., in 1647. He was ordained, Aug. 21, 1650, at Cambridge, where he labored in the ministry for eighteen years.

He was one of the early New England ministers whom the quaint Mather has immortalized in his Magnalia. He styles him the "Ecclesiastes;" "a Pastor of the Church, and a glory of the College in Cambridge, New England." In his epistle dedicatory, he calls him "blessed Mr. Mitchell," and in his sketch of the life and labors of Mr. Mitchell, he makes him the "excellent," the famous pastor" and "this best of preachers in our new English nation." The opening of his biographical sketch is worthy of a place here, as illustrating the times to which our subject belonged, and also, as furnishing us an interesting clue to his character and that of his family:—

"If it were counted an honor to the town of Halifax in Yorkshire that the famous John de Sacro Bozco, author of the well known treatise "De Sphoera," was born there; this town was

OFFICIAL LISTS.

1. REPRESENTATIVES AND SENATORS FROM STAMFORD.

The following list contains all the names which can now be recovered of the representatives and senators of Stamford in the state legislature. Down to 1665 they represented the town in the general court of New Haven; afterwards in the general court or legislature of the colony and state of Connecticut. The omission of names between 1644 and 1653 was occasioned by the loss of the New Haven colony records of that period, a loss probably not to be supplied. There will also be found occasional omissions of the regular meeting of the legislature, occasioned by the fact that no representatives appeared from the town at those meetings. The omission for October 1687, the two sessions of 1688 and for April 1889, is due to the assumption of the government by Sir Edmund Andross for that period. Our list contains also the representatives for Darien from the incorporation of that town in 1820. The thanks of the author are due to the kindness of J. Hammond Trumbull, for his cheerful aid in completing the catalogue.

2. TOWNSMEN OR SELECTMEN OF STAMFORD.

The following catalogue of "townsmen," or Selectmen, is as complete as the town records enabled the author to make it. From 1642 to 1666 there are no records to show who were appointed; and in 1673 the records which are otherwise full, make no mention of the choice of townsmen. The other years for which there is no record of a choice, are, 1681, 2 & 3, 1685 and 1699. Instead of copying the list, as chosen, I have simply indicated the year when each one was first chosen, and the number of years he served.

1640—Rev. Richard Denton, 1
" Matthew Mitchel, 2
" Andrew Ward, 2
" Thurston Raynor, 2
" Richard Crabb, 2
1641—John Whitmore, 1
" Richard Law, 6
The most of the above served probably through the next twenty years, of which there is no record.
1666—Lieut. Francis Bell, sen., 5
" John Holly, 4
" William Newman, 2
" Richard Hardy, 3
" Joseph Garnsey, 1
" Richard Ambler, 2

HISTORY

MIDDLESEX PARISH was the early name of this community, which was originally a part of Stamford. The name is preserved in one of its oldest highways, Middlesex Road, which probably was the first highroad connecting it with Stamford and New Canaan. Records show the first clearings to have been made by men from the New Haven and Wethersfield colonies and from Norwalk about 1641, but it was not until 1740, a hundred years later, that the Middlesex Society of the Town of Stamford erected a house of worship on what is now the site of the present Congregational Church. One of the first pastors was the Rev. Moses Mather, who died in 1806, after having served the parish for sixty-two years. He was a son of Richard Mather and related to the Rev. Cotton Mather and Dr. Increase Mather, one of the presidents of Harvard College.

Some of these early pioneers bore the names of Bates, Bell, Bishop, Ferris, Fitch, Holly, Holmes, Gorham, Hoyt, Morehouse, Raymond, Scofield, Seeley, Selleck, Slosson, Walmsley, Waterbury, Webb, Weed, and Williamson.

A few of the old houses still stand: the Bates Homestead (1749) on Raymond Street; the Mather Homestead (1778) on Brookside Road, then called Gracious Street; Wayside and the Lone Pine Cottage (about 1770) in Tokeneke; the Frank Fitch house, sometimes known as the Dutch Oven Tavern (1756); the Weed house (1749) in Nearwater Lane; the Gorham house (1789) on Ring's End Road; the Wardell house on the Post Road at Noroton Center (1756), and the House under the Hill (1750) on the Post Road.

On the west side of Five Mile River, near Tokeneke Creek, stood the original Williamson house, built in 1700, now part of a more modern structure. In the rocks near this house is a pothole used by the Indians and early settlers for grinding corn. Another of these potholes is on Butler's Island near by, and a third, well preserved, on Contentment Island, near the home of John Sherman Hoyt.

Travel up to that time was mostly overland by horseback and ox team, but because of detours along the shore to get around boggy ground, the settlers very early turned to the water for transportation, and both freight and passenger traffic was carried up and down the Sound by sloops. The nearest harbors to the Middlesex settlement were Five Mile River and Pear Tree Point Cove, where Good Wives' River meets the tide at Gorham's Pond. At Five Mile River oyster sloops took on their cargoes at Loadin' Rock, a huge boulder, part of which still remains a landmark on the western shore of the river.

Pear Tree Point Cove seems to have been preferred by the settlers of Middlesex Parish, probably because of a higher and drier road leading to it. The landing there was called Clock's Landing and later Ring's End. Clock was a German who came from the Palatinate. Ring's End was the name of a town in England from which some of the early colonists came. A tidewater dam was built at Ring's End very early in the eighteenth century and a grist mill erected. This soon became the community center; so Ring's End Landing shares honors with Middlesex Parish and the Five Mile River fishing-port as the location of the first settlements of the present town.

Sloops sailed in from the Sound up Good Wives' River to Ring's End Landing. Freight and passengers came here under sail from ports both east and west and from Long Island across the Sound. Produce of the settlers was shipped from this point to New York and Boston. At one time wharfs or stores were owned and operated here by Capt. Isaac Jones, Selleck Jones, Jesse Selleck, Epenetus Walmsley, Isaac Gray, Elisha Seeley, John Holmes, Nathaniel Clock, and Bell and Waterbury. Here the farmers brought their grain and made their purchases at stores. Here the grinding was done.

Blacksmiths had their forges here. The last to survive was Spellman's. Before him there was a forge kept by William Barker, and the foundations of his smithy may be seen to the left of the road near the Gorham house as one approaches Ring's End Bridge from the north.

One of the captains of the community was Samuel Selleck, a descendant of the original Jesse, who lived at the place later called Tide Ways, owned for many years by Mrs. Crimmins Jennings.

Many of these early settlers were buried in a plot of ground where Stony Brook empties into Good Wives' River. Several years ago, the town moved the old headstones to Spring Grove Cemetery on the Post Road, where they remain in a good state of preservation.

It was in 1708, according to the Stamford town records, that Richard Scofield and John Youngs were granted deeds to "Ye Streme at Good Wives' River so much as is needful for a grist mill," upon condition that they should build the mill within twelve months and grind "Ye Town's Graine for a Sixteenth Part, and to grind for Ye Town's people before strangers," provided also that Youngs build a highway from the upland hard road to his mill. Youngs failed to agree to the road as laid out by the town. In 1711, Richard Scofield was granted permission to set a house on this highway at the site of his town mill. In 1722 the town again laid out a road down to the mill. This highway was deeded to the town in 1725 by Joshua Scofield.

A year later a second mill was built at Ring's End Landing. These early mills appear in the Town's records as having been first owned by Richard Scofield, John Youngs, and John Clock, son-in-law to Scofield, and Deborah, his wife.

In 1777 one Daniel Gorham, mentioned later, shipped flour to the Commissary General of the American army. On January 10, 1778, H.M.S. Diligent, an armed brigantine, captured the American sloop Eagle, 30 tons, while she was ashore in Good Wives' River. She was loaded with wheat and flour belonging to the Continental Congress and being shipped to Norwalk, Connecticut. Leverett Stevens of Killingworth was commander of the sloop and Jonathan Brigdon of Charlestown, mate. Three persons aboard the sloop were taken prisoner and afterward exchanged in New York for British prisoners.

The British from Long Island, aided by Tory sympathizers in Norwalk and Middlesex, continually harassed this Connecticut shore. On July 21, 1781, the Rev. Moses Mather and a number of his congregation were captured by a band of Tories and British who surrounded the church after services had begun. These raiders had assembled at what is known as Tories' Hole in the Delafield Woods, near the shore of the Sound, and from that hiding-place made their way to the church and effected the capture. The prisoners were tied together and with horses, cattle, and other plunder were marched down to Scotch Cove (now called Scott's Cove), east of Ring's End Landing, off the present Tokeneke shore, and taken in boats to Long Island. Later they were removed to New York, and Dr. Mather, with others, was confined for a time in prison ships in New York harbor and later in the old Provost Jail, then standing in what now is City Hall Park, New York.

It is evident that many families in Middlesex remained loyal to the Crown government at the outbreak of the Revolution. These fled to Canada; a goodly number to Nova Scotia and their lands were forfeited. Their descendants are leaders in the Provincial and Dominion government today.

In 1816, the town of Stamford leased a piece of ground extending from Jesse Selleck's store to the causeway of Selleck Jones's house to John Bell and John Waterbury; part of the causeway still remains to this date. The house occupied by Mrs. Elizabeth Lounsbery stands on this site. A condition of this lease was that Bell and Waterbury agreed to reduce, within the year, the grade over the knoll north of the Gorham house and to use the fill for enlarging the wharf at the landing. Bell and Waterbury were merchants and conducted a general store for trading at the landing; Selleck Jones lived in what now is the Mrs. Junius Browne house near by. Up to as late as ten years ago an old grist mill stood at the dam by the bridge. The group of houses which stand near the bridge today, very old, probably contain many timbers from the original structures, which years ago were badly damaged by fire. One is the old toll house; another is called the Customs House; another, a general store.

The first mill erected was known as Scofield's mill, but on March 19, 1740, the property, including the dam site, house, mill, and two acres of land, was purchased by George Gorham from one Thomas Hill, then owner. It has been in the continued possession of the Gorham family ever since.

The original house bought by George Gorham has disappeared, but the pleasant, square white house now standing on the old site was built in 1789 by Daniel Gorham, son of George. Much of the material in the old house was used in constructing the new one, and members of the Gorham family live in it to this day. The grist mill and pond from then on were known as Gorham's Mill and Pond, and the road leading to it from King's Highway became known as Ring's End Road. What is now an easy grade leading down to the present bridge was called Clock's Hill.

Until 1825 there was no bridge across the dam. The only road from the upland to Long Neck followed a trail (now Good Wives' River Road) on the far side of Good Wives' River, which it crossed by a ford just below Glenbreekin Farm. On February 3, 1825, Joseph Gorham, grandson of George, leased to the town of Darien for ninety-nine years the right to cross the dam with a bridge, and a rough bridge was then thrown across this water. This lease was renewed by the heirs of Joseph Gorham for a period of ninety-nine years on February 4, 1924. The town agreed as before to maintain and keep the dam and flood gates in repair. The first wooden bridge which ran across the dam remained for three quarters of a century, when an iron bridge was built, and this was replaced in 1930 by the present artistic stone structure.

In the meantime, the residents of this growing community had become involved in a quarrel with Norwalk settlers over timber cutting on the town's eastern boundary line. It is said that a serious conflict was barely averted. This trouble was ended by Stamford's addressing a petition to the State Legislature. After several conferences the Legislature passed an act in May, 1820, defining the boundary lines of a new town and giving it a charter, all of the land for the new town being taken from Stamford.

This document was signed at New Haven and brought to Darien on horseback by Thaddeus Bell, great-grandfather of Clarence W. Bell, present chairman of the Board of Finance. Thaddeus Bell was descended in the fifth generation from Francis Bell, one of the leaders of the Wethersfield men who began the settlement of Stamford. He presided over the first town meeting of Darien and during his long life held many positions of trust and responsibility in the town.

Many residents wanted to call the new town Bell Town. The name Darien, which was chosen, is a heritage of the early shipping industry along its shore, and undoubtedly came from some sailor man's fancy.

Oyster, clam, and lobster fishermen were active off this shore up to the beginning of the present century. The Illustrated London News of October 29, 1859, reprinted an article from the Norwalk (Conn.) Gazette of September 27 telling of Darien skippers discovering a new and large bed of oysters between Eaton's Neck and Green's Reef Light where they dredged bivalves as big as a garden spade. A big fleet of fishermen was on the new ground and the excitement equaled that of the oyster war between Ring's End and New Haven fishermen on a similar discovery thirty years previous.

For nearly a century, the Middlesex and Darien countryside was dependent upon sail and later steamboats for its communication east and west. Men had not yet learned to construct drawbridges to let river traffic pass underneath and the many navigable streams through the Connecticut shore country, likewise ridges separating the rivers, were prohibitive barriers to railroad construction. At the height of this water-borne traffic, there were forty to forty-five steamboats in the Sound trade, when, in 1834, the Long Island Railroad started to build a line from Jamaica to Greenport, by way of a ferry across the Sound to Stonington, to reach Boston eventually. The new passenger, mail, and freight service advertised its time as follows:

4 hours—New York to Greenport
2 hours—crossing to Stonington
4 hours—Stonington to Boston

This line was successful at the start, but its prosperity was short-lived. It took so long to plan and build it that by the time it was completed, engineers had learned to bridge the Connecticut rivers, to run grades over its hills, and to complete a railroad the length of its shore. This new railroad was then known, and is still, as the New Haven. It was opened in 1848 and immediately took all the Boston business away from the Long Island route and cut deeply into the business of the Sound steamships.

Then the new town, Darien, which had succeeded Middlesex Parish, suddenly had two railroad stations, at Rowayton and Darien Center; later two others were added, Noroton and Glenbrook. Business activity shifted from the shore to the country back by the new railroad, and Ring's End Landing lost its trade. The wharves were deserted. The grist mill and smithy hung on, but gradually business moved toward Old King's Highway and the new railroad line. For a while the Town Hall was located at Noroton Center, and then it, too, was moved to a site on the Post Road at the corner of Mansfield Avenue, on the eastern end of the Town, where it still remains.

The Lounsbury hardware store is one of the oldest buildings in the town. Most of its timbers, possibly the whole building, formerly stood on the site of the tennis courts near the old Congregational Church at the corner of Brookside Road and Old King's Highway, whence it was moved over the railroad tracks, by horse and windlass, in 1886, to its present site by Senator Charles W. Lounsbury, who founded this sheet-metal and tinsmith business in Darien. He originally came from Baltimore, but had lived in New Canaan, and started his business in Darien after he was discharged from the army at the close of the Civil War.

This building was originally used for a church, later a parish house, and then a school. The church site was the original business center of the old Middlesex community.

Within the memory of the older residents of the present town there was a general store kept by a Mrs. Otis back of the old church on King's Highway, and across the present Post Road, on the northwest corner of Brookside Road, there still stands a house which in the early days was also a general store. Just north of this corner house, on Brookside, stood another, only recently torn down, where Luke Davis lived. He farmed in the summer and in the winter made boots, going to New York by sloop in the autumn to buy his leather and other supplies.

On the north side of the Post Road, just west of the Brookside corner, was a hat shop; the water of the creek was used to soak the felts. On the site of the Review office was a tannery. When the railroad was built, Old King's Highway crossed it at a grade, and later when the tracks were raised the Selectmen refused consent unless the road would build an underpass. They gave their consent only after the court threatened to arrest all of them if they persisted in holding up the completion of the railroad.

The first railroad station was a wooden building and stood farther east, nearer Old King's Highway, and the original Ivanhoe Lodge of Masons had its rooms in the second story.

In those very early days the Mansfield Avenue road and Middlesex road did not run straight north to New Canaan as now but near the Lapham property, this old road bore to the east down to the present West Norwalk–New Canaan road in the valley.

As the water-borne traffic affected the physical construction of the new town, so with the railroad when it was opened; and the coming of the motor car changed it again. Old King's Highway, twisting and turning up hill and down dale, which remained for years a rough route for oxen and horsedrawn vehicles, was cut here and there by detours which made for straighter lines, greater width, and easier grades, eventually evolving into what is now called the Boston Post Road. The center of activity shifted again. The new high school was located and built nearer the geographical center of the town. The new police headquarters building followed a few years later, bringing the court room with it nearer the center of the town.

Whatever further changes the future brings, the town has the satisfaction of knowing that it has a competent Town Plan and Zoning Commission at work, an able Highway Department, a Board of Education, and a new Park Commission, and that its business affairs are in the hands of a capable body of Selectmen and competent Board of Finance.

The history of Darien since its incorporation has been one of steady progress, in particular during the decades following the Civil War. Its growth as a place of residence has increased from year to year. It has always been a residential and farming community, no manufacturing interests of any importance ever having been located here.

Darien has excellent train service to New York and Boston, an emergency landing-field for airplanes close by, two deep-channel harbors on the Sound shore, and bus-line connections for all points; and the completion of the new Merritt Parkway will bring it within an hour's run, through a beautiful parkway system, of New York City.

Darien has become noted for the number of its clubs of various kinds, which have drawn many persons to it, and for the excellence of its school system, the purity of its water supply, its fine system of highways, and its splendid trees and charm of landscape. As a result persons of wealth and culture have been drawn to it in large numbers, have purchased land and erected homes, and have become a part of its fine community life.

LONG NECK

LONG NECK ties close into the early history of Ring's End Landing. A high promontory, bare of trees and stretching far out into the Sound, it was a landmark for early navigators. Difficult of access from the mainland, it contained few habitations. Forage was cut here by the settlers for their cattle and horses, and prior to 1708 they reached it by ferry across Good Wives' River at Ring's End or by a ford for the heavier ox-team loads a mile farther east, near Glenbreekin Farm. Originally Great Island and Hay Island, Salem Straits and Delafield Woods, were all a part of it in the first purchase from the Indians by two settlers, Ward and Law. They and the Sellecks appear to have been the first land-owners recorded, but on the very early warrants and deeds appear also the family names of Abraham, Isaac, and Leeds Pennoyer, Theodosia Gray, Gould Selleck Silliman, the Widow Gould, and David Raymond.

The first large subdivision of Long Neck within the last hundred years was made in 1836 when, by will, Samuel Selleck, widower, a descendant of Jesse, left a 50-acre tract of his original farm of 125 acres and near-by islands to his son George, and five daughters, Nancy Bell, Phebe, Theodosia, Angeline, and Caroline. This will, dated August 5, 1836, is a voluminous document, and in it Samuel not only divided the land among his children, but his house as well. Angeline, for example, was left, in addition to a piece of the land, "the south front room of the lower floor; the south back chamber; the south quarter of the halls and the lower and chamber floors; one-fourth of the garret, southeast; the west end of the shed; the south half of the cellar, with privilege to pass through any other parts of the house that is necessary, and to occupy the back house, and also the green to put out clothes one-fourth of the time; the privilege of both wells for the water, likewise the cisterns and tubs under spouts, one-fourth of the time. Also the south half of the outdoor kitchen; east half of the water house; south half of the carriage house; east half of the hen house; south half of the smoke house"!

The next transfer of ownership of this southern tract of Long Neck is dated 1865, when Harrison Olmsted, son of John Strickland Olmsted of Port Chester, purchased it from the heirs of Samuel Selleck. Olmsted held it seven years.

In 1872 Hugh W. Collender, who was known as a "forty-fiver" from Ireland and had been a participant in one of the several disturbances that swept that country, acquired the property from Olmsted. Previous to this purchase, Collender had owned the northern section of the original Selleck farm. He was evidently a man of ability and one of the first to begin the work of landscaping and beautifying Long Neck. He built several houses and married into an industrial family in New York who manufactured, among other things, pool and billiard tables, and he used considerable of their finely grained wood in the interior decoration of houses he built on the Point.

Up to Collender's purchase, the road to the end of Long Neck followed the west shore. Early residents erected their barns and out-houses along the shore, using the Sound for drainage and refuse. Collender began the first rearrangement of the roads, moving all buildings farther back and toward the center of the Point.

In 1890, John D. Crimmins, in the fourth subdivision of Long Neck, acquired from Collender his first holding of this original fifty-acre tract, and in the further development of the property, built more roads and a number of houses for members of his family.

Later, three brothers, James A., Edwin, and Dr. George A. Trowbridge, all Connecticut-born descendants of Thomas Trowbridge, who settled in New Haven in 1639, became interested in Long Neck. James A. and Edwin purchased from Collender land adjoining the Crimmins tract and joined him in the development of the Neck. One daughter of the late Hugh Collender is now living in Italy. Mrs. Luther Brown and Benjamin F. Collender, grandchildren, also survive, as does Mrs. William Collender, a daughter-in-law of the founder of the family, who lives for part of each year in Westport, Connecticut. The Crimminses and the Trowbridges intermarried and still own a large part of this original tract.

Anson Phelps Stokes acquired the tip of the Neck in 1902 and on it built Brick House, where he and his family lived for many years. John Sherman Hoyt, who developed Contentment Island to the east, married a daughter of Anson Phelps Stokes. During Stokes's ownership of Brick House, Andrew Carnegie occupied it several summers. Brick House is now owned and occupied by the Convent of the Sacred Heart.

Following the Stokes family came the Renshaws, Hafners, Bells, and others. Most of the present houses date from the Collender and Crimmins occupation, but there still stands the Selleck homestead known as Tideways, now owned by L. A. LaMott, the Gray cottage, and the home of Billy Woods, the pilot, who for years took steamboats and barges in and out Good Wives' River to Ring's End Landing.

Treelands, the present home of Col. Thomas Crimmins, was originally the gate-house of the residence Collender built, and the road to the big house led by Colonel Crimmins's present home, whence on a clear day the Empire State Building, the Chrysler Tower, and the Rockefeller Institute can be seen, thirty-three miles due west up the Sound.

GREAT ISLAND CORPORATION

THE land comprising the Great Island estate of William Ziegler, Jr., consisting of 180 acres, including Hay Island, is part of a grant dated March 24, 1645, from Piamiin, Sagamore of Roatan, to Andrew Ward and Richard Law of Stamford, of all the land lying between Five Mile River and Pine Brook. This grant is recorded in the Stamford Town Records, Book A, page 343.

Following this grant, the inhabitants of the town of Stamford claimed possession of the land and the right of occupation.

Long Neck, as Collender's Point was then called, remained undivided among the inhabitants of the town of Stamford, or the Common Proprietors, so called, until March, 1688, when it was apportioned to the seventy inhabitants of the town according to their ratable estate.

By 1762 two brothers by the name of Selleck had become the owners of the whole of Long Neck, but from this date the ownership began to spread among various people.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that during the Revolutionary War one tract was confiscated by the State of Connecticut, as its owner had been attainted for treason in adhering to the Crown of Great Britain. This tract was later sold by the State to one Abraham Davenport, a familiar name in the early annals of Stamford.

In the settlement of an estate in 1842, Great Island was appraised at seventy dollars an acre, only a fraction of its present assessed valuation.

About 1870 Hugh M. Collender began purchasing land on La Belle Pointe and shortly afterward this whole section became known as Collender's Point.

In 1882 Daniel M. Edgar became the owner of Great Island, and from his heirs it passed in 1902 into the hands of William Ziegler, father of William Ziegler, Jr. Mr. Ziegler proceeded to improve and develop his holdings. Rock for the construction of the main residence, walls, etc., was quarried from a ledge on the property. A deep well was drilled and a water-system installed which was later supplemented by the local water company's mains. At one time as many as 200 men as well as numerous teams were employed on these improvements.

William Ziegler, Jr., continued to improve the property after his father's death by adding, among other things, a large greenhouse, coach house, stables, and kennels and laying out a polo field. His activities have won for this owner many prizes in the International Flower Show, National Horse Show, and All-American Field Trials. His great pointer, Mary Montrose, is famous in the history of field trials as the first bitch to win the national championship on three different occasions, and the Great Island Polo Team has won many major matches.

PAGEANT OF DARIEN

On August 29 and 30 and September 1, 1913, the community put on a historical pageant, raising, through subscriptions, upward of $10,000 to meet expenses. Five hundred adults and children took part, portraying Indians, early settlers, English and Colonial soldiers, Tories, cowboys, clergymen, sailors, and the present type of residents and commuters.

A grassy expanse just east of the Gorham homestead, with the woods on one side and Good Wives' River on the other, formed a natural amphitheater for this elaborate production. It was witnessed by thousands of people who came from far and near and was given in nine episodes, six of which were as follows:

1. The Men of Wethersfield 1641
2. The War with Norwalk 1670
3. The Mill at the Landing 1744
4. The Raid on the Middlesex Church . . 1781
5. The Town of Darien 1820
6. The Coming of the Railroad 1849

Dear Mr. Witheridge,

First let me apolagize for not writing this letter earlier, I just plain forgot. My wife passed this along to me a month ago.

I'm very afraid that my father died when I was 10. He was a life resident of Syracuse, as I was. He had two sisters. I have not kept up with them, nor do I ever intend to do so. I was never very inquisitive about my acestory in regard to that side of the family, and I don't see where I would devolope a desire, at this time.

Please forgive me for not being very helpful, and accept my wish that you may be successful in her quest. Perhaps the records at the Syracuse City Hall, could help, as well as the Onondaga Historically Socity.

Sincerely
Robert Selleck

Dear Mr. Sellick,

I have just re-read your letter of last October in answer to my request about information on your ancestry. You will remember that I was interested in finding out if there is some connection between your father's family and that of my daughter-in-law, Virginia Sellick. Her earliest ancestor we have record of was Joseph Whiting Sellick, who was born in the Syracuse, N.Y., area, so we are trying to find out everything we can about Sellicks in that area.

When your letter arrived, I was involved in research on a number of other family lines, so I put your letter aside, as it didn't contain any specific family information. Now I want to get back to this line of search, and I am hoping you will answer the following questions for me:

1. What are the full names of your father's two sisters, and what are the last addresses you had for them?
2. Do you have the date and place of your father's death and his burial place?
3. If you have any other biographical facts about him — such as date and place of birth, marriage information, occupation, religion, and so on — I'd be very happy to receive them.

I can understand your desire not to delve into his background and family relationships, but if you would give me what you do know, I can carry on from there myself. Thank you very much for any information you can provide.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

Tom Selleck

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF TV'S FAVORITE PRIVATE EYE

His life isn't entirely a bed of Hawaiian orchids . . . after all, a grueling, six-day, eighty-hour workweek can really cramp a guy's style. But sexy Tom Selleck—with the devastating charm and easygoing humor that are his hallmarks both onscreen and off—has found his very special place in the tropical sun.

CBS

Breakfast is a quiet time for catching up on world events and sports news.

"The past few years have been like a big snowball. Once it starts rolling it's hard to stop. Maybe in a few years I'll get control of that snowball. Or maybe it won't be there."
—Tom Selleck, 1983

Two years ago, Tom Selleck's career did resemble a runaway snowball—defying gravity in an upward climb. His hit series, Magnum P.I., had reached the top of the Nielsen mountain. Fan mail was pouring in at the astonishing rate of ten thousand letters a week. Critics dubbed him the Clark Gable of the '80s for his sculpted body as well as his sharp mind. Behind the bushy eyebrows and the bottomless dimples, a new male talent was emerging.

But in a business littered with failure, Selleck's snowball threatened to run him over. With his face plastered all over the newsstands, he feared that overexposure would ruin his career. He complained of Magnum scripts that seemed to feature little more than his six-foot-four-inch, two-hundred-pound body, and of female fans who belly-crawled their way into his backyard. He hired round-the-clock bodyguards, only to fret that the public would turn its back on the hero it had created or that reporters would label him temperamental. Mostly, he worried that his fame would suddenly flicker out.

"If you get hot quick, you get unhot quicker," he once said. And Tom Selleck is determined not to be another flash in the pan.

Today, his snowball is still rolling, but Selleck, at thirty-nine, has it firmly under control. Like the businessman he once planned on becoming, he has begun managing his career with un-Magnum-like prudence: restricting access to the product, enforcing tight quality control and spending a fortune in legal bills to protect his name from gossip-column innuendo. Surrounded by cameras and fans for twelve hours every day, he is fiercely trying to protect what's left of his private life and those he's close to in his battle to stay on top and to stay sane. But for a superstar to lead a normal life requires a superhuman effort.

It's 8:30 A.M. when Tom Selleck, alone, enters Michel's, the elegant, chandeliered restaurant in Honolulu's Colony Surf Hotel. Taking his usual seat at a corner table overlooking the ocean, he opens a newspaper and begins scanning the sports section. Dressed in typical island fashion—jogging shorts, navy polo shirt and tennis shoes—he might pass for one of the well-heeled hotel guests. But it's only a few moments before his Olympic-class looks give him away.

Slowly, necks begin twisting and the air buzzes with the words "Tom" and "Magnum." Across the room, two tourists drop their forks to stare at the solitary figure preparing to take a bite of his cheddar-cheese omelet. Selleck remains buried in his newspaper, brushing his mustache as he reads, rarely looking up.

"Uh—excuse me." Just as Selleck puts down his fork after finishing up a plate of papaya and strawberries, two women shyly step forward to request an autograph. He smiles wearily and tells them he (continued on page 127) doesn't have a pen. Flustered, one of the women fumbles through her purse, finally comes up with a ball-point and hands him a travel brochure to sign. He then quickly rises to leave, looking worried that he'll be further accosted. Tucking the newspaper under his arm, he strides toward the door, thanking his waiter on the way.

He's almost home free when, from behind, a woman in emerald-studded sunglasses and a noisy yellow muumuu grabs his arm—"just to tell my friends I touched you," she apologizes as he turns. Smiling wanly, he nods his head and silently jogs out.

For Tom Selleck, the scene is typical. No matter where he goes, star-hungry fans track him like junior versions of the private detective he portrays on television. Even his occasional trips to the local supermarket turn into spectacles, as curious shoppers check out the contents of his cart to see if the superstar buys lettuce and toilet tissue like ordinary mortals. In the beachside community of Diamond Head, where he lives, a steady stream of Instamatic-wielding teenagers ignores the "Private—No Trespassing" sign on his street. All day long they trek along the narrow, windy street on a pilgrimage to Tom's house. When they do get a peek, however, they're often disappointed.

Selleck's gray, wood-framed house with white trim and porch is no larger than most suburban colonials, and it sits on a hill crowded with other split-levels. Still, perhaps in deference to his success, he's recently added a modest extension to the house he's lived in since before Magnum P.I. began.

In Selleck's yard there's no beachfront, no swimming pool, not even a volleyball court to set it apart. The $500,000 price tag reflects its hillside location. Behind a low lava-rock wall studded with aloe plants and purple orchids, he relaxes by puttering in his garden and stretching out on wicker furniture. Selleck rarely gives parties or entertains; in fact, he maintains such a low profile that several neighbors profess not to know that an actor lives in their midst.

To Selleck, that's a compliment. Honolulu isn't Hollywood, but Tom has been only partially successful in avoiding the paparazzi. Locals keep a respectful distance—"We're used to celebrities from the film colony here," says Honolulu Mayor Eileen Anderson—though tourists aren't so considerate. Determined fans hide in the bushes outside his home, others jump his backyard fence or climb the stone wall surrounding his house to peep through his windows.

This kind of attention, which the low-key Selleck now seems at least partly resigned to, was understandably bewildering to the star in Magnum's early days. Says co-star John Hillerman, who plays the very British majordomo, Higgins, "When he walks down the street and women scream and moan, he can't understand it. He's said, 'I looked the same three years ago as I do now, and nobody palpitated on the street. It's in their minds.' He thinks it's a little freakish."

Coping with his relentless fans is undoubtedly the hardest part of Selleck's success. He looks to his home as a retreat—and any interruptions as invasions of privacy. He's suffered insomnia caused by the public pressure and seeks relief by taking long soaks in a Jacuzzi. To enjoy Oahu's attractions unbothered, he's resorted to wearing disguises. Recently, he donned a Halloween mask, complete with spring-loaded google eyes, to cruise Waikiki undetected. "I get tired of it," he complains. "But as Mae West said, 'It's better to be looked over than overlooked.'" passenger seat, apparently had a faulty transmission. The vehicle crashed through the third-story guardrail of the parking lot at the Outrigger Canoe Club and nose-dived onto a boat trailer below. Fortunately, the trailer had heavy-duty shocks—the jeep was badly crushed, but Selleck and Kevin escaped serious injury. Both were treated and released the same day from a nearby hospital, leaving Selleck with only minor cuts and bruises that Universal's makeup artists could camouflage.

"We're rolling."

And while in London this summer filming Lassiter, he had another lucky escape when the motorcycle he was riding for a scene skidded and he bruised his leg.

Where Tom Selleck stops and Thomas Magnum takes over is hard to say. "The biggest difference," says John Hillerman, "is that Magnum is a playboy, and Tom's a very conservative fellow." Consider the evidence: Magnum drives a 145-mph Ferrari, lives in a palatial Hawaiian beachfront mansion and is usually surrounded by scantily dressed beauties. Selleck tools around in a navy-blue Bronco jeep, resides in a modest suburban villa and maintains a discreet circle of friends, mostly his co-stars on the show. Magnum wears loud Hawaiian shirts. Selleck claims he hasn't bought one in years, and chooses most of his clothes from Honolulu's Ralph Lauren Polo shop.

Unfortunately, Selleck's fans don't always see the difference, and, as he puts it, "are in love with this guy up on TV [who] doesn't wake up in the morning with bloodshot eyes." Whenever Magnum films on location around Oahu, as many as two hundred fans gather for a glimpse of the star. As Selleck walks between the set and his trailer, cries of "Tom, Tom!" invariably erupt from the crowd. Usually, he stops to sign autographs, shake hands, answer questions and pose for snapshots. He has an image to maintain—that of a genuinely nice guy—and he's conscious of the need to work at it. Fortunately, he is a genuinely nice guy, appreciative of all the adulation. One crewmember explains, "He doesn't mind crowds except when they scream and grab at him." Then he looks to his bearded, red-haired bodyguard, Mike, to shield him from the most intrusive fans.

Lately Selleck has tried to protect himself through litigation. He complains repeatedly about unauthorized cover stories—no matter how flattering—and requests approval over where his pictures will appear. He's named the National Enquirer in a $36-million lawsuit, charging the tabloid with "contriving entire articles where there is absolutely no factual basis." He recently went to court to halt distribution of a poster showing him in a state of semi-undress—his shirt half off and his fly unzipped—complaining, "It was suggestive and distasteful." Even his father has entered the fray, filing a $6-million libel suit over the 1982 Globe article, "Tom Selleck's Love Secrets—By His Father."

> He avoids nightclubbing and the party circuit for practical reasons: Too little sleep and too much fun show up on camera.

Selleck estimates he's spending $10,000 a week on legal fees to protect his image, a difficult act that has nonetheless drawn support throughout Hollywood, especially from friend Carol Burnett, who won her own battle against the Enquirer.

Longtime friends explain that this testy relationship with the press stems from Selleck's cautious nature and conservative upbringing. He's walked off the set after spotting a reporter taking notes . . . not on him, but on one of his co-stars. "He can get mental about his privacy," confides one publicist. Adds Jack Hogan, who's known Selleck since their acting student days in Hollywood, "He knows it won't last forever, and it won't be long before he's looking for another job."

John Hillerman agrees. "The world is now knocking at his door, so he has to put up restrictions. He's said, 'I'm afraid people are going to get tired of looking at me.' He's trying to avoid that as any good businessman would."

While some stars create jealousy because of their celebrity status, that's not the case with Selleck. "There's not a phony bone in his body," says John Hillerman. "He's naturally masculine. He has a nice vulnerability about him. Women look at Tom Selleck and say, 'My God, I want to go to bed with him.' Men look at him and say, 'I'd like to spend an evening having a drink with that guy.' His appeal is universal."

Honolulu city officials certainly have few complaints, even though the on-location filming often means roadblocks and traffic disruptions. One Magnum episode can cost upward of three quarters of a million dollars and the series is a boon to the local economy. Area Ferrari dealers report their sales have skyrocketed since Magnum began driving a $60,000 red model on the show. Tourist authorities maintain Selleck has become Hawaii's biggest attraction since Jack Lord reigned over Hawaii Five-O. "Any time a Tom Selleck show hits a place that's snowing, the telephone lines start perking up at our major hotels and airlines," reports Honolulu Mayor Eileen Anderson.

Selleck's heavy work schedule leaves little time for a social life. He avoids nightclubbing and the party circuit for practical reasons: Too little sleep and too much fun show up on camera. Most evenings, he's content to dine out with cast members Larry Manetti (who plays Magnum's friend, Rick), Roger Mosley and John Hillerman. No trendsetter, he frequents a handful of elegant restaurants that offer dimly lit privacy and simple fare. Although Selleck never drank until he was twenty-one, he now enjoys a glass of Scotch or white wine with dinner.

At The Bistro, a sedate French eatery with turn-of-the century decor and dark wood paneling, co-owner Karl Diebold flies in calves' liver (which is not on the menu) just to accommodate Selleck's taste. "He appreciates it if you can do something special for him," says Diebold. "He's the type of person you want to make happy, and I consider him my friend."

At Nick's Fishmarket, another favorite restaurant, general manager Randy Schoch also considers Selleck "a great guy" and a friend. "We play softball with him—the restaurant team versus the Magnum team," he explains. Who usually wins? "I won't say . . . I don't want to get him mad," Schoch says with a laugh. At Nick's, Selleck's favorite foods are linguine with clams, sashimi and bouillabaisse.

At dinner, conversation is generally freewheeling, with topics ranging from sports to politics to show business. He has his acting heroes, growing up on a diet of Jimmy Stewart, Gary Cooper and especially John Wayne, to whom he's been compared for his virile looks as well as his conservative politics. Selleck's favorite magazine is William F. Buckley's National Review, and he's a supporter of President Reagan, who invited him to attend Bob Hope's eightieth birthday party at (continued) the Kennedy Center. He's gone on record in favor of nuclear power and is opposed to an "obstructionist" Congress. "He's well-informed on current events," notes John Hillerman. "And he holds strong opinions."

Away from his buddies, Selleck's most important relationship is with his stepson, Kevin. In 1981, Selleck and actress/model Jacquelyn Ray were divorced after ten years of marriage, but they still phone each other about twice a week. "I never make an important decision about Kevin without discussing it with Tom," says Ray. When Kevin comes to town, they embark on typical father/son excursions—to fast-food restaurants or the movies—except with a twist. To avoid stirring up the fans, Kevin picks up the burgers, and the pair wait until the lights dim before entering a theater.

Selleck's social calendar seems strictly "PG" fare. Although he's been linked to everyone from ex-Vegas beauty Phyllis Davis to actress Mimi Rogers (his co-star in the TV movie Divorce Wars), he's dated only casually since his divorce. Part of the problem is his harried schedule. Long-term relationships are nearly impossible, he says, "with the hours I work and the zombie I am when I'm off." Another problem is that women are easily threatened by his image. An acquaintance of several women he's dated recently remarked, "Women are always trying to get close to him, but once they do, they start acting dumb."

Lately he's been seeing Jillie Mack, a twenty-six-year-old dancer from the hit British musical Cats. They met last spring when he was in London filming Lassiter, the story of a jewel thief during the 1930s, to be released this spring. Ever-protective Selleck won't talk about Mack, but acquaintances use words like "vivacious," "natural" and "unspoiled" to describe her. Says a girlfriend: "Jillie obviously likes older men. I remember when she was at dance school, she had a crush on actor David Niven and used to knit him woolly hats and gloves."

Last summer Jillie left Cats after only six months—infuriating the show's producers—to spend time with Selleck in Hawaii, where the two were seen at his favorite restaurants.

But with Mack in Britain, Selleck seems to have written off any serious romantic relationship at this stage in his life. Although the tabloids have announced that Selleck and Mack are engaged, Mrs. Mack, Jillie's mother, insists: "They have no plans to marry. They are very good friends and will continue to be so." Selleck himself denies the rumor, invoking the "married to his work" defense.

After filming nine months of the year, from mid-July to mid-April, Tom Selleck's idea of a vacation is to take on a new film project. What little spare time he has he spends alone, reading or gardening. At night he'll occasionally splurge by staying up till three A.M. to watch an old horror movie.

These solitary moments probably help keep him sane and in control of his life. Understandably, he guards them with a passion. He is a private man, respected by friends and associates for his dedication both to his work and to his pursuit of a normal, happy life. With his level-headed, professional control, Tom Selleck's fame should live long after the public's passion for Thomas Magnum has cooled. End

"Within about three weeks of going on the air [in Dec. 1980]," says Selleck, "my whole life did a flip-flop." But the real problem lies elsewhere: He and his wife of 10 years, actress-model Jacquelyn Ray, 31, have been separated since 1979, and they can't figure out what to do next. "It's one of the great sorrows of my life that we can't be together — I'll always pretend to be married for the rest of my life," says Selleck. "We're still very close, still our good friends. We've worked out an agreement to live separately, but we haven't made any moves toward divorce." He frets about being away from Hunt, 14, his wife's son from a previous marriage, whom he calls "the only child I have."

If Selleck seems well adjusted, the credit probably goes to his father, Bob, an investment executive, and his mother, Martha, a housewife, who moved their family from Detroit to Sherman Oaks, Calif., when Tom was 4. Like his sister and two brothers, Selleck received a gold watch from his father for not drinking, smoking, or swearing before his 21st birthday.

In 1967 signed a contract with 20th Century-Fox, which ended his college career "three classes shy of a degree in business administration

THE ORGANIZATION OF ONONDAGA COUNTY AND ITS TOWNS TO 1800

by Robert V. Moyer

The land from which Onondaga County was formed was purchased to fulfill the state of New York's obligations to the soldiers who fought in the New York State line of the Continental Army in the American Revolutionary War.

When the Continental Congress decided that the militia system was not adequate for fighting the war and that a regular army must be formed, each state was assigned a quota of regiments to raise. A measure of the size of New York State at that time (consisting of sparsely settled areas along the lower Mohawk Valley, a moderately well settled Hudson River valley and New York City which then was not as large as Boston or Philadelphia) is that it was assigned only two regiments.

Since enlistments for patriotism were inadequate to raise the necessary troops and the draft was a thing of the future, it was necessary for the state either to pay a bounty or to promise land after the war to those who would enlist. Money always being scarce in those days, land was promised to soldiers who would enlist in the two New York regiments.

When the war was over, the land had to be purchased from the Indians and then surveyed into townships and lots. Lists then had to be made of those eligible to draw lots, and finally ballots were drawn and the land was slowly settled.

When this military tract, as it was called, was formed into a county, towns were also formed. Generally two townships were combined to form a single town.

At this point, I must make clear something that even native New Yorkers find confusing. A township is not a town. A township is a real estate subdivision used to define areas of large tracts of land. Towns are political subdivisions, generally smaller than a county, but larger than all villages and cities. Exceptions are the city of Buffalo, which has completely absorbed a town of the same name, and New York City, which has grown to encompass five towns now referred to as boroughs. Because many people refer to villages as towns, they feel the need for another word to use when speaking of towns, and hence they use the word township which legally in New York is something else and which politically does not exist.

In map No. 1 (5 March 1794* to 2 April 1798) the names of the townships are in small horizontal letters and the names of the towns are large diagonal ones. Note the Cayuga and Onondaga resident reservations. These areas were reserved by the Indian nations of those names as a place where they would live forever. The Cayugas eventually sold all of their reservation and the Onondagas most of their reservation which became the Town of Onondaga and the city of Syracuse. Parts of Wayne and Schuyler counties and all of Cayuga County, which included land that became Seneca and Tompkins counties, were removed from Onondaga County shortly before the 1800 census. About half of Oswego County and all of Cortland County were still included in Onondaga County at the time of the census. The final map in the series shows the county and the towns as they are today. We would like to have shown the organization of the towns from the organization of the county to the present, but it would have taken too much time and expense.

As usual, the chronology of the formation of the towns was taken from French's Gazetteer of New York State. The exact wording of the acts forming the county and towns and the exact dates of organization were obtained from the Laws of New York in the archives of the Onondaga Historical Association. Simeon Dewitt's map of the military tract was used as a base map.

Perhaps I should explain the utility of these maps. The early settlers in newly formed counties generally named the town when identifying their place of residence. This made sense since at that time there were usually few villages or settlements and most people lived on farms. The rather large original towns were reduced in size when the population grew large enough to support a smaller and more compact town in which it would be easier to attend town meetings to transact official business; hence, it was easily possible to be living in Marcellus in 1794 and in Camillus in 1800 and not have moved at all. A farm in Lysander, Onondaga County, in 1800 could be in Oswego County today. A resident of the south part of Fabius, Onondaga County, in 1800 would be living in Cortland County today. To track down elusive ancestors, it helps to know the geography of your ancestor's day.

It is suggested that readers also consult the Tree Talks maps of counties referred to in Mr. Moyer's discussion. These maps were prepared by Mr. Moyer to accompany transcripts of the censuses of those counties. The maps and transcripts were printed in Tree Talks as follows: Seneca County ...1810, September 1975; Tioga County...1820, December 1977; and Cortland County...1820, December 1980.

An article on the military tract by Robert S. Rose, "The Military Tract of Central New York," appeared in Tree Talks 4:1, pages 12-15, March 1964. A condensed form of this article can be found in 18:1, March 1978. Names of those drawing lots in the military tract were printed in 4:2 through 11:1. Abstracts of Sessions Laws of New York, land disputes, petitions of soldiers and their heirs have been printed in Tree Talks beginning in 7:1, continuing through 12:1, and again in 18:1.

Americans of Royal Descent, Charles M. Browning, 7th Ed., 1911, Reprinted 1969

Dacre, of the Fienes blood, had a daguhter named Catherine. See further as to this in the "Boston Transcript," 13 January, 4 April, and 30 November, 1904. The only "Lord Dacres," of proper age, who had a daughter named Catherine, was Humphrey de Dacre, the seventh feudal baron of Gillesland, and the first Baron Dacre of the North, by writ. See Additional MSS. No. 5530, fo. 17, British Museum, or Nichols's "Coll. Geneal. Topog., Vol. I., 392 and 407, and "Boston Transcript," 8 May, 1905, and p. 460.

FARWELL. Pedigree LXXXV.—After printing this "Pedigree" in good faith, I discovered that the immigrant, Henry Farwell, was not of the parentage given to me. I find that his alleged mother was born in the year he came to New England! And "Henry," a younger son of John Farwell, of Hill Bishop, was born about thirty years after the immigrant came over! I have referred to this "fake pedigree" in the "Boston Transcript," 24 February, 1904.

LYMAN. Pedigree XXXVI.—This claim is reproduced from Dr. Coleman's "Lyman Genealogy." It seems that Sir "William" Lambert, of Owlton, and his wife, Lady Joan de Umfraville, had no son named "Robert," and that the "Robert Lambert, of Owlton," his alleged son, was the son and heir of Sir John Lambert, of Owlton, the son and heir of the said Sir "William," by the Lady Joan. Since printing this claim to royal descent, I find that there is some uncertainty about it, because there is no evidence, and only assumption, by Dr. Coleman, that Henry Lambert, of Ongar, in Essex, 1447, was the son of Robert Lambert, of Owlton, in Durham. I am retaining the claim, hoping that it may be substantiated. See further as to it in the "Boston Transcript," 16 May, 1904.

READ. Pedigree LXXX.—Since printing this claim, I find that William Read, of Woburn, was not the son of Sir Thomas, nor was the immigrant's wife, Mabel Kendall, the granddaughter of Henry and Helen Kendall, as believed by the compilers of the "pedigree;" therefore the claim to royal descent in these lines fails. See further as to this claim in the "Boston Transcript," 29 February, and 16 May, 1904.

WHITING. Pedigree LII.—This claim of royal descent is reproduced from "The Whiting Memorial," and the N. E. His. Gen. Reg., XV., 61. Since printing it I have discovered that Lady Elizabeth St. John, 1605-1677, through whom the Whitings claimed royal descent, was not of all the descent claimed for her. She certainly was the daughter of Sir Oliver St. John, of Keysoe, M. P., d. 1625, but he was the son of Henry St. John, of Keysoe, Gent., and not of Sir John St. John, as on p. 218 (who was of royal descent), as is evident from the will of the said Sir Oliver's mother, proved 7 September, 1616. As the connection of the said Henry St. John with the Lords of St. John, of royal blood, has not been found, this claim may be said to rest in abeyance, and I retain it in the hope that it can be satisfactorily remodeled. See further as to the errors in this "pedigree," the "Boston Transcript," 30 December, 1903.

WILKINSON. Pedigree LXIII.—This was a "pedigree" compiled by Mr. H. G. Somerby, in the American Heraldic Journal, I., 85. Since I reproduced it, I have learned the claim that Lawrence Wilkinson was the son of William and Mary (Conyers) Wilkinson, cannot be substantiated by any evidence, and that there is no proof that the said Mary Conyers, p. 276, through whom the blood royal, was the wife of the said William Wilkinson. I am retaining the claim, hoping that it may be improved. I have given more details as to the unreliability of this claim in the "Boston Transcript," 27 July, 1904.

See pp. 424 and 427, 4th edition.

Page 26.—Pedigree on p. 408 is the corrected version of the descent of Lady Alice Wotton, wife of Sir John Cirencester, or Chichester, of Kanleigh. Her grandfather, Sir Roger Moels, or Moelis, Kt., was the feudal lord of Newmarch and North Cadbury, Somerset. He served in the war in Wales, 1277, and was appointed governor of Llanbadarn-mawr castle, and d. 1295.. His wife, Lady Alice, was the daughter and heiress of Sir William de Preux, or Prowse, Kt. His father, Nicholas de Molis, was a great personage in the Court of Henry III., and was ambassador, high sheriff, governor of Guernsey, Jersey, etc., and of the castles of Rochester, Canterbury, Shirborne, Cort, etc.

And in same, October 6th, "Died in this town, James Boyd, Esq., Aet. 62." If Mr. Boyd was aged 62 when he died, in 1798, he was born about 1736, and for this reason the question was raised, could he have been the "James, b. and bapt. 3 and 4 May, 1732," the tenth child of Robert Boyd, of Kilmarnock, 1689-1762, who was m. 25 October, 1714, and had eleven children? I., and excluded his brother, Sir John (d. 1312), and Ralph, and the latter's son, Sir John Bigod, of Singes, Norfolk (d. 1305). Sir John (d. 1312), is supposed to have been the one who had two sons, John, his heir, and Roger, of Settrington, who had John and Roger, and, it is also claimed, was the father of Joan Chauncey (see p. A). See Cauci or Chauncy Genealogy, in Banks's "Stemmata Anglican," pedigrees of families omitted by Dugdale.

Page 67.—As to John Chauncy, who d. 8 June, 1510; From Plea Rolls, de Banco, Easter, 20 Edw. IV., 1461, "Hereford:"—"Walter Patsyll and Rose, his wife, sued John Chauncy, late of Sabryggeworth, gentleman, for illegal entry by force into a tenement at Sabryggeworth. Ralph Gyfford, formerly seized of said tenement, had granted it to John Gyfford and Matilda, his wife, and to the heirs of their bodies. According to an Inq. P. M., taken 1448-9, on the death of John Chauncy, the manor of Great Swampford, called Giffords, had descended to John Gyfford, to William, his son, to Margaret, heir, wife of John Chauncy. Margaret had granted said Manor to John Chauncy, her eldest son, and John Chauncy, the elder, by his deed, had granted it to John Chauncy, the younger, his brother, to be held by him and his heirs forever." HARTFORD FAMILY OF WHITING.

For a genealogical account of the descendants of Col. William Whiting, the founder of Hartford, Conn., and his wife Susanna, who came over here probably in 1633, see "Goodwin's History" of the family; also "Hunter's Tract," 3 Mass. Hist. Coll., "Farmer's Register," and "Savage's Genealogical Dictionary." The descendants of this eminent progenitor are very numerous, and several of them have been distinguished. Many, if not most, of the families of this name, in Connecticut and in Western Massachusetts, have sprung from him.

Inquiries have frequently been made, whether any connection could be traced between the three Whiting families of Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn, Col. William Whiting of Hartford, and Nathaniel Whiting of Dedham. Thus far no relationship has been discovered between them. The family of Rev. Samuel Whiting belonged to Boston, in the county of Lincoln; that of Col. William Whiting of Hartford, and of Nathaniel Whiting of Dedham, according to Mr. Hunter (3. Mass. Hist. Coll., x., 71), belonged to Boxford, in the County of Suffolk. Mr. Savage (in his Geneal. Dict.) conjectures that this stock might include that of Rev. Samuel Whiting, although, he says, he came last from the county of Lincoln. Mr. Savage was probably not aware that this clergyman, instead of having come "last" from Boston, belonged to a family which had been settled there for several centuries before the first Pilgrim came to these colonies. Although no connection between these ancient contemporaries has yet been shown, it by no means follows that none exists. It will be left for other genealogists to make further examinations in the English records, and to ascertain whether they were descendants from the same ancestor.

There is some reason to believe that the Virginia family of Whiting are of the same stock as that of Rev. Samuel Whiting; but the proofs have not been sufficiently developed to warrant a positive assertion of that fact.

Dear Sue,

I have finally gotten around to sending you the Whiting-Selleck material we talked about at church. Our son Tom in Chicago is married to Virginia Selleck. For professional reasons she still goes by her maiden name. They both have their Ph.D.'s in counseling psychology, and they both work for Thresholds, a psychiatric rehabilitation center.

I've done some work on Virginia's genealogical background, but I've struck a few snags, as you can see from the enclosed sheets. We have her Selleck ancestry back to her great-great-grandfather, Joseph Whiting Selleck, born in 1799 in Syracuse, N.Y. I also have Selleck records that show two Selleck brothers, Peter and Abraham, married to two Whiting half-sisters, Martha and Deborah. Since these are not overly common surnames, I have assumed that Joseph Whiting Selleck is probably the grandson of either Peter or Abraham. However, I have very few records on either of their descendants, so I cannot make the connection.

Back to the Whiting line, you will see that Martha and Deborah were daughters of Joseph Whiting by different wives. Since you have quite a bit of information on the Whitings, I'm hoping that you might be able to discover the parents of this Joseph Whiting. You might also have something further on the descendants of Peter Selleck and Martha Whiting or the descendants of Abraham Selleck and Deborah Whiting.

I probably shouldn't be sending you so much material, but personally I like to have enough related information to put it all into context. At any rate, you don't have to read anything you don't want to!

Thank you for checking into this. We'd be very pleased and grateful if you should happen to discover the ancestry of Joseph Whiting or more about the descendants of his daughters Martha and Deborah in your records. You might even turn out to be related to Virginia.

Yours sincerely,

David S. Witheridge

WHITING. 1. Rev. Samuel, the first pastor of Billerica, was the oldest son of Rev. Samuel and Elizabeth (St. John) Whiting, and born 1633, March 25, in Skirbeck, very near Boston, in Lincolnshire, England. His father came to America in 1636, and became the pastor of Lynn, Nov. 8. He d. 1679, Dec. 11, aged 82. Our Samuel graduated at Harvard College in 1653. His class was the largest graduated before 1690, and included some of the names most eminent in the colony; and among them was Thomas Crosby, elder brother of Simon so long his parishioner in Billerica. The subject of Mr. Whiting's thesis at graduation was the question, "An detur Maximum et Minimum in Natura?" which he affirmed. He remained at college a year after graduating, and the fact is noted as peculiar that his quarter bills were almost always paid "by silver." He was admitted a freeman, 1656, May 11; and in 1658, as elsewhere related, he came to Billerica, to fill a large and honorable place in the history of the town. On his settlement, the town granted Mr. Whiting "one tenne-acre lott, or single share," with all town privileges. His house-lot was "twenty acres * lying upon the Towneship, on the South side of it, upon part of which his house now standeth. It is bounded by George Willice on the North, the brook highway on the East, by Charnstaffe lane on the South, by John Sternes' feild on the West; also, a highway passing crosse it against the pound, being four pole wide." This highway was and is the Concord road, and Mr. Whiting's house stood north of Charnstaffe lane just where it descends to the brook, in the field now owned by Miss Susan Hill. He had another small grant near, "one acre, more or less, lying on the West side of John Sternes' feild, bounded by the feild on the East of it, by the River West, by George Willice North, by George ffarley South, a highway on it," etc. This highway was Charnstaffe; and in 1685 we find this record: "Granted more to him, that part of ye highway called Charnstaffe lane, which lyeth Westward of ye country road to Concord, to take it from s^d country road untill you come down to George ffarley's land that he purchased of John Sternes (deceased); they only reserving the priviledge of a private highway toward Concord river." This westward extension of Charnstaffe, beyond the point where the road to Bedford turns south from it, is still a private lane. Another grant on the township touches in its description several points of the local geography. "Granted more to him, one parcell of land conteining twelve acres, more or lesse, bounded by Jno. Sternes on the South, by a small skirt of land wch he had of the towne (for highway damage) on v^e towneship, joyneing to his farme line; bounded on the East by John Marshall, in ye old Township line; and ther his S. W. corner is a white oake standing on the East side of ye ash swamp, wch white oake is the N. E. corner of Mr. Dudley's farme; bounded by the country road on the West; and by land (yet lying in comon to ye use of the Towne) reserved for the ministry on the North." This description compared with the corresponding grant to Stearns (see under Stearns, John, 1) proves that the north-east corner of the Dudley farm and the south-east corner of the township were at the same point, on the east side of Ash swamp, where Charnstaffe lane and Tufts lane extended, would meet. Mr. Whiting received twenty-three grants in all the various parts of the town, and different divisions, amounting to more than 200 acres. He was one of the seventeen ministers who bore testimony against the settlement of Rev. John Davenport over the First Church, in Boston; and he preached the Artillery Election sermon in 1682. But he published nothing. His descendant, Rev. Moses G. Thomas, formerly of Concord, N. H., had a volume of his MS. sermons, but it shared in the dispersion of his library, in Missouri, some years since, and no clue to its place of concealment has been found. A similar fate seems to have befallen afolio MS. mentioned by Farmer as in his possession, containing notes of his sermons by Jonathan Danforth. He m. 1656, Nov. 12, Dorcas, dau. of Leonard Chester, and b. in Wethersfield, Conn., 1637, Nov. 1. Her father was a nephew of Rev. Thomas Hooker, D.D. He lived a year or two in Watertown, and assisted in exploring the Connecticut valley and selecting the locations there, when Dr. Hooker and his company removed from Newtown to Hartford. He d. 1648, Dec. 11, and his widow Mary m. Hon. Richard Russell, one of the foremost citizens of Charlestown. She d. a widow, 1688, Nov. 30, aged 80. 2. Samuel, son of Rev., Samuel, 1, b. 1662–3, Jan. 19. John Whiting, esq., mayor of Boston, in England, and brother of Rev. Samuel Whiting, of Lynn, advanced £50 in aid of the Massachusetts colony. In return, the General Court granted him 500 acres of land, which he transferred to his American brother, who gave it to his son, the Billerica pastor. The grant was located on Salmon brook, in Dunstable, and passed into the possession of Samuel Whiting, jr., who became one of the first settlers of Dunstable, and a leading man in that town. He was taken a prisoner by the Indians, in 1704, and carried to Canada, but escaped; and in 1713 received £10 from the colony for his wounds and sufferings. His house was a garrison in 1710. He d. 1714–5, March 8, and is buried in Billerica. His wife's name was Elizabeth. She m. 2d, William Patten, 5. Ch. Samuel, b. 1687, Oct. 22; was in Lovewell's fated expedition in 1725. He received his father's farm in Dunstable; was living there in 1747, and prob. d. there. He had a son Joseph, town clerk in Dunstable, 1774, who had 10 children; perhaps James, of Hollis, and others. Elizabeth, born 1689; m. Rev. Samuel Ruggles, 2. Catherine, b. 1691; m. Abial Foster, 12. Martha, b. 1762, July 3; m. 1782, Nov. 28, John Abbot, of Ashburnham. Caleb, b. 1765, March 9.

11. Timothy, son of Dea. Samuel, 6, b. 1731-2, Feb. 13; m. Sarah Osgood. His name is on the tax-list, 1765-75. Before and after, he lived in Lancaster; d. there 1799, July 12. He served in the French war in 1755, and with two sons was engaged at Concord and Lexington. Ch. Timothy, b. 1758, June 17; captain in the Revolution; lived in Lancaster; m. 1781, Aug. 21, Abigail Kidder, dau. of Samuel, 11; had 10 ch.; d. 1826, Jan. 13. John, b. 1760, Feb. 24. His son, Gen. Henry Whiting, published a volume, Revolutionary Orders of General Washington, consisting of selections from papers preserved by Gen. John Whiting, while acting as adjutant of the second regiment of the Massachusetts line. He had preserved most or all of the orders which it was his duty to record, and from these the volume is made up. He belonged to the company of minute-men in Billerica, 1775, and with his father and brother shared in the running fight, as the British retreated from Concord. He joined the army at Cambridge; was under Arnold on Lake Champlain in 1776; and with Gates through 1777, receiving a commission that year. The remainder of the war he was with the main army, until Washington went to the command in Virginia. His record after is thus stated: "Lieutenant-Colonel 4 Infantry, 8 July, 1808; Adjutant and Inspector of the Army, 17 July, 1809; Colonel 5 Infantry, 31 Dec., 1809; died 3 Sept., 1810, at Washington." Of his 8 children, Henry was a good soldier and officer, breveted Brigadier-General "for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Buena Vista," and was Quartermaster-General when he d. at St. Louis, 1851, Sept. 16. Fabius was Major, U.S.A.; and Caroline Lee, b. 1800, m. Prof. N. M. Hentz, at Northampton, and was an authoress of much note and esteem. She d. in Florida, 1856. A

Samuel Whiting

12. Samuel, son of Samuel. 10, b. 1758, Dec. 12. Of this good man we give a portrait believed by his grandson, Dr. John S. Whiting, who has kindly furnished it, to be a very good one. Dr. Whiting also contributes this sketch, which affords so pleasant a picture of Deacon Whiting and his times, that it must be given nearly in full. He says: "In 1840 I went to school in Billerica and lived with my grandfather. * He was then 82 years old, somewhat infirm, but able to attend to his usual round of duties. He went to church regularly twice a Sunday, locking up the house, and taking his whole family with him; he riding with one of his daughters in his 'one-hoss shay'; the others walking after with me and the foot-stoves.

It was in that winter, I think, that he resigned his deaconship. After communion, when this fact was announced, Mr. Preston moved that the church give him a vote of thanks for his 40 years of duty, during which time he had not been absent a single service; which motion, in a few appreciative remarks, my grandfather deprecated as unusual and improper, whereupon it was withdrawn. In 1776 he was drafted into the army and served about eight months as a private and sergeant, acting as clerk of his company. He was at the battle of Stillwater and at the taking of Burgoyne. I delight in recalling his narrative of incidents of the campaign as drawn from him by the questions of neighbors and friends, some of whom sat around his walnut fire nearly every winter evening. I well remember a boyish question of mine: 'Grandfather, did you ever shoot a red-coat?' and the very solemn answer, which I did not then understand: 'I hope not.' Also, I recall how with moistened eye he told of taking deliberate aim and firing at that famous scout, Harvey Birch, the hero of Cooper's 'Spy,' but happily without effect. How he managed to get an education, I never knew, but he was well versed in mathematical science, — I knew of his calculating eclipses, — and became Mr. Pemberton's assistant at his academy as instructor in the English branches. One of his pupils, Hon. Thomas G. Cary, spoke of him at the Bi-Centennial, in 1855, as 'that brave old soldier of the Revolution and servant of God, Deacon Whiting, who had practised the hand-writing which he taught us, in making out rolls and returns with benumbed fingers on the drum-head.' Like his ancestor, Jonathan Danforth, he became a surveyor, and many of his plans of Billerica farms are now preserved among the records at East Cambridge. I have in my possession a barometer, marked as 'made by W. & S. Jones, No. 35, Holbron, London,' which hung beside the tall clock in the family room for I don't know how many years before my time. I doubt if there are many older in the country still in 'going order.' There was also an improvised sun-dial upon the window-sill arranged scientifically so as to indicate 12 o'clock M. at any season of the year. For him I had and have the greatest veneration as a thoroughly good man, living a simple and blameless life, and doing kindness wherever it was in his power. Not less do I revere the sainted name of his eldest daughter, my aunt Harriet, then a maiden lady of fifty-one, and the good angel, it seemed to me, of the whole town. Were any seriously ill, she was always ready and first called to 'watch' with them and furnish those little comforts and delicacies which sick people are supposed to require; and if any died, it was she who was expected to prepare tenderly the remains for the last solemn rites.

The actual money paid for living by a family of such few wants and simple tastes as my grandfather's could have been little compared with what are now considered necessary expenses. Flour, coffee, tea, taxes, church-rates, and clothing, I believe, were the chief items which were paid for in money. I do not recall any visits to dress-makers or tailors, and much of the bedding was of home manufacture, made, perhaps, in the house a half century before. The table was largely supplied from the farm. A hog was killed in the fall and prepared for present and future use; a calf in the spring, and fowl and turkeys, as occasion required, which, with milk and eggs, furnished the animal food, while the common vegetables, with Indian and rye meal, cranberries, barberries, shagbarks, apples, and a few other fruits, supplied a sufficient variety to make the changes of one's daily food conducive to good health. In my time at Billerica there was no settled clergyman, the pulpit being supplied every Sunday by candidates, who always, as I recollect, dined at my grandfather's, invariably on baked beans, baked potatoes, brown bread, suet pudding, and apples, which I was led to believe, by the praises put upon it by the polite clergymen, was a repast worthy of a king. But I have rambled enough. Of my grandfather's personal appearance I cannot speak very definitly. He was of medium stature, of a venerable aspect, with white hair worn in a cue tied up in a black silk ribbon, not an eel-skin." Deacon Whiting lived south of Charnstaffe lane, west of the brook, and opposite the place of his ancestor, the first Billerica pastor. 14th October, 1643; he married a second wife, Susanna ——, who survived him; he died 11th September, 1650. His son, Samuel, was instructed at Harvard College, but did not graduate; he was ordained 26th March, 1650, and died in Boston (N. E.), 30th March, 1662. He left a son, Samuel, whose two sons, Samuel and Atherton, both died before middle age.[1]

REV. SAMUEL WHITING.

The family of WHITING was very early connected with Boston and the neighbourhood. William Whytynge, of Boston, is mentioned in the Subsidy Roll of Edward III. (1333). William Whyting, of Deeping, occurs in DUGDALE, under the date 1352, and John and Robert Whiting, of Thorpe, near Wainfleet, are named by the same authority as living in 1560. The arms of the family were quartered with those of Hunston, Sutton, Stickney, Gedney, and Enderby, in a shield on a mantel-piece in the chantry of St. Lawrence,[2] at Leake; and, in another shield in the same place, with those of Hunston, Sutton, Stickney, and Smith of Elsham. The earliest mention of this family in the Corporation Records is in 1590, when John Whiting was a member of the Common Council, and Erection bailiff; and the first record of the family in the Parish Register is the baptism of John Whiting, son of John, on the 4th of June, 1592. John Whiting was Mayor of Boston in 1600 and 1608; he was the father of Samuel Whiting, who was born at Boston, 20th November, 1597, and who was entered of Emanuel College, Cambridge, 1613, and took his degrees of A.B. and A.M. in 1616 and 1620 respectively. He soon after received orders and became chaplain in a family which was connected with the Bacons and Townsends of Norfolk, and continued in that position three years. He was afterwards settled as a colleague with Mr. Price, at King's Lynn, in the same county. He remained three years at Lynn, but complaints being made to the Bishop of Norwich, of his nonconformity in administering the services of the Church, he removed to the Rectory of Skirbeck, near Boston, where his nonconformity was also complained of, and led subsequently to his emigration to the American colonies. The name of his first wife has not been discovered. He was married to his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Oliver St. John, own cousin of Oliver Cromwell, and afterwards Chief Justice of England, at Boston, on the 6th of August, 1629. His brother, John, was Mayor of Boston in 1626, 1633, 1644, and 1645.[3] James, another brother, was Mayor in 1640. Robert Whiting surrendered the office of Sergeant-at-Mace, 28th June, 1631, and was elected Marshal of the Admiralty, which office he resigned 17th November, 1632. The Rev. Samuel Whiting resigned the rectory of Skirbeck in 1636, and emigrated to America; he arrived in Boston (N. E.), May 26; and, in the following November, removed to Lynn, in Massachusetts, where he officiated as minister until his death there, on the 11th December, 1679, when he was eighty-two years of age; his wife died at Lynn in 1677, aged seventy-two. Mr. Whiting's second son, John, was a graduate of Harvard University. He returned to England, and was appointed Rector of Leverton: he died in 1689.

In Mr. Lewis' History of Lynn, Massachusetts, it is stated that Mr. Whiting had for his classmate at Cambridge his cousin, Anthony Tuckney, who was afterwards Vicar of Boston, p. 105.

Mr. Whiting was also brother-in-law to Mr. Richard Westland, Alderman of Boston, and Mayor in 1636 and 1643, who loaned money to the Colony of Massachusetts, and had 600 acres of land allotted him there in discharge thereof.—Ibid. 183.

We believe the male line of the Whitings in this neighbourhood became extinct by the death of the Rev. Samuel Whiting, Rector of Fishtoft, in 1781. The American branch of the Whiting family is, at present, represented by William Whiting, Esq., an eminent jurist, and President of the New England Historical Society.[1]

EDMUND QUINCY.

The QUINCY family is a very ancient one in Lincolnshire, branches of which may be traced in Fishtoft, Long Sutton, Walcot, near Falkingham, Aslackby, &c. They bore arms at the Herald's Visitation in 1564.[2] Edmund Quincy, who went over to America with John Cotton in 1633,[3] is traditionally said to have resided at Fishtoft. He lived a very little time in America, dying in 1636, at the early age of thirty-three. He left a son, Lieutenant-Colonel Edmund Quincy, who died in 1698; and from him descended, in the male line, Josiah Quincy, junior, who was very prominent, and of highly-deserved celebrity, during the revolutionary period; and, in the female line, JOHN ADAMS, and JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, the second and sixth Presidents of the United States, and the late Chief Justice CRANCH, of the district of Columbia.

HUTCHINSON FAMILY.

This family lived at Alford, in Lincolnshire, but it was probably connected with a family of the same name which long resided in Boston.[4] The HUTCHINSONS of Alford "were there intimately acquainted with Mr. Coddington and Mr. Cotton the minister, who sympathised in their religious opinions and persecutions. The family which emigrated to America consisted of an aged widow, four sons, and a daughter, the wife of the Rev. John Wheelwright.[5] William, the eldest son, was the husband of the celebrated Mrs. Ann Hutchinson,[6] and he and his brother Richard took out adult families to America. Edward the third son, and his nephew Edward, the son of William, are said to have accompanied Mr. Cotton in 1633."

The remainder of the family followed in 1635 or 1636. They purchased land at Boston (N. E.), and engaged themselves in the civilisation and conversion of the Indians. The early career of this family in America was greatly influenced by the part which Mrs. Hutchinson took in the Antinomian controversy which then prevailed. A religious persecution, and some very severe acts of the Colonial Government, induced the family to remove to Rhode

We do not know whether Richard Whiting, the last abbot of Glastonbury, was connected with the Lincolnshire family. He was far advanced in life at the time of the Reformation; he was too old to relinquish his long cherished opinions, and too firm to renounce his religious principles. He offered a decided opposition to the proceedings of Henry VIII., and was condemned to be "hanged, drawn, and quartered," which sentence was most cruelly executed; LELAND, in his MSS. preserved in the Bodleian Library, calls Abbot Whiting, "Homo sane simplicissimus, et antiquæ mentis singularis:" but he afterwards scored the line with his pen.—MERRYWEATHER'S Bibliomania, p. 144.

[4] Samuel Hutchinson was Mayor in 1680 and 1695, and Stephen Hutchinson in 1699.

Dear Virginia:

Your letter just arrived and I am glad to give you what little information I do possess concerning the Selleck ancestry. It would seem very likely that your Joseph Whiting Selleck is a descendant of either Peter or Abraham Selleck. I would favor Peter slightly for geographical reasons. Martha Whiting was a daughter of Joseph Whiting. I do not have any information about Abraham Selleck or Deborah Whiting.

The information that I have on the Sellecks was given to me by a friend who works for the New York State Geneological Society, so many of the sources of information are not in my records, unfortunately. I do know from my own visits to the library of the Society in New York City that there is a rather complete book on the Sellecks there.

All the information that I possess on my ancestors is in the process of being computerized, so this letter may be delayed as I am still entering my notes on the Sellecks. I have enclosed copies of the data on the Sellecks that would probably be of interest to you. Also enclosed are xerox copies of a couple of sources about the Selleck forbearers.

Your Joseph Whiting Selleck's birthdate of 1799 would make him probably the grandchild of Peter and Martha (if indeed he is their descendant) since Peter died in 1753. My Great-great grandfather Ebenezer Lockwood Selleck born in 1796 would have been almost his exact contemporary. He was the son of a Peter Selleck, a Revolutionary War veteran, son of Peter and Martha. Peter Selleck (son of Peter and Martha) received free land in up-state New York and died in Paris Township, Oneida County which I believe is not too far removed from Syracuse, N.Y.

I am sorry that I cannot be of more help. Good luck in your research. Let me know if you uncover anything!

Yours truly,

John Hugh Selleck

The Sellecks of Early Stamford

Se 99
Log 1037

By Louise H. McLean

Editor's Note: Mrs. Edward C. McLean is president of The Darien Historical Society of Darien, Connecticut. She is also a former president of the Garden Club of Darien. Gardening has been her consuming interest until she recently discovered the fascinations of historical research. This article first appeared in The Darien Historical Society Annual in March, 1961. It is reprinted as a piece of general interest to Connecticut antiquarians.

NOT long ago I chanced upon a few dates and records which seemed to be fragments of an interesting story concerning two families among the early settlers of Stamford — the Laws and the Sellecks. When set against the background of colonial history, the story of these people brings vividly to life the picture of Stamford as it was three hundred years ago.

About 1660 two ambitious young boys arrived in Stamford, probably from Boston where their births are recorded. Jonathan Selleck was twenty years old and his brother John only seventeen. Their father, David Selleck, had apparently engaged in the shipping trade out of Boston, for he is known to have sailed back and forth to Barbados. When he died in 1654, he left "a fair estate in sum, yet very little beyond debts." After his death, his eldest son David probably continued the Caribbean trade, for there is a record of his being in Barbados in 1663.

However, his younger brothers John and Jonathan obviously decided to set out for themselves, and so came to Stamford to make their fortunes. They did very well for themselves as the years went on, in spite of the disturbing and unsettled times in which they lived.

The first homes had been built in Stamford in 1640, when twenty-nine courageous families had come from Wethersfield to set up their own church in the western wilderness. Theirs was an outpost of New England rather than a suburb of New York as Stamford is today. The town was politically affiliated with the New Haven Colony and also bound by ties of familiarity to the larger Bay Colony at Boston. Many of the settlers of Standford (as it is written in the early land records) had lived in Boston briefly on their arrival in New England, and had left friends and relatives behind when they moved on to the west. For some years the colonists looked almost entirely to Boston for supplies rather than to New Amsterdam only forty miles away. The reason, of course, was that New Amsterdam remained in hostile Dutch hands until 1664, and the Dutch also claimed all the land to the shores of the Connecticut River. Hostility was further aggravated by the attitude of the puritanical English who thought the easy-going Dutch a godless people.*

So Stamford was an isolated outpost with a foreign country to the west, a wilderness full of unfriendly Indians to the north, and only a scattering of English settlements to the east, best reached by ship along the Sound. The Selleck brothers, arriving only twenty years after the first settlers, had come to the frontier.

From the start, they were undoubtedly partners. Jonathan wrote many years later of being "a partner with him (John) in trade." How soon they owned a ship of their own is uncertain, but the records all speak of John Selleck, mariner, or John Selleck, "Captain" or "Commander." So his was the adventurous life at sea.

In 1663 Jonathan married Abigail Law, a girl four years older than he, and in 1669 John married her sister Sarah, also his elder. The father of the girls was Richard Law who had brought his young family to Stamford with the very first settlers. He himself was a man of education, a "king's attorney," and was considered the "first civilian" after the minister, to whom people turned for advice and counsel. The earliest town documents are in his handwriting, for he was the town clerk for twenty-four years. He also represented Stamford at the sessions of the General Court or legislature in New Haven. For a time he was also a judge of the local court, and in later years, after the New Haven Colony had united with the Connecticut Colony, he was occasionally a deputy to the sessions of the General Court at Hartford.

Clearly, the Selleck brothers had married well. Richard Law gave each of them a house and lot on his marriage as dowry for his daughters. John's house, according to the deed, was adjacent to that of his father-in-law. The deed also states that John could not sell it without his wife's consent. Later (1677) after the town had granted to John Selleck "ye peece of wast land lying within ye fence by ye landing place to set a dwelling house or warehouse upon," Richard Law also gave to him "ye creek or cove yt lyes by ye landing place to ye southeast of ye warehouse." So Captain Selleck, sailing the perilous seas, brought back his cargoes to the warehouse in Stamford.

The dangers on the high seas were countless in the seventeenth century. Aside from wind and weather, English and colonial sea-captains risked capture by Spanish, Dutch or French ships depending on the war of the moment. Above all was the danger from hijacking pirates, for this was "the Golden Age of Piracy." The coastal waters of the Atlantic were infested with pirates, who even swarmed from hidden coves at the mouth of the Hudson River to attack shipping that ventured into the harbor or started up the river toward Albany. Pirate captains of wealth and fame strolled unafraid in their finery along the streets of New York, protected by the influence of the merchants to whom they sold their cargoes. So history repeats itself, and the pirates in one age are "bootleggers" in another.

*An illuminating statistic: In 1669, one-fourth of the buildings in New Amsterdam were inns or groghouses.

The Selleck place on Long Island Sound was called "a favorite resort of the merchants doing business with the Madagascar pirates." Moreover, the New York Colonial Records contain a letter that flashes so bright a beam on the Selleck enterprises that it should be quoted. The letter is dated November 28, 1700, and was written by the Earl of Bellomont, then Governor of New York, to the Lords of Trade in England:

> "There's a town called Stamford in Connecticut Colony, on the border of this province, where one Major Selleck lives, who has a warehouse close to the sea that runs between the mainland and Nassau [Long Island]. This man does us great mischief with his warehouse, for he receives abundance of goods from our vessels, and the merchants afterwards take their opportunity of running them into this town [New York]. Major Selleck received at least £10,000 worth of treasure and East India goods brought by one Clarke of this town from Kid's sloop, and lodged with Selleck."

Although the true story of Captain Kidd is too long and involved to relate here, it may be noted that until the last two or three years of his life, Kidd lived on Liberty Street in New York, and was a most respected and prosperous merchant and sea captain. The Sellecks may have known him well.

If John and Jonathan took part in the bootlegging mentioned in Bellomont's letter, they did so with some justification. Even at that early date customs duties in the Colonies were evaded whenever possible. There was no outcry against "taxation without representation," as there was to be later. The citizens of New York, like all men everywhere, resented taxes and seized upon a technicality to declare customs duties illegal. Governor Andros had instituted customs regulations there in 1677 that were to expire three years later. By some chance, these regulations had never been officially extended, although the succeeding royal governors tried to continue their enforcement. Since the people of New York disliked the "abominable tariff acts" anyway, they seized this excuse to make their case a righteous one.

It would be fascinating to know whether John Selleck himself ever encountered the pirates. The meager records I have found prove only that he had his troubles with ships of foreign powers. Early in his career (1673) he set out from Stamford in the small boat "Catch" to cross Long Island Sound for a cargo of lumber. At this time, England and Holland were pursuing their third war of that century, and in August a Dutch fleet of twenty vessels suddenly sailed into New York harbor and retook the city from the unprepared English without a shot being fired. John Selleck unfortunately ran into some part of that Dutch fleet, was captured, and carried off boat and all to New York. Though he was released before long, the boat remained in Dutch hands until the following year when the war ended.

By 1679 John was "Commander" of yet another ship, "Brothers Adventure," recorded in Barbados as bound for New York with passengers aboard. The ship's name suggests that the Sellecks well understood the risks they took.

There is no doubt that the partners prospered for almost thirty years, until John Selleck's luck ran out. On a trip to England in 1689, when he was only forty-six, he and his ship were captured by the French. John was taken prisoner and never returned. This inconclusive remark in the records leaves so much unsaid and unknown. In May of that year, the French king Louis XIV declared war on England and Holland. One wonders if word of the war had reached the colonies before John Selleck set out.

His large estate was not settled until 1700, when it was distributed among his wife and five children. The inventory lists many parcels of land, including a house and lot "at ye waterside" (Stamford proper), a farm and a house at Runkenheag (Tokeneke in Darien), a mill at Five Mile River, and a house, land and saw mill at Noroton River.

Jonathan Selleck's career was quite different, although in his youth he too must have had some adventurous moments. He was an Indian fighter. From lieutenant in the Stamford "train-band" (infantry), he was promoted to captain in July 1675, and six months later he was commissioned a captain in the Fairfield County Troop (cavalry).

This was at the height of King Philip's War, when the New England colonists were fighting their most desperate Indian war. Connecticut was spared the appalling ravages of fire and massacre, but loyally sent troops to western Massachusetts and Rhode Island to defeat the Indians.

Perhaps Jonathan was wounded, or possibly the authorities were merely preparing for contingencies when they appointed Joseph Judson in 1676 as alternate captain to Selleck's troop "if Captain Selleck be disenabled." In any case, by midsummer King Philip was slain and the war practically over. Jonathan was given a larger grant of land by the town of Stamford as a reward for his services against the Indians.

By October of that same year (1676) he was back in civilian life and representing the town at the fall session of the General Court at Hartford. He may have feared some emergency at home in his absence, for he left a power of attorney with John, "my trusty and well-beloved brother," to act in all ways for him "only excepting the alienating of my real estate."

Ever since 1670 Jonathan had served regularly as a deputy at the semi-annual meetings of the General Court. Like his father-in-law, he became a man of some influence in Connecticut politics and even for some years a member (called Assistant) of the Governor's Council. An historical detective may trace his career easily in the Colonial Records of Connecticut. He had the honor and pleasure to be appointed to several interesting commissions.

The first appointment came at the end of the English war with Holland in 1674, when he was sent with others as a peace messenger to the Dutch garrison that had captured New York. Ten years later he was chosen to meet with representatives from New York to lay out the boundary line that had finally been agreed upon by the two colonies.

The dispute over this boundary dated from the earliest settlements, and continued to be an issue for years, for Jonathan's son Jonathan was commissioned to a group nearly twenty years later to renew the boundary. This was a time when wealth was measured in terms of real estate, and men bought and sold land as they deal in stocks today. The exact boundary lines between individual properties or between towns or colonies were important and often in disagreement.

By 1696 when Jonathan Selleck had been made a major of the Fairfield regiment, the General Court granted him two hundred acres of land "to be taken up so as not to prejuduce any former grant of any township or particular person." He was also appointed to yet another committee to revise a law passed at the preceding session concerning the valuation of money.

The next year he was further honored by being appointed to a commission with the Rev. Mr. Gurdon Saltonstall and the Hon. Major-General Fitz John Winthrop (later Governor of Connecticut). All three were "desired upon notice of the arrivall of his Excellencie the Earl Bellomont to travail to New York in the name of the Governor . . . to congratulate the happy arrivall of his Excellencie."

Having for several years served also as Commissioner (judge) of the local courts of Stamford and Greenwich, Major Selleck was appointed in 1698 as Judge of the Fairfield County Court with an alternate judge to serve in his absence. Although he was only fifty-seven, he must have found it difficult to commute to his court in Fairfield! In consequence, the May session of the General Court only two years later relieved him with this statement:

> "Upon consideration that the Honored Major Sellick is ancient and his living remote from Fairfield the countie town, and he not able to attend the countie courts there; for the ease of said Major Sellick . . . this Assembly order Captain Nathan Gold" — to be made judge."

Nathan Gold, Jr. was the son of Major Selleck's old friend and contemporary.

Although Major Selleck retired from public service, he continued to be active in his own affairs. Presumably, he had carried on the sea trade after his brother's disappearance at sea. He, with his son Jonathan and three other men, had purchased a pink called the "Blossom," built in Stamford by John Mills, "shipwrighte." She was a good sized vessel of seventy-odd tons, and the deed of purchase was dated with a flourish "1691 in the third year of the reign of William and Mary King and Queen of England: Scotland: France and Ireland, etc."

In addition to his shipping trade, Jonathan's extensive real estate holdings must have required increased attention. He and his brother had acquired many acres in Stamford proper and also in the eastern outskirts (now Darien), particularly at Long Neck Point and the Tokeneke area. This was part of the land bought by Stamford (1645) from the Indian chief Piamikin at a cost of four coats and some "tobaca." Richard Law and Andrew Ward signed the deed for the town.

Much of the property acquired by the Sellecks was allotted to them by the town, some was granted by the colonial legislature, and still more acquired by purchase. The pages of the Stamford land records in the 1680s are peppered with sales to John and Jonathan in Runkinheag or Short Rocks, which is now the Tokeneke area. This became known in later years as Sellecks Farms.* The present Tokeneke Road runs through Selleck Woods, so known at the time the trolley line connecting Norwalk and Darien was built. It is doubtful whether John and Jonathan themselves moved from their homes in Stamford to this section, although some of their descendants certainly did.

The Selleck properties were increased and consolidated on the death of their father-in-law, for Richard Law also owned many acres in Darien. These he left evenly divided between his daughters.

Richard Law's documents concerning his property reveal something of the personalities and relationships of this interesting family. They are written in long involved sentences, the compositions of an old and disappointed man. Richard's wife had died and his only son Jonathan had moved from Stamford to Milford, contrary to an early agreement "that my son is unmoveable." The father had given to his son when still a young man (1666) his portion of land, "but meant he should take it on his (Richard's) death." Though "understood by some to be a deed of gift yt cuts myself off from my own land which I never intended" (until after his death). In spite of the quarrel with his son, the father decided later to bequeath more property to him, but requested that he must share with his sisters Abigail and Sarah, a double portion going to the son, a single portion to each daughter "the which is according to divine rule."

By 1686 the old man decided his son should not inherit according to divine rule. He signed an agreement with John and Jonathan dividing all his remaining property between his daughters. In return, the Selleck's "shall keep and maintain him" with all things necessary . . . "condusing to ye comfort of his naturall life so long as he shall live." Mr. Law still "having ye use or benefit of his estate." He must have died within a few months, leaving his daughters' husbands to come to an agreement with Jonathan Law on the settlement of his estate.

That same year (1686) will long be remembered in Connecticut as the only time before or since, when its citizens were forced to abandon self-government. James II had succeeded to the English throne and sent Sir Edmund Andros at once to govern New England, New York and New Jersey as a royal province, and while revoking the early charters, laws and land titles, to substitute arbitrary rule.

This was a thunderclap that aroused tremendous indignation, especially in Connecticut. Getting no cooperation from the colony, Governor Andros himself arrived in Hartford in late October 1687 and called a special meeting of the General Court, which had adjourned only two weeks earlier after its usual fall session. The minutes in the Colonial Record state succinctly that he "took into his hands the Government of this colony of Conecticott, it being by his Majesty annexed to the Massachusetts and other colonys under his Excelencies Government." Andros did not, however, take into his hands the treasured Connecticut Charter. It was whisked from his sight in a moment of darkness and hidden until better times, perhaps in the famous Charter Oak.

There is no record of deputies from Stamford being present at this meeting of the General Court, nor of those in the two preceding years, although Jonathan Selleck and Jonathan Bell had gone to the spring session two years earlier. Was Stamford trying discreetly to avoid taking part in the controversies with Governor Andros?

When news came of King James' flight from England and the coronation of William and Mary early in 1689, Andros was thrown into prison in Boston and all New England rejoiced. Cannon boomed, bells rang and bonfires blazed. This brief taste of royal tyranny was more than enough for independent freemen.

To the confusion of historians, Major Selleck had two sons whom he named Jonathan and John. The former became known as Captain Jonathan Jr. and was probably a sea captain, for there is no record of his being in the militia. He must have spent a good deal of time ashore, for he developed an interest in local affairs like his father and grandfather. For many years he was a Justice of the Peace for Fairfield County. He was also appointed surveyor for the County, and on several occasions was an auditor of the Colony's accounts. Later he served two terms as a deputy from Stamford to the Assembly.

Like their father and his brother, Jonathan Jr. and his younger brother John married sisters, Abigail and Martha Gold (Gould) of Fairfield. As mentioned earlier, the Golds were old friends of Major Selleck and his family.

Before his marriage, young John Selleck had graduated from Harvard (1690). Undoubtedly his father hoped for great things from him. A college education was a rare privilege and usually a preparation for the ministry. But unfortunately John died soon after his marriage. Long afterward, in his will, Jonathan Senior left his library of books, including his son's Harvard textbooks, to the Rev. Mr. John Davenport of Stamford, who was probably almost like another son to the Major, since he had married young John's widow.

Perhaps the clearest picture we will ever have of Major Selleck comes from a delightful letter written by the Rev. Mr. Jeremiah Peck of Greenwich to President Increase Mather of Harvard recommending John Selleck for admission to Harvard:

"Sir, the occasion of the addition of these few lines is to request your favour towards the Son of Captain Jonathan Selleck of Stanford. The Captain himself is a well wisher to good men, and a courteous Gentleman, especially to Ministers, a friend to learning; a man of a good estate, and therefore the better advantaged to carry on such a designe as he hath in part undertaken, that is, the good education of his second Son, in the colledge. There are few set apart for that in these times, especially in our western parts, wherefore, Sir, I make bold to request that encourage [ment] may be given what may be."

Jeremiah Peck felt that he knew the father better than the son, although, as he went on to say:

"The young man hath dwelt in my family a consider[able] time, and I, instead of a better, helped him in his instruction into the Latine tongue: but he hath been from me for severall years partly with Mr. Watson of Hartford, and partly with Mr. Hartman of New Haven. I hope, Sir, he hath made so good a progress that admission to his fellows in the Colledge may be granted to him. I due not know nor have I heard that the young man is given to any vice: but I take him to be of a good naturall temper: and seems to have a good affection for learning . . . ."

The biographical sketch of John Selleck that follows this letter in Sibley's "Harvard Graduates" notes that he received an A.B. degree, while his twenty-two classmates received M.A. degrees. Moreover, John offended frequently against the laws of the college, and in a single quarter had to pay five shillings ninepence for broken windows. What a disappointment to his father, "the friend to learning"!

Jonathan himself died in 1713, he left only grandchildren to inherit his considerable estate.

For their many descendants John and Jonathan Selleck left also an example of courage, resourcefulness and enterprise. They belonged to the first generation of New England born, from whom stems the Yankee tradition.

Jonathan Selleck outlived all of his own immediate family except his sister-in-law. His wife died in 1711, as did his son Jonathan and also his wife. According to Cotton Mather, there was in 1711 "the raging of a mortal sickness in the Colony of Connecticut and the many deaths of our brethren there. Perhaps this epidemic reached the Sellecks. Dear Virginia: [Selleck]

I have finally been able to go through the material sent by John Hugh Selleck of Scarborough, Ontario, and compare it with what I already had. As I said when you were here, we are fortunate to have made contact with him, and he is very likely some kind of cousin of yours.

I have Xeroxed his letter and all the materials he sent you. Some of this information I had, but some is new information. The most valuable item is the one about his ancestor Peter Selleck (#61), the son of Peter Selleck and Martha Whiting. At least we now have a descendant of the Sellecks and Whitings who moved to Oneida County, New York, though we don't know whether this Peter is your ancestor, as well as his. I'm too busy to work on it now, but when I get a chance, I'll have to find out everything I can about Peter and his family.

When you write to Mr. Selleck, you should ask him for other information he has about Peter. Does he have an obituary or a will? Does he have a copy of the material in his Revolutionary War Pension file?

I'm also wondering if he could get for us the title and author of the book about the Selleck family he saw at the library of the New York State Genealogical Society.

As you see, I have sent you two copies of my "family group sheets" on the Selleck line back to David, the immigrant, and a few sheets on the presumed Whiting connection. One set is for you, and the other is for John Hugh in Ontario. I have an idea he will find several new items here he does not have. You might give him my name and address, in case he wants to correspond with me about some of these matters.

Now on another subject, I've begun to read The Chalice and the Blade, but I've only finished the introduction and the first chapter so far. It is very interesting, and I do want to finish it, but because of all the extra work in connection with our trip to England, I'm afraid I won't be able to do so until we return. When do you need it back? Do you want me to send it to you before May and then get it back again later? Just let me know.

Love,

[DEW]

The SELLECK Family and the Clay Industry

About the middle of the last Century a Mr. Phillips who had pioneered the first effort to produce China Clay in Devon, decided to dispose of his works and interest at Lee Moor, Shaugh Piror, then a small hamlet perched high on the southern slopes of Dartmoor about 10 miles north of Plymouth and surrounded by granite hills. The brothers William and Thomas Martin having learnt that the works were in the market, sent their representative John Diamond Cobbledick of St. Austell to investigate the possibilities: having received a favourable report they acquired the option to carry on the business.

The Devon Family Historian, No. 36, Oct, 1985

Very quickly, the production and sale began to rise, and from a few tons per annum, as a result of bold imaginative planning, the works were producing many thousands of tons per year by the end of the century. Full advantage was taken of the natural facilities consequent on geographical position. The clay bed (or sett as it is sometimes called) was sited high and known as Black Alder Mire. Advantage was taken of the altitude and a level or adit driven from the Tory Coombe valley deep into the bed; the clay (in solution) channeled to the refining micas, then on to settling tanks and the Drys or Kilns, all of which were built of the granite hewn from the hills surrounding the site.

Much ingenuity was shown and the law of gravity exploited not only in the washing of the clay from pit to Drys but also in transport to the Port of Plymouth. A light railway was constructed from Lee Moor to Laira Wharf, Prince Rock, Plymouth. The drop in altitude was too great to get a graded run right through, so means had to be devised to negotiate the steep gradient between Cann Wood and Plym Bridge, here a simple, but effective plan was put into operation. By means of a large winding drum with about two miles of rope wound around it, one end being attached to the trucks about to descend, the other end to those at the bottom of the incline — thus the down load hauled the up load. Horses were then used to haul the trucks to the Wharf, or to the Railway siding. (The line is still in being, but has been out of use for many years). All wagons and most of the material effectives for the construction and maintenance of these light railways were designed and built in the workshops at Lee Moor, where a staff of men were housed and employed carpenters, and smiths, who took pride in turning out a really efficient standard job and were also versatile in their various trades and expected to be equal to emergencies, which from time to time arose during the development of the industry.

Distance from the foundries and engineering establishments, made it almost imperative for the firm to be practically self-contained. This necessitated the bulk buying of timber for the many and varied needs of the works and the maintenance of communications of the Port. Teams of horses driven by men experienced in the art of timber hauling were employed practically full time, to bring trees to the saw mills, all of which were selected and measured for payment by the Architect — Engineer — Surveyor — Manager — Capt. John Diamond Cobbledick and later by his trainee Mr. James Bettes: 'Necessity', or was it 'opportunity?' brought out the sterling pioneering qualities in these men. Lee Moor thus became in every sense a self-contained community and the Martin brothers with their staff, executive and operative, trained on the spot put Lee Moor on the China Clay Map for all time.

Situated as it was, three miles respectively from Cornwood to the east and Shaugh Prior to the west, five from Plympton to the south with the wide open spaces of Dartmoor to the north, it will be realised how complete was its isolation in the days when the only means of transport were horse drawn vehicles. All food supplies had to be brought by road. The firm traded with the employees for a time, but eventually a Cooperative Store was opened, sponsored by the men themselves and run by a committee of men, whose names are remembered to-day — Plymouth Co-operative Society now run the business.

A Methodist (Wesleyan) Chapel and a Mission Church (Anglican) were built on the site of what was once the old Phillips brick making works; underneath the Wesleyan Chapel on the ground floor is the Day School, all these buildings within a stone's throw of each other.

Having recorded this brief history of the development of the industry, I now propose to give a description in perspective, of life in such a community. I crave the indulgence of my readers (and especially my contemporaries) should I overstate or understate any particular subject under review and in the language of Lincoln — 'With charity to all and malice toward none'. I propose in a conversational, informal manner to proceed.

Lee Moor was a wonderful place to live in those days - well over a hundred children attended the Wesleyan Sunday School with a staff of over twenty teachers taking bi-weekly turns 10 to 11 a.m. and 2.30 to 4 p.m. Over sixty men could be seen at the morning service at 11 o'clock and at the evening service often 150 people crowded into the little Chapel to hear the preacher who was usually a 'Local'; we had a regular Minister about once a month. The choir stalls were always filled and did they sing! James Bettes, Joe Manhire, George Selleck, Peter Phillips, Dick Short, Bob Gulley, John Selleck, Jack Tope, in the Bass section; James Bray, Chris Selleck, Jack Quest, John Lavers — Tenor section. Dear old Simeon Lavers with his violin, and all those wonderful girls in the treble section. I was privileged at a very early age to sing in the Alto section with Maud Manhire, Bessie Loram and others. What a wonderful time we had Anniversary Sunday then 'June Tay' (Tea) on the Monday following. Sunday School Anniversary services were a real Festival of Praises — Chapel packed to capacity, aisles, pulpit steps, choir steps, every inch of space occupied and often an overflow of scores of people too late to get inside. What a day! All the little 'tackers' — boys and girls, the older lads and lassies and the courting couples, parents and friends from the surrounding villages all united to swell the glad song. Most of the parents contrived to fit us little ones out in new suits and dresses for that day. What a show! Picture hats for the girls and usually a wide stiff collar stuck under our chins for the boys. I remember we sang 'Brightly gleams our Banner pointing to the sky' (my collar certainly kept me looking in that direction), another which always lives with me was 'Love is the Keynote, Life is the Song'. We always had the first prize Yorkshire tune for each year and to the lasting credit of Mr. and Mrs. Bettes (Choir Master and Organist respectively) — that they produced a wonderful result in the training of children and choir. Then with intense longing and excitement we waited for the dawn of the next day — Anniversary Monday and June Tay was the great social event of the year. The children paraded through the village. Sitting after sitting of people would satisfy their appetites and tell their tales. Then the younger ones would go down to the Green (just above Tory Coombe Gate) to indulge in games — 'Kiss in the Ring' and 'Two's and Three's' were the first favourites, and many a romance had a beginning in the twilight of 'June Tay' day. We youngsters would strain our eyes to see the various arrivals, somebody from Tory Coombe would report that they had seen 'Cheap Jack', 'Penny Dip', 'Coconut Shies', 'Oliver's Sweet Stall outfit', or 'Lyons' with his fruit stall — Billy Dip in later years. Someone else with the 'Hobby Horses' —another with what was called 'Ladies Teasers' — (tubes made of lead filled with water) with which the more adventurous 'roughs' of about nine would bombard the 'Kiss'N Ring' — needless to say obstructing kissing operations. Sad to say, it was a much depleted choir which gathered for the Monday evening Service especially in the soprano and alto sections. (I learned why as the years rolled on). These Village Methodist tea drinks had to be experienced to be appreciated. How we looked forward to the time when we were old enough to be 'Appointed' by the Sunday School Committee to carry the hot water in those tin kettles around to the various tea tables at which presided Mrs. or Miss Blackler, Lillicrap, Beable, Bawden, Lee, Colton, Loram, Manhire, Hore, Bray, Trethewey, Bettes, Phillips, Head, Elford, Jenkins, Lavers, Pillage, Quest, Ryan, Wilcox, Brooking, Luscombe, Osborne, Hicks, Hambly, Short, Servombe, Mumford, Selleck, Tall, Roberts, McBean, Gill or Solomon were 'Appointed' to preside. These scenes were repeated in a lesser measure at Whitsun and Easter: 'Band of Hope' and 'Mission Band' teas, then Harvest Festival tea. What a glorious time was this. Saturday afternoon and evening; the fruit and vegetables, flowers etc. would be received by the ladies who had just the knack of arranging so beautifully those gifts of our Heavenly Father. I still retain the memory of the aroma from the apples, pears and the other fruit and flowers. We lived very near Heaven in those grand moments when those glorious traditional Harvest hymns were sung. The full throated resonant bass of Lee Moor choir in 'Come ye thankful people come' and the unison and heavenly harmony was something I do not expect to hear the like of this side of Heaven. 'There were Giants' in those days in the pulpits of Methodism, not 'Preacherettes' giving 'sermonettes' to 'Christianettes'. The Ebenezer Circuit of which Lee Moor was one of the outposts could boast of wonderful men of God. Among the Ministers outstanding were —J.S Hicks, C.T. Horne, Isaac Shimmin Clifford Caddy, T. Caddy and many others. The local preachers too, could hold boys' and girls' attention for 45 minutes to an hour. There were Isaac Foot Senior, Henry Lawry, W.W. Lucas, James L. Nash, young 'Ikey' Foot, (now the Rt. Hon. Isaac Foot P.C.) Andrew Skardon, Messrs. Skinner, J. Motley, W. Gerry, who played the organ and also preached the sermon when Mrs. Bettes was on holiday. Then the Lee Moor men: Lot Hoare, James Bettes and Sam Trevan — that theological notable John Mumford — these men all by their faithful testimony helped to shape and direct under God the lives of others who followed in their steps.

'Ikey' Foot was always outstanding in insistence on the rightness of practical Christianity in national as well as local Church life and the story of Lee Moor would not be complete unless we recorded the impact of his preaching, speeches, lectures, and example. When he preached we were uplifted spiritually. When he lectured we were benefited educationally. If he came to the district to speak on a political subject, even opponents were informed and edified. His lecture on Abraham Lincoln gave a distinct bias to my political thinking. The Boar War which people thought started as a brief military operation but ended by being perilously near a major war clouded our horizon. The political rendezvous in those days was the Co-op store. I remember when the newspapers arrived in the mornings the older men would discuss the news and the respective merits and demerits of 'Daily Mercury', or 'Morning News'. Mr. Harris the Co-op Manager would act as Chairman, while a wordy dual would proceed. Ben Trethewey, John Mumford, 'Ganger' Lilicrap and others would argue in favour or against 'Imperialism'. The more adventurous spirits would run the risk of being called 'pro-Boers': and we small boys were rather mystified when John H. Mumford was said to have 'abdicated Piety' in favour of political expediency, when he came out as a Liberal Imperialist. In the late 1890's Mr Reader Harris Q.C. founded the 'Pentecostal League of Prayer'. My father became the first leader of the 'Centre'. This was designed to be an interdenominational and international organisation with the object of strengthening spiritual life in all the Churches. A Centre was formed by something over a dozen praying Christians, the meeting of the League took place at 8 a.m. on Sundays. This proved to be a great Spiritual asset to our Church and was certainly a Spiritual 'Power House'. I think of many outstanding Christians who were members of this Centre. One of the most memorable personalities was Jack Quest 'Click' as he was affectionately known. As a young man, he was exceptionally strong and we small boys would wonder in real amazement at the weights he could lift. He was, however, destined to become one of the 'strongest' examples of patience: in sickness and adversity it was ever my privilege to witness. Early in his young manhood he developed a malady known as Rheumatic-chalk-gout, which rendered him immobile. He lay like a human log for years with a face radiant with the joy of the Lord despite the excrutiating pain he must have suffered. The chalk would ooze from every joint and knuckle in the form of a paste. Sometimes he would become unconscious as the brain was temporarily affected. I remember very vividly when my friend Frank Trethewey and I kept vigil through the night, how with the breaking of the dawn Jack roused suddenly from his state of coma and exclaimed: 'Frank Arthur, Rays from the Sun of Righteousness have healing in his wings' — his face shining his voice ringing with an heavenly ecstasy. He had a cheery word for everyone who came to see him. What an example of love and fortitude was his dear wife who consistently and continually ministered to his needs, and those of their three children — the effect of the impact of the life of Jack Quest on the spiritual life of many beside myself cannot be assessed by us. As we have already stated Lee Moor was then an isolated and self-contained community. Most of the workmen who lived in the twin villages of Lee Moor and Tory Coombe had their garden and allotment. Almost every householder kept pigs and poultry — many others kept a cow — the Dartmoor pony was also bred and kept in quite large numbers. Nearly everybody possessed a quite smart pony and turnout either Dogcart or Jingle. In the old days it was quite an occasion when the farmers led by Farmer Tom Selleck drove the ponies 'Drift' of Shaugh Moor to Neil Gate and then corralled them in one of the fields where indentification by the various owners took place. Many scores of these animals were then driven by the Lee Moor owners back to the village for a branding mark to be applied and to those which were turned out on the moor again for breeding. Some being retained for sale to dealers who came to buy them for use in the coal mines etc.

August Bank Holiday for many years — a great day for Lee Moor. The local pony show took place in a field known as 'Company Park.' Classes for trotting, riding or driving pony would be well filled and competition keen and some outstanding animals were always to be seen, despite of course the fact that a fair proportion were something like 'Modbury Dancing' — not very neat but strong. The musical programme on these occasions was provided by 'Tinker Bray Band'. The 'Bombardon' as we were told it was called — that is —the Big Bass, was blown by 'Tinker' himself. His son George, the cornet, his son Ned, the trombone — these were all outstanding performers. 'Tinker' could always be depended on to produce that deep resonant bass note from the bowels of that weird instrument which had been bruised and dented over most of its surface — making any attempt at polishing impossible. Although some of his Lee Moor critics insisted that he was sometimes a scat behind the rest. One of the fascinating things to me was to watch Ned Bray blowing the trombone. How marvellously his cheeks would stretch — he seemed to distend his facial features to such an extent that we small boys would wonder when he would burst. But he would go on serenely producing those rolling notes. George Bray was a great hero because every small boy wanted to blow the cornet and as we listened to him he always seemed to come in at the right time to save an awkward situation and to us he was only second to Gabriel. There were of course quite a range of other players filling in the harmony. There is a story that on one of the very rare occasions the band was engaged away from home to supply music at the celebrations at Plympton of the local Friendly Societies. The big drummer — Bill MacBean who was small of stature went on flogging the drum for quite a distance towards Plympton St. Mary Bridge while the band turned left at Dark Street Lane, but I could not vouch for the varacity of this report. However, 'Tinker' Bray's band was quite an institution and the Band of the Royal Marines could not have been more important to us. 'Tinker' Bray and 'Jubal Cain' (Genesis 4 v. 21 & 22) as they were artificers in metals and also music makers.

This Bray family was not related to that of Capt. John Bray who became works manager at the time of my Grandfather Cap'n John Diamond Cobbledick passed from this scene of action in 1891. The above Cap'n John Bray was appointed to take his place; my father Christopher Robert Henry Selleck — lately returned from America but previously trained at Lee Moor — became second in the management. The senior of the firm 'Martin Bros.' Mr. William Martin also died about this time and so the old order changed. At the turn of the century there was a greatly increased demand for china clay and investors were very keen to acquire 'setts'. The Lee Moor group was producing every increasing quantities. The main Lee Moor Pit then 40 acres in area, the Cholwichtown Pit and the New Whitehill-Yeo Pit was then in full production but the Wotter Pit on the western side had been abandoned. In September 1901 my father re-opened Wotter which caused rather more than a 'nine days wonder', that he should have the audacity to re-start a works declared uneconomic, redundant and worked out by his former employers; they said he was heading for disaster and they were nearly right. The 'Epic Struggle' began. Father Chris, C.R.R. or Cap'n Chrissy as he was variously known packed his belongings on the carts behind Shamrock —the old grey mare — and Tommy horse (the latter a family friend for many years after) — and trundled over Highboro' hill together with nine of us — 6 boys and 3 girls — Mother who was the most wonderful home-maker soon settled us in at Wotter House, for a time we shared the house with the Elliott family who went to Perks Farm, Shaugh Prior. My father, who soon found his slender capital stretched to capacity, acquired a second-hand traction engine and trucks from a local firm of brick-makers to haul the clay to the Railway Station. A few other oddments of equipment: then with about four or five men and his own family got down to the job. Then trouble came on trouble. As already indicated china clay production depends on adequate supplies of water. The water for the group (Cholwichtown, Whitehill Yeo, Lee Moor and Wotter) was drawn from the upper reaches of the Cad near Trowlesworthy. We found the life line was cut — the stream had been diverted at Lee Moor. Means were then devised to collect water on our own limited watershed: ponds (reservoirs) had to be constructed to try to meet the situation.

Our next major problem was difficulties of transport. The roads over Dartmoor in those days were little more than bridle paths, and to drive a traction engine laden with two ten-ton trucks of clay was asking too much and were thus landed into trouble with the Plympton R.D.C. Our local neighbours also. In seeking alternative routes we tried the roads to Bickleigh, Cornwood and Plympton Railway Stations. (The law required us to employ a man with a red flag to walk in front.) I remember one memorable morning going out to play from the school at Lee Moor when we all rushed out to the road to see our engine complete with guard and red flag coming down the road toward Tory Coombe — quite an impressive crowd had gathered when Cap'n Bray acting under orders forbade the driver, my brother Chris to proceed any further over that section of the road. But necessity called for desperate measures and after what was mostly unintelligible conversation, Chris 'naughty boy' after opening the cylinder drains which enveloped Cap'n in a cloud of steam drove on his desperate journey. Cap'n when thus forced to retire was heard to remark: 'They'm do'n it in defiance'. Needless to say the name of that engine from that time was 'Defiance'. However, a few years afterwards the two families celebrated the marriage of my brother Chris to Cap'n Bray's daughter Mabel so time healed the breach. We then stuck to the Cornwood road — but what a shambles! My father now had to face a hostile district council and when challenged as to what he proposed to do about this four to five miles of road he promptly replied that he proposed to repair it — to say the least this seemed an impossible task, but we tackled it; and literally thousands of tons of stone of 'Stent' as it was locally called were raised by us — hauled and rolled in by our engines over this section from Wotter to Cornwood free of charge to the R.D.C. With such traffic strain on our engines break-downs were frequent and it seemed as if the limit must soon be reached. One evening on his way home through Lee Moor my Father was led to go and see bedridden Jack Quest. Jack had not been able to meet at the Sunday morning 8 o'clock Prayer Meeting for some time so, Father felt it his duty to see him. Jack relates the conversation:

'Well Chris, how is it with you.' 'Not too good Jack, bit of a headache (small wonder). Engine broke down today.' 'You're going through it Chris —wish I could help. Never mind Chris (reaching for his Bible) read the 37th Psalm.' So he read as far as verse 25. 'I have been young, and now I am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread.' Said Chris to me some time after — 'I don't know exactly why but he seemed to have a lump in his throat and couldn't read on for a little while.' I know and we all know that things had become so tight that we had not the power to stave off poverty much longer. Frugality and thrift had been the order for five long years — but he read on, prayed on and worked on, he was not forsaken and those who knew them, will know that his seed are not begging bread. But how dark was that hour before the dawn. Only those who went through it will ever know. We members of the family were variously employed on jobs where we could contribute most to the common good. My brother John trained at Lee Moor in all branches of the Smith's trade in addition to making necessary ironwork for the development of the works, continued to earn something extra by making and repairing implements and shoeing horses for local farmers; there was no eight hour limit to our days. Chris had to spend most of his time as a mechanical engineer, repairing engines, designing gadgets to make things run more smoothly on the works. Will at 15 years of age went on the Traction as driver. I have known him work the 24 hours round the clock if it happened we had to load a cargo boat. Our problems piled up as we proceeded, one of our particular problems at this time was how to use the water at our disposal, the old Cornish way was to let the water trickle over the top of the 'Stope' (clay bed) having broken the surface with 'Dubbers' (wide bladed picks) at an angle of about 45 degrees from bottom of the pit to the top edge of the 'Stope' one man would break a 'Strake' of say 10' to 15' in width. We found at Wotter that our 'Stope' was getting very thin, and the clay touch, (not friable). The water would run clear instead of taking away the clay in solution.

My father by this time has been elected to Plympton Council, came home from Plympton, having made a few observations on the pressure needed to send water from a fire hose to the top of a burning house, expressed the opinion to my brothers that water pressure was the answer to our washing problems. Chris got to work on this and I remember the water was impounded in earthenware 2½" drain pipes for quite a long distance then fed into iron pipes on the lower levels where pressure was highest making the best of the materials (a job lot) at his disposal. The experiment proved successful and we established the method in common use today. Within two years we were repeating the stream by centrifugal pumps at 100 lb. pressure per square inch. thus again; 'Necessity was the mother of invention' or shall we say Application. The above related incident took place in 1905. My Father had formed a limited company Selleck & Sons Ltd. but economic necessity made confusion worse confounded and our policy was shaped accordingly.

Then suddenly on a Sunday morning, came the answer to our prayers. For some unaccountable reason (to us) 'Cap'n Chrissy' was called out of the Sunday Morning service at Lee Moor. Was someone ill? What had happened?

It happened on this wise:-

Messrs. Punchard, Stewart and Vivien, three successful speculators in Malayan Rubber were looking for a China Clay 'Sett' and wished to do business with my Father on the spot. He respectfully but firmly refused to do this on the Lord's Day, but arranged to meet them on the morrow. They met, the die was cast, the deal was made, and the new era for Wotter began in 1906; the 'Dartmoor China Clay Co.' was formed. This marked the beginning of a great advancement. China Clay (Kaolin) was found to have much wider potential uses than merely as a filling agent in cotton manufacturing, paper making, or the actual making of china or pottery, chemical research proved the possibility of the production of colloidal clays which were in ready demand. Wotter was soon producing this particular brand in this field known as 'Catalpo'. Drys were constructed at Marsh Mills near Plymouth and a pipeline laid to convey the clay in solution. The scheme instituted by my Father, obviated the further use of expensive mechanical transport — there was of course a period of years during which we had to continue hauling clay over the long and tortuous route to Cornwood Station.

This great burst of activity made it necessary to build houses for the workmen, thus we witnessed the birth of a village; (previously only three houses existed between Shaugh Prior and Lee Moor. They were Wotter Farm, Wotter House and Collard Tor. The period 1906-14 was one of great prosperity in the industry, in Lee Moor District, all the pits in full production; Cholwichtown, Whitehill, Yeo, Lee Moor, Wotter, Hemerdon, Smallhanger, Headon and Shaugh Lake.

It will be seen from the above that the Selleck family made many contributions to the Clay Industry. A Summary of those would include the following:-

1901 Formation C.R.H. Selleck & Sons. This Company was registered to produce China Clay from a disused works at Wotter previously owned by Martin Bros. Ltd. The latter still owned the Lee Moor Works. C.R.H. Selleck and his six sons were directly responsible for the following developments :-

1. The use of road transport (i.e. the steam engine) to convey the clay to the rail head at Cornwood Station.
2. The patenting of the C. Selleck (second son) patent steam cylindrical valve which was an improvement on the slide valve fitted to the Aveling engine first used.
3. The use (in 1905) of a pressurised water system to extract the clay. The shortage of water necessitated the re-use of the supply. This was the origin of the present system of centrifugal monitors and even at this early stage a pressure of 100 lbs. per sq. in. was achieved.
4. About 1906 the Dartmoor China Clay Company was formed with C.R.H. Selleck and Sons as Managers. Will Selleck, 3rd son later became the sole Manager and continued in that capacity for approximately 25 years. For the first time ever clay was piped. The pipe ran from the Wotter Works to Marsh Mills and is stil in existence today.
5. Shortly after the 1914-18 War the fifth son, Claude Selleck, moved to Cornwall and at the age of 15 took over the running of Carbis Clay Works followed by Great Treverbyn. His main contribution to the industry was the devising of a process for bleaching clay. This proved extremely valuable and, after considerable negotiations, it was purchased by E.C.L.P. and Claude Selleck became a Director of that Company.
   This had far reaching results as Selleck Nicholls was taken over at this time and consequently the parent Company found itself involved in the post war housing crisis which Selleck Nicholls' 'Cornish Unit' did so much to solve.

As is well known the then Minister of Housing — Aneurin Bevan —leant heavily on Claude Selleck to enable his housing target to be reached and when this was achieved a knighthood was bestowed on John Keay, the Chairman of the parent Company.

The Early History of Southampton, L.I., New York, with Genealogies, Rev. Regus Howell

Pp. 106 & 107

"5. Joseph Whiting.

"Mr. Whiting was the son of the Rev. Mr. Whiting, the first minister of Lynn, Mass. He was born April 6, 1641, graduated at Harvard in 1661, and assisted his father several years and was installed as his successor in 1679. He was twice married — first to Sarah, d. of Hon. Thomas Danforth, Deputy Governor of Mass., and president of Maine; and again to Rebecca, who died April 21, 1726.

"On the 27th day of June, 1682, a committee were appointed to go to Lynn, Mass., to invite Mr. Whiting to come over and preach to the Southampton people on trial. It is not certain when he first came, but probably in 1683.

"In 1686 we find an 'agreement' with him in relation to his salary, an abstract of which is here given.

"1. £100 per annum to be paid in same manner as Mr. Taylor's.

"2. Use of the Parsonage and four acres and a 150 of commonage.

"3. If he continue till his decease, in the ministry in this Town, then his widow is to have from the town £100 in money and merchantable produce.

"His labors in the ministry must have been acceptable to the people since he continued with them till the infirmities of age demanded a cessation of labor. His pastorate covered about 33 years, and his death occurred April 7th, 1723, in the 82nd year of his age. He sleeps among his flock in the old burying ground, and with them awaits his resurrection to eternal life."

Pp. 99-100

"The church of Southampton, as might be expected from the character and associations of the settlers, was at first Independent. - - - - - The church continued under this form of Independency until 1716. - - - -

"In Sept. 1716, a call addressed to the Rev. Samuel Gelston was laid before the Presbytery of Philadelphia, which was the only ecclesiastical body of that denomination in this country at that time, and had been organized about 1706. Doubtless the Rev. Joseph Whiting, who at this time retired from active duty in the ministry, and who still lived among the people of his charge in Southampton till his death in 1723, assisted in leading the congregation to make this change of connection. In this call the congregation of Southampton promise 'to subject themselves to the Presbytery in the Lord.' - - - The church of Southampton having thus united with the Presbyterian body has remained ever since in connection with the same."

agreed "that such men of our inhabitants as doe goe to cutt hay on the other side Five-Mile river the town will stand by." Two years after this, Sept. 30, 1668, Norwalk voted that the Deputies "shall do their best indevor" to bring about a settlement of the vexed subject. Stamford reciprocated and empowered Richard Law, Francis Bell and John Holly to "treat" with Norwalk men. Two years later Norwalk made advances toward a "loving and neighborly issu and agreement." Stamford's title ranked in point of age that of Norwalk, and the final outcome was that that sister settlement gained the day, and Norwalk's southwestern line was left about as Partrick had established it. North somewhat from this southwest point the ancient line took a northwesterly course, embracing what is now West Norwalk, and from thence still northwest, passing to the west of Haynes' Ridge in Canaan parish, and continuing until Pound Ridge was entered and embraced where the line ended in that of the province of New York.

THE OBLONG.

This term is the designation of the debatable lands that lay north of the present boundaries of the townships of New Canaan and Stamford, and west of the Ridgefield line. The ownership-dispute of this romantic region was first occasioned through failure on the parts of the Dutch and English to definitely establish the separation line between the New York and Connecticut colonies. There seemed to have been some Dutch and English understanding in 1654, in which Norwalk was interested, in so far as its "twelve miles north" possessions were concerned. On Oct. 13, 1664, the Court at Hartford sent the Connecticut Governor, with four attendants, to congratulate the English upon their occupancy of what had heretofore been Dutch territory and to, if possible, come to an agreement New York and Connecticut boundary-wise. The parties met, and on Dec. 1, following, signed articles that conveyed to Connecticut all the land east of a north and south line drawn twenty miles east of the Hudson River. This appears to have been a piece of bungling, as it was subsequently ascertained that on account of the course of the Hudson, such a line would give Connecticut possession, at one point, to the Hudson's very banks. The Dutch, after a time, regained a footing in New York, and now all previous agreements were null. In 1683 another agreement was made, and 61,440 acres went to Connecticut. This was not entirely satisfactory either, and for two hundred years there has been more or less dispute.[1] Finally, the matter has been settled, and as Norwalk had parted with that portion of its territory bordering upon the so-called Oblong to its daughter all this the caller at the house to-day will discover the chimney, from the crane of which hung the kettle of always ready "steeping" water.

[1] In 1717 New York was asked to define just where the line lay, and Norwalk, at a town meeting held Feb. 1, 1726, granted liberty to such of its Oblong citizens "that had lands taken away from them" by this new line, "to take up ye same in any of the unsequestered common lands in the township of Norwalk." Alexander Ressigue was effected by this recent New York change, and on Feb. 19, 1729–30, John Stewart relinquished three-and-a-half Norwalk acres cut off "nigh unto York line on ye Pound Ridge." Pound Ridge now belongs altogether to the State of New York.

A portion of what is, in 1896, known as the Selleck house, on West Avenue, is of ante-revolutionary date. It was originally Belden property, and belonged to the fourteen acre homestead of John and Rebecca (Bartlett) Belden. After the parents' day, it fell to the ownership of their children, four of whom, Mary Esther, Sarah, Amos and Henry, sold on March 18, 1796, their share in the estate (two-thirds) to their brothers Isaac and John, who divided the fourteen acres between themselves, Isaac taking the south half and John the north portion. Isaac married the daughter of one of Norwalk's principal men of those earlier and more simple days, Matthew Reed, and lived in what is now known as the DeKlyn house. John was unmarried and resided in what is to-day the Selleck house. After John Belden's use of the premises, his brother Henry occupied the same for a time, and he, at the instigation of his wife, erected the milk-house addition which is to-day observed on the north side. The back roof at that time ran almost to the ground, and under its west section, floored with stone, was kept the wood for winter, but the space was reserved in summer for a "cooling" place in a hot day. The Beldens' rights in the property were finally bought out by Frederick St. John, son of William St. John and brother of Mrs. Col. Buckingham Lockwood. He had married Harriet, daughter of John Cannon, but had no children. He there lived and died, when the house and lot became the purchase of the widow of Zalmon Selleck, the mother of the present owner of the property, Mrs. Wm. K. James.[1] Mr. Selleck died in the South, leaving a widow and two children, one of whom, Henry, also died away from home, and the fine old place fell, consequently, to the mother and daughter, who there resided in great comfort. The building was set on fire by Garth's wing of Tryon's army, but as the men were hastening to cross the stream-rocks (site of iron bridge on Cross Street 1896) to join Tryon's forces, the house was probably left as soon as the torch had been applied, and was on that account, partially saved. After the conflagation a small building that stood on the Westport road was moved and made to become a part of the original Belden building.

Another existing ante-revolutionary home is that of the lower Main Street Hoyt sisters and brothers. On May 15, 1764, Goold Hoyt, Sr., paid Capt. Josiah Thatcher, who then owned the old Whitney mill, £47-15s. for a lot of one-half acre and fifteen poles area and situated on "mill plain," now Main Street. Here Mr. Hoyt was to build the homey

[1]Mrs. James was there born. After her father's decease, and before her mother came permanently to occupy the house, it had a succession of professional tenants. Lawyer Alfred Apollos Holly, of Stamford and his wife Charlotte, daughter of Judge Chapman of Litchfield, resided there. Dr. John Adams McLean and his first wife, Catherine Hawley of Bridgeport, followed Mr. Holly. Subsequently David C. Sanford, a lawyer and his wife, a daughter of Ozias Seymour of Litchfield, and a sister of Judge Origen S. Seymour of that place, there tenanted, and Mrs. Seymour died there. (Mr. Sanford married,[2d.], a sister of Rev. Edward Bull, once rector of Christ Church, Westport.) After Mr. Seymour's occupancy of the house, Moses Craft and his wife Esther Mary (Cannon) Craft there lived, and after Mr. Craft Rev. Sylvester Eaton, the seventh Congregational pastor of Norwalk.

For Sension or St. John, English descent, see Home-Lot No. 22.

It will be observed that Mark St. John had only one son, Joseph 1st. It is through Joseph 2d. (son of Joseph 1st.) who married into one of the strongest families of New England, that the Norwalk Buckingham Lockwoods, Buckingham St. Johns, Sherrys and Skiddys derive their Hooker blood, and it is through Sarah, sister of Joseph 1st, who married Samuel Keeler, that the Seymour's and Van Buren's of this town, and the New York Chancellor, John Ray[1] affinity, derive their St. John blood. All of Mark St. John's children were by his first wife. He married, second, the widow, Dorothy Hall, of Stratford. The widow Hall was a daughter of Rev. Henry Smith of Wethersfield, Conn. She had previously married, as his second wife, Francis Hall, one of a company of "select young men," who came in 1639, from Kent County, England, to Guilford, Conn. Mr. Hall made his way eventually to Fairfield, where he founded "Hall's Farm." Here his first wife, Elizabeth, died, and here he married Dorothy nee Smith. Orcutt's History of Stratford mentions that Dorothy Smith married, before the Hall union, John, son of Rev. Adam Blakeman of Stratford. If so, she was three times wedded, as after Mark St. John's death, in 1693, she married Isaac More, once of Norwalk, but now of Farmington, the same from whom Mr. St. John bought his Home-Lot No. 16. She herself deceased in 1706.

[1]He was grandfather of the wife of Rev. Geo. W. Nichols of West Avenue, (1896). Chancellor Ray married Elsie, daughter of the Knickerbocker Jacobus Roosevelt, and had a daughter Elsie, who married Henry Lott. It was for this daughter's inheritance in the extensive Norwalk Keeler estate that the Chancellor interested himself and his friend Gov. Tompkins of New York. His two Lott grand-daughters, Elizabeth (Mrs. G. W. Nichols) and Helen (Mrs. Richard Schell) were accustomed in earlier New York days to have their horses put under saddle, and to join an afternoon party, the members of which would gaily gallop down Broadway to the East River, and thence, after ferriage, resume their ride to the Flatbush, Judge John A. Lott's family seat, from whence, after partaking of supper at tables silver spread, would return, at delightful summer nightfall, to town again. Elsie, Mrs. Lott, was wont to tell her children of the dwelling of a descendant of one of Norwalk's distinguished mothers, which stood in Queen, now Pearl, and not far from Pine Street. It was one of a trio of structures which, because of their marking a city architecture-period, Mrs. Lott would describe as before said. The buildings were of brick, expensively finished in hard wood, and one of them in black walnut, having its parlors on the second floor, reached by a stairway and balustrade that would grace any abode to-day, and its breakfast-room leading from the first-story hall, that opened on Pearl Street. The three residences were the abodes of comfort-elegance, and the head of the one that has been more particularly mentioned, was Capt. Isaac Bell 2d., a patron of Dr. Reuben Sherwood's Norwalk School, and himself of ancient Norwalk blood. Isaac Bell 1st., born Sept. 20, 1736, son of James and Sarah Bell, and great-grandson of Lieut. Francis Bell, the Stamford settler, married, first, Jemima Holly, and had two children, Katharine 1st., who died young, and Hannah. Hannah was a trifle over two years old when she lost her mother. Between one-and-a-half and two years after that event, her father, on Sept. 14, 1761, married, second, Susannah Smith, grand-daughter of John and Elizabeth Bartlett, and great-grand-daughter of (see Haynes lineage) Mr. William Haynes of "Haynes' Ridge," Norwalk (now New Canaan).

Mrs. Susanna Bell's grd. father (John Bartlett, the father by his second wife of Mrs. John Belden, who was mother of John, Isaac and Amos,) was a large land owner, and had three distinct Norwalk land parcels bearing his name. Her gr.-grandfather, William Haynes, was a colonial "Mr." but one of the titled New England gentlemen whose early pedigree is mystery-shrowded. He came to Norwalk from the vicinity, evidently, of Albany, but thence from whence,

The St. John-Hall ante-nuptial covenant is recorded in the Probate Register of Fairfield County. The following is the text:

"THIS INDENTURE, made between Mark Sension and Dorothy Hall of Stratford, widow, Witnesseth, That whereas there is a purpose of marriage between Mark Sension and Dorothy, they have consented and agreed, in case of marriage, as followeth: Imprimis. That Mark Sension will lay no claim to the estate that Dorothy Hall now possesseth, whether in lands or movables, but that it shall be in the power of Dorothy Hall, after marriage, to improve it, as she shall see cause, without any let from Mark Sension; but in case Dorothy Hall shall see cause to carry with her any part of the movable effects, Mark Sension binds himself and his heirs to return the same at the full value thereof, to her or to her executors, when either of them shall dye.

"Dorothy Hall doth covenant with Mark Sension that she will not, at his death, lay any claim to any part of his estate that he now possesseth, as a dowry, but will, when a widow, return to her own that she hath now in possession in Stratford.

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, both parties have affixed their hands and seals. Dated this twenty-fifth of January, sixteen hundred ninety-one or two.

Signed, sealed and delivered in presence of

JOSEPH CURTIS, MARK SENSION, EBENEZER BOOTHE. DOROTHY HALL."

A MARK ST. JOHN DESCENT MENTION.

no one as yet seems able to positively determine. The forefather of the bankers Fitch of Milwaukee, Wis., who are also of Haynes descent, claims, in a record now about a half-century old, that William Haynes of Norwalk and John Haynes of Copford Hall (afterward Gov. John Haynes of Hartford) were connected if not related, but Grant Fitch, of Newton, N. J., seventh son of Haynes, nephew of Gov. Thos. Fitch of Norwalk, presents no authority for the assertion.

The father of Mrs. Isaac Bell[1st.] was one of the sons of Ebenezer and Abigail (Bouton) Smith, and of the line of Lieut. Samuel Smith, the 1634 settler of Windsor. He was some few years the senior of his wife, she having been born after 1705-6. They had a family of well known Conn. and N.Y. descendants, and their daughter, after her marriage to Isaac Bell,[1st.] removed to the provinces. Mr. Bell's son Isaac (Capt. Isaac) born Feb. 16, 1768, married Mary Ellis, daughter of old-time merchant Ellis of New York, and these were the occupants of the Pearl Street premises before mentioned. Mrs. Isaac Bell[2d.] spent considerable time in Europe. She occasionally came to Norwalk to visit her son. Isaac[3d.] and his sister Mary E. were pupils at Rev. Dr. Reuben Sherwood's academy in this town. The sister was somewhat delicate, but her brother's physical strength and glowing health are to this day here remembered. The young Isaac Bell[3d.] of Dr. Sherwood's day, was the more immediate ancestor of the present N. Y. City Bells.

Hannah Bell, born Dec. 10, 1758, daughter of Isaac Bell and Jemima Holly, married Fitch, son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth (Fitch) Rogers (see Haynes lineage) of Norwalk. These had a son, Fitch Rogers, Jr., who married Mary, daughter of Rev. Daniel Smith, long the Congregational pastor of Stamford. There were no children by this union. Fitch Rogers, Jr., had a sister Catherine, who married Rev. Reuben Sherwood, D.D., rector of St. Paul's Church, Norwalk, from 1818 to 1830. Mrs. Sherwood was a woman of presence and character, and highly graced her position. Her daughter, Miss Catherine Sherwood, now resides at Hyde Park on-the-Hudson. Henry, second son of Fitch and Hannah (Bell) Rogers, died unmarried. Her sister Harriet married John Winthrop, one of the two sons of whom, Henry R., has recently died in New York City. Henry Rogers Winthrop was a Norwalk school lad, and is represented to-day by his son Buchanan Winthrop, of N.Y. City. Chas. and William were unmarried sons of Fitch Rogers, Sr. Their sister, Emily Sophia, married her cousin, Henry Rogers, Jr.

Catherine Bell,[2d.] born Feb. 11, 1770, step-sister of Hannah, and fourth child of Isaac[1st.] and Susanna

Nehemiah Rogers[2d.], next of mention to Moses, married at the age of twenty-six, one whose progenitors' possessions were but a few miles remove from those of the Rogers'. The name of his wife's father, Isaac Bell,[1] is perpetuated to-day, and the Capt. Isaac Bell Cove home site is a fond Norwalk and Stamford memory of the past.

Fitch Rogers, who had barely entered his teens when his father died, was attracted to Stamford from whence during the war troubles he departed to New Brunswick where we find him at thirty years of age numbered among the incorporators of the city of St. John's in said province. His name is to this day familiarly repeated by the older people of Norwalk. His daughter Catharine married Rev. Reuben Sherwood, who was for years the rector of the parish of the welfare of which the Rogers brothers had been so mindful, the venerable cure of St. Paul's, Norwalk.

Henry Rogers, the last mentioned brother, who, at the decease of his parent, Nehemiah, had just passed his seventh birthday, lived to become a man of signal integrity and influence. His greatly esteemed daughter, recently laid to rest, the relict of Rev. Smith Pyne, D. D., and who has been the care of devoted children, was a queenly lady. She took a deep interest in the family history, and contributed to its story.

As to Moses, Nehemiah, Fitch and Henry Rogers' mercantile careers, it may be affirmed that they accomplished a signal work. They possessed extraordinary business qualifications, were discreet, experienced, sagacious and ranked high among their commercial contemporaries. An "old New York merchant" is a proud designation, and without abating one jot of the praise to which modern enterprise is entitled, still one cannot call to mind the well kept up reputation for method and management excellence of the Nexsens, Livingstons, Hoffmans, Murrays, Beekmans, Crugers, Lispenards, Ludlows, Desbrosses, Bogarts, Gracies and Woolseys of old merchant fame, without holding the remembrance of the same in regardful estimation.

The Rogers brothers had three sisters, Susannah, Esther and Elizabeth. Their

[1]Norwalk and other well kept records define the Bell ancestry as mentioned in foot note, page 94. Catharine Bell (Mrs. Nehemiah Rogers[2d.]) was a daughter of Isaac and Susannah Bell. Mr. Bell was a son of James and Sarah (Weed) Bell. He first married Jemima Holly and had a daughter, Hannah, born Dec. 10, 1758, who married Fitch, oldest son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth Rogers. Mrs. Bell died Feb. 23, 1760, and Mr. Bell married, second, Sep. 14, 1761, Susanna, daughter of Ephraim and Isabel (Bartlett) Smith, and grand-daughter of John and Isabel (Haynes) Bartlett, and great grand-daughter of "Mr. William Haynes" of "Haynes' Ridge," the Haynes property comprising the to-day spreading and splendid Dr. Parker New Canaan acreage. Ephraim Smith, father of Mrs. Isaac Bell, was the sixth son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Bouton) Smith, which Ebenezer Smith, born July 11, 1668, was a grandson of Lieut. Samuel Smith, an "ancient sergeant" and Wethersfield "Deputy" 1640-61, and "Deputy to the General Court Colony of Massachusetts Bay" 1661-1673; also a commissioner to negotiate with the Mohawks 1667. (See Society of Colonial Wars Year Book 1896.) Lieut. Smith was born in England and his character may be inferred from this clause of his will bearing date June 23, 1680: "I bequeath to each of my children a bible. My executors are to cause to be written, plainly and legibly, in each bible, the last verses of the eleventh Chapter of Ecclesiastes and the first verse of the twelfth Chapter." Isaac and Susanna (Smith) Bell had James, born April 14, 1762; Henry, born Nov. 25, 1765; Isaac (Capt. Isaac of New York see page 94), born Feb. 16, 1768; Katharine, born Feb. 11, 1770, and Thomas, born March 9, 1774. Their daughter Katharine married Nehemiah[2d.], son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth (Fitch) Rogers of Norwalk.

CHILDREN AND GRAND-CHILDREN OF NEHEMIAH AND ELIZABETH (FITCH) ROGERS.

Fitch, oldest son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth Rogers, having reached majority, married Hannah, daughter of Isaac and Jemima (Holly) Bell of Stamford, and had:

Fitch 2d.; married Mary, daughter of Rev. Daniel Smith of Stamford.

Catharine; married Rev. Reuben Sherwood.[1]

Harriet; married John Winthrop.

Charles; died unmarried.

William; died unmarried at sea.

Emily Sophia; married Henry F. Rogers (son of Henry 1st.) her cousin.

There are grounds for believing that after the decease of Joseph Ketchum 3d. his widow (Elizabeth Hurlbutt) may have married Capt. Phineas Chapman of her former home vicinity. It is certain that Morris Ketchum claimed Chapman kinship and the second marriage theory will solve the problem. Mr. Ketchum, when a lad, visited Westport where he seems to have attended school. The bright Saratoga County boy soon after obtained a position in one of the metropolitan commercial houses, the heads of which had achieved enviable fame, and he, who in the dew of industrious youth made himself rurally useful, ripened anon into one of the business princes of the land. Norwalk, to the end of its history-chapter, will probably furnish a no more remarkable finance-trio than that composed of her descended three prosperous sons, Moses Rogers, Morris Ketchum and Legrand Lockwood. Two of Mr. Ketchum's sons, Charles J. and Landon, married sisters, Phœbe and Augusta, daughters of Francis Burritt. Mr. Burritt's home at the father's "Rocky Neck" (Saugatuck), was a lovely spot. Mr. Burritt was an invalid for some time and his son Frank (now "Commodore") was likely to be out in his boat or off with his gun, but Mrs. Burritt's cordial presence and the agreeable manner of her cousin, Mrs. Anna P. Ketchum, who was a visitor at the Burritts, added to the charming spontaniety of the daughters, Phœbe and Augusta, made this water side chatteau truly inviting.

Katharine, oldest child of Morris Ketchum, married Israel Corse. Her brother, Grosvernor, died young.* There was no issue by Mr. Ketchum's second marriage. The children by the last marriage were Franklin, Charles J., Landon, Edward, Morris, (died young at "Hokanum"), Miller and Margaret (Mrs. Dr. Willard Parker 2d.)

After the improvements upon the lower Norwalk and Saugatuck highway the Ketchum carriage and the Burritt landau were seen along its picturesque route. Mr. Ketchum, (waited upon, often, by his faithful, gray haired and bearded colored service-man)* on his way to take an express train at South Norwalk and the Burritt's establishment with occupants on health and pleasure bent, arrested attention and commanded admiration. A touching tribute to the excellence of Morris Ketchum and Francis Burritt was paid, a little before his decease, by the late Horace Staples of Westport. The venerable citizen, after a prolonged interview, was weary, but he desired to add his testimony to the worth of his departed friends, which he warmly did, relating, substantially, at the close the following incident: On the day that Francis Burritt's obsequies were attended Hiram Ketchum (brother of Morris) and himself met in the city. Either a little before or after the service the wires suddenly flashed to the city the intelligence of a Union and Confederate engagement. Falling into the embrace of Mr. Staples, Mr. Ketchum, with much feeling, burst forth "We are one."

It would be amiss, if not unjust, to bring this Parker-Ketchum note to a period before referring to the great work accomplished in the ancient Norwalk parish of Canaan through the interest and influence of Dr. Willard Parker, Sr. None knew better than he the potentiality of elevation, and the distinguished physician had by masterly sagacity, enterprise and activity and by liberal decreeing and doing, proven a benefactor to that healthful and desirable and delightful summer haunt. It is far from rash to affirm that his memory merits exalted praise.

[1]Reuben Sherwood, D.D., belonged to the old Sherwood family of Fairfield, and was a Yale man, class of 1813. He was ordained by Bishop Hobart of *Benj. Adair, brought up by the Ketchums, was a useful and respected in-waiting attache of the family. In due time he married a Modoc Indian from the south of Long Island who also proved a domestic acquisition and was an earnest christian woman. These two were valuable accessories to the "Hokanum" establishment. Many summers and winters attested to the liveried Benjamin's fidelity and he never grew to become an age-disenchanted Westport and Norwalk form. His wife survives him and dwells with a daughter, graduate of the New York Normal School.

Matthew, son of Thomas Sherwood of Fairfield. There were six children, but no Norwalk descent from this union. The wife died on Christmas Day, 1730.

Ann, daughter of Thomas Fitch 1st., married John Thompson of Farmington, and had no Norwalk descent.

Sarah, daughter of Thomas Fitch, married John, son of John Burr of Fairfield. There was no Norwalk, but there was noticeable Fairfield descent from this union. John and Sarah (Fitch) Burr's daughter, Sarah, married June 29, 1692, Rev. Charles Chauncey, grandson of President Charles Chauncey, second president of Harvard College, and their son Samuel was for many years Master of the Charlestown, Mass., Grammar School.

The 1650 Hartford Samuel Fitch may possibly have been the brother of Thomas 1st. of Norwalk. He married Susannah, the widow of William Whiting, and had by her Samuel, who went to Milford, and Thomas, born in 1652, who married, in 1680, Abigail, daughter of Ensign William and Sarah Goodrich, which Sarah was a daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Marvin of Norwalk. The Thomas and Abigail (Goodrich) Fitch children were:

Thomas; born July 20, 1680, died young.

Sybil; born Nov. 2, 1684, died an infant of a few weeks.

The children's mother died at the close of 1684.

The widow of Samuel Fitch (Mrs. Whiting) married third, Alexander Bryan of Milford, but well known in early Norwalk, and her son Samuel Fitch married Sarah Bryan, daughter of Richard, who was the son of Alexander Bryan. Samuel and Sarah (Bryan) Fitch had only one child, Sarah, who married Zachariah Whitman, which may account for the introduction of that name into the later family of Samuel and Elizabeth (Platt) Fitch.

Thomas Fitch 1st. makes no mention of his daughter Sarah in his will, neither of any Hartford Fitch relationship or connection. He appointed his son John sole executor, who gave to the children of his deceased sister (Sarah Burr) "as much as his father gave the other children."

The Norwalk Fitch mother (wife of Thomas 1st.) is claimed to have been a daughter of Richard Platt 1st. One sentence in the will of her husband reads thus, "my loving cousin Sergeant John Platt." "Cousin" should here, it is probable, read nephew, but in the absence of documentary evidence, inference should be drawn with caution.

Thomas 1st. overlived, by several years, his son Thomas 2d. The senior Thomas' residence was somewhere near the present Enos Osborn East Avenue home, and Thos. junior's home was originally on the opposite side of the street, a little to the southeast of "Goodman Hoyt's," now Earle's Hill.

Thomas Fitch 2d. bore in early days the title of Sergeant. He died in the prime of life, leaving a widow (who was twice married after his day), and a son not yet out of his teens, who was to be a Governor's father. His widow was the sister of Mrs. Abigail Pierson (wife of the first rector of Yale College), and of Sarah, wife of the renowned Indian fighter,

John Platt[3d.], son of John[2d.], married Sarah Hickox (see page 234),[1] and had John[4th.], born Mar. 20, 1736, who married Sept. 3, 1758, Charity Morehouse, from which union descend the so-known "Silver Mine" Platts.[2]

Samuel[2d.], son of John[3d.] and Sarah (Hickox) Platt, married, March 2, 1757, Ann, daughter of Jabez Raymond, and had:

Justus[1st.], born Dec. 4, 1757.
Jabez, born Nov. 22, 1761; (died young.)
Esther, born Aug. 11, 1763; (Mrs. I. Hyatt.)
Joseph, born June 25, 1765.
Justus[2d.], born Sept. 10, 1768.
Hannah, born May 24, 1771; (unmarried.)
Betty, born Nov. 27, 1773.
John, born Dec. 17, 1777.
Ann, born Feb. 6, 1781, (Mrs. John Sturges.)

"Aunt Betsey" was an early inmate of the Newkirk family, the seat of which household was where Noah Bradley has, in more recent years, resided. This beautiful water-view home now belongs to the Eno family. It has had a succession of well-known tenants—the Newkirks, Ketchums, Sillimans, Judahs and Bradleys have all found it a goodly spot. It was, in pre-English times, an Indian haunt, evidently. The Norwalk pioneers recognized this fact, and gave the name of a prominent red ruler to its neighborhood It is to be presumed that the Ludlow covenant of 1640 was made not far from its spray-sprinkled shore. A handsome portrait of one of its early admirers adorns Greenfield Hill walls, and in the care now bestowed the home and its environments, is exhibited a taste befitting the felicitous situation.

[1]The New Haven records read "John Platt of Norwalk and Mrs. Mary Smith were married Nov. 20, 1722." This may have been an early marriage, followed by early decease, of John Platt[3rd.], son of John[2d.].

[2]The cradle of the Platt's of Silver Mine, is the (1896) yellow painted building called the "Marvin-Raymond" house (last house, on the west side of the street, before is reached the turns in the Silver Mine road, one toward New Canaan and the other in the direction of Winnipauk.) This house was built in the day of John Platt[3d.], born in 1702, and probably by the same John[3d.].

John[4th.], son of John Platt[3d.], married, as stated in the text, Charity Morehouse. Both parents rest in St. Paul's churchyard. The husband, John Platt[4th.], was the "master carpenter" employed in the building of the St. Paul's Church which was taken down in 1841.

John Platt[4th.] had two sons, Joseph and Jonathan, and five daughters—Sarah, Hannah, Anna, Susan and Esther. Of these daughters, Sarah was the mother of Nathan Beers, whose son Frank now occupies the Beers (formerly Sherman) house in Main Street, (see plate, page 129) and the husbands of the others were named Nash, Richards, Glover and Mix.

Joseph, son of John[4th.] and Charity Platt, born 1774-5, was the next older child than Jonathan, the youngest. Joseph married, first, March 7, 1800, Nancy McAllister of Troy, N. Y., and had:

Alfred M., born Oct. 6, 1800.
Jonathan[2d.], born Sept. 11, 1803.
Laura, born Jan. 21, 1806 (Mrs. Lemuel Bronson).
Esther Sally, born Mar. 21. 1808 (died young).
Joseph, born July 8, 1811.
Nancy Jane, born Nov. 10, 1813 (died young).
Charles, born Mch. 15, 1816 (died young).
Esther, born Sept. 7, 1818 (died young).
Susanna, born Feb. 19, 1821 (Mrs. Samuel Beers).
Emily C., born Dec. 17, 1825 (Mrs. Levi Brown).
Chauncey Cook, born Dec. 20, 1827.
Minerva, born June 28, 1832 (Mrs. John Wesley Dickens).

Joseph Platt, father of the immediately foregoing children, was familiarly called "Governor". He married, second, Oct. 1, 1837, Mrs. Olive Gregory.

Alfred M., son of Joseph and Nancy Platt, married Hannah Smith of West Norwalk, and had: Giles (married Mary Couch); Amanda (Mrs. Samuel Comstock); Cornelius (married Caroline, daughter of John Quigley, and had Charles); Sarah (Mrs. Royal Miller); Martha (Mrs. Joseph Gilbert); Ann Elizabeth (Mrs. John Lambert*); Mary Jane (Mrs. Sydney Guthrie); Frederick M. (unmarried); LeGrand (died young).

Jonathan[2d.], son of Joseph and Nancy Platt, married, Apr. 6, 1828, Laura Parmely, daughter of Wm. and Esther (Squires) Taylor of Wilton, and had: David M., born Jan. 2, 1830; Augustus, born Dec. 10, 1831; Mary E. (Mrs. Wm. H. Holly),† born June 6, 1834; John Henry, born Sept. 13, 1837; Harriet L.

*John and Ann E. Lambert had one child, Carrie, who married Geo. F. Lockwood, and had Ellsworth and Mary Jane.

†The children of Wm. H. and Mary E. Holly were: Wm. Henry, died young; Orris Starr, died young; Mary G., (Mrs. Arthur T. Evans); Jennie F., (Mrs. Edward B. Butler); Chas., died young; Estelle, died young.

married, Sept. 15, 1840, Mary E. Bishop, and had Alfred B. Beers, at the present time a Bridgeport lawyer.

The late Ambrose A. Beers of Lewisboro, born Oct. 30, 1812, (died June 11, 1897) was a son of Jonathan and Anna Beers, and brother of Alfred of Bridgeport. He married, first, Loretta Brown, and had Oscar; Alonzo; Lester and Emmet G. Oscar married Mary Waterbury, and had one child; Alonzo died young. Lester, intended for the ministry, died in the army, unmarried, at Newbern, N. C. Emmet G. married Lucy J. Caldwell, and had Edith Loretta and Ernest, the first of whom married Wm. Mackay of Ridgefield.

Ambrose A. Beers married, second, Jan. 30, 1850, Betsey Ann, born Sept. 22, 1825, daughter of Samuel Monroe. The children by the second marriage were: Emogene Waterbury, born March 7. 1851 (Mrs. Alexander St. George);[1] Harriet Frances, born Dec. 28, 1852 (Mrs. George Edward Raymond); Clarissa Ada, born Dec. 8, 1854; Ida Lavinia (Mrs. Elmer Ellsworth Holly) born March 13, 1857; Franklin Babbitt, born May 1, 1859; Julia Anna (Mrs. Herbert William Kemp) born Nov. 16, 1861; Arthur, born July 1, 1864 (unmarried); Lester Irving, born July 10, 1869.

HOME-LOT XXVII.

THOMAS LUPTON.

Thomas Lupton of New Haven early appears and almost as early disappears as a factor in Norwalk concerns. He was made a freeman in 1664, but the ancient Town Records make name-mention of him prior, by a few years, it would appear, to that date. His home-lot was at the rear, somewhat, of the main line of hearthstone appropriations, but one emanated from thence who became the progenitress of a large family. His daughter Hannah married Ebenezer Blakeley, and had a daughter, to whom was given the mother's name, Hannah, who married John Nash[2d.]. John Nash[2d.] and his brother Nathan, were the only sons of John[1st.] (son of Edward Nash[1st.]). Nathan, it is believed, had no children, which fact would constitute John Nash[2d.] (whose wife's mother was a Lupton), progenitor of all of Norwalk Nash name.

A grandson of John Nash[2d.], viz.: Abraham[2d.] (son of Abraham Nash[1st.]) was the Abraham Nash of Troy, N. Y. fortune-fame. He married Sally Benedict of Ridgefield. His brothers were Jared and Samuel Nash, and his sisters were Sally (Mrs. Silas St. John)

[1] Alexander and Emogene W. St. George were married April 21, 1873, and had: Elmer Leland, born June 6, 1874; Harold Beers, born July 15, 1888.

George E. and Harriet F. Raymond were married Aug. 29, 1878, and had: Percy Edward, born May 30, 1879; Howard, born April, 1881.

Elmer E. and Ida L. Holly were married July, 1883, and had: Bessie Ida, born Aug. 22, 1886; Anna May, born June 27, 1890; Alice Winnifred, born Sept. 1891.

Franklin B. and Mary Jane (Livesay) Beers were married Oct. 1888, and had: Mabel Clarissa, born Dec., 1889; Earl Livesay, born Dec. 1895.

Herbert William and Julia Anna Kemp were married Dec. 6, 1885, and had: Herbert Oliver, born Oct. 14, 1886; Julia Marjorie, born Mar. 8, 1889.

Lester I. and Ida M. (Keeler) Beers were married Feb., 1890, and had: Myrtle, born June 6, 1891.

Elmer Leland St. George married, Sept. 7, 1896, Ada Street, and had: Leland Elmer, born Oct. 23, 1897.

Abraham, baptized September 25, 1698;

Pierre[1st], born January 14, 1699-1700.

The last two sons, Abraham and Pierre, were baptized in the French Church in New York.

Pierre[1st], or Peter, as he came to be called, married Jeanne, daughter of Jaques and and Jeane (O'dart) Ballereau (born July 3, 1708) of New York. On May 18, 1731, said Pierre or Peter[1st] was admitted a freeman and recorded as a goldsmith. He came to Norwalk in about 1637-8, and made several land purchases, appearing to select for his home seat the meadows somewhat north of the present Marshall Street in South Norwalk. His children were:

Jaques or James[1st], born February 6, 1723-4, no record;

Marie, born May 23, 1726;

Pierre or Peter[2nd], born July 22, 1732;

Jane, born October 24, 1738.

Pierre or Peter[1st] Quintard married, second, Deborah, daughter of John Knapp of Stamford, and had no issue.

Peter Quintard[2nd] married, first, and had James[2nd], Peter[3rd], born 1765, Evert[1st] and Isaac. He married, second, May 23, 1774, Ruth Stevens of Stamford and had Rebecca (a Mrs. Raymond of New York), Lewis Y., and Clarissa (Mrs. Stephen Mott).[1]

James[2nd],[2] son of Peter Quintard[2nd], married, first, Sarah, daughter of Deacon Raymond,

[1]Stephen, born October 24, 1771, son of Reuben and Phebe (Tuttle) Mott, married Clarissa, daughter of Peter[2nd] and Ruth Quintard. Mrs. Reuben Mott was from New Canaan. Her husband was probably of the Long Island Mott family. The children, other than Stephen, of Reuben and Phebe Mott, were Jesse, born December 17, 1764, Grace (Mrs. Thomas Trowbridge), born July 14, 1766, Sarah (Mrs. Johnson), born June 30, 1769, Polly (Mrs. Smith of Ridgefield), Fanny (Mrs. Curtis Whiting of Stratford), Betsey, born April 23, 1776 (Mrs. James Jarvis of New York).

The children of Stephen and Clarissa Mott were Eliza (unmarried), Marietta (Mrs. Rev. Dr. Humphreys), and Langdon.

Langdon, son of Stephen Mott, married (see page 275) Harriet, daughter of Captain Joshua and Margaret Bouton. Their son, Charles B., married Emily A., daughter of Edwin and Eliza (Smith) Hoyt (see page 359), and their daughter Harriet married Henry, son of Dr. Emmery C. Bissell of Norwalk.

The children of Thomas and Grace Trowbridge were Nancy (Mrs. Jacob Jennings[2nd]), Betsey (Mrs. Uriah Johnson), and a son who was accidentally shot at Sag Harbor.

The children of Jacob[2nd] and Nancy Jennings were George W., Jacob, Julia Ann, James.

The children of George W. and Esther (Hoyt) Jennings were George, Jacob, William, James, Hannah (Mrs. Captain Nathaniel Clark), Hattie (unmarried), and Mary Elizabeth (Mrs. Allen Betts).

Jacob Jennings[2nd], who married Mary Trowbridge, was born April 22, 1779. He was a son of Jacob[1st] and Grace (Parks) Jennings (see page 43), and had a sister Anna, who married, first, a Munson, and second Edwin Van Antwerp[1st], whose son, Edwin Van Antwerp[2nd] formerly owned the East Avenue property afterward occupied by Charles B. White of New York. Anna Jennings married, third, Hezekiah Whitlock, the father by another wife of Mrs. James Stevens (Fanny Whitlock), and of her brother Lewis Whitlock, for may years a keeper of the Norwalk Island lighthouse.

[2]James Quintard[2nd] lived in the last house, east, on the north side of the present Marshall Street in South Norwalk. He there kept an "Inn" which bordered the old "Quintard Dock." This dock in the days of the Vanderbilt-Peck steamboat opposition was the landing place of the Vanderbilt boat. The Peck line moored its boat at the "Day Dock," foot of the present Washington Street. It was because Messrs. Vanderbilt and Drew failed to influence the Norwalk stage coach proprietors to first drive their vehicles to the Quintard pier before proceeding with passengers for the Peck line that Mr. Drew determined to plant a coach line of his own. Horses and carriages were brought from the city and the Vanderbilt patrons were provided for.

The Quintard Inn was the only public house at

HOLLY

References:
As cited.
Stamford Town Records.

1. SAMUEL HOLLY was born in England, supposedly about the year 1593. He died at Cambridge, Massachusetts Bay Colony, between 22 October 1643, the date of his will, and 5 December 1643, when it was recorded. His wife's given name was Elizabeth. If she was the Elizabeth Holly who sailed from London in June 1635 in the ship Blessing, she either gave an incorrect age (30 years in one account and 20 in another) or she was not the mother of Samuel's son John, known to have been born about 1618. She may have been Samuel's sister, niece or wife – or perhaps not even related to him.

The first reference to Samuel in the New World is found in The Regestere: Booke of the Lands & Houses in the Newtown, 1635, page 71:

> This Entrie ffolloweing made by us, who are appointed for this worke for this present Yeare 1639; Richard Jackesone, Josheph Isake, Robert Saunders:
> Samuell Holley – one Dwelling house w'th Eightene Acars of Land on ye South side of Charles River Within Cambridge Bounds, Bounded upon ye Southeast side upon Bush, Charles River Northeast, John Jacksone North west, Southwest Joineing to ye Comon sett out by Stakes.

Samuel Holly's land was beside the ancient road to Roxbury, in that part of Newtown (Cambridge, later Brighton), now a part of the City of Boston.

The will of Samuel Holly was recorded 5 December 1643 in the probate register of Suffolk County, Massachusetts. An abstract reads:

> Because it is appointed for all men once to dye, & the dayes of men in this world are but like a shadowe yt soone departeth, Therefore I, Samuell Holly, doe make this my last will. Effects to my loving wife, except Tenn acres of land to my soone, according to a former writing, and the remaining part of the inclosed lott to goe to my soone & his heirs, to goe after ye decease of my wife, but she to have ye use & possession thereof during her life. To my soone, one blue stuffe Sutte of apparall, one hatt, one p'r of shoos; all other of my lands & goods I give to my wife, whom I doe make my sole Execut'r. This 22th of October 1643. Witnesses: John Jackson, Edward Jackson.

Although the names of his wife and "soone" are not stated in the will, they are identified by subsequent records of the sales of the property bequeathed to them.

Samuel's widow, Elizabeth, married John Kendall. On 8 September 1646 Elizabeth and John Kendall sold to Edward Jackson "one dwelling house, late Samuell Holleyes. . .and Ten Acr of Land" (The Regestere, op. cit.: 120). Genealogists have considered Elizabeth to have been that Goody Kendall who was executed on an absurd charge of witchcraft. The Rev. Hale, a minister of Beverly, Massachusetts, wrote in his A Modest Enquiry into the Nature of Witchcraft:

> . . . .a woman of Cambridge, against whom a principal evidence was a Watertown nurse, who testified that the said Kendal (so was the accused called) did bewitch to death a child of Goodman Genings of Watertown; for the said Kendall did make much of the child, and then the child was well, but quickly changed its color and dyed in a few hours. The court took this evidence among others, the said Genings not knowing of it. But after Kendal was executed (who also denyed her guilt to the death), Mr. Rich. Brown, knowing better things of Kendall, asked said Genings if they suspected her to bewitch their child; they answered, No. But they judged the true cause of the child's death to be thus, viz., the nurse had the night before carryed out the child and kept it abroad in the cold a long time, when the red gum was come out upon it, and the cold had struck in the red gum, and this they judged the cause of the child's death. And that said Kendal did come in that day and make much of the child, but they apprehended no wrong to come to the child by her. After this the said nurse was put in prison for adultery, and there delivered of her base child; and Mr. Brown went to her and told her it was just with God to leave her to this wickedness as a punishment for murdering Goody Kendal by her false witness bearing. But the nurse dyed in prison, and so the matter was not further inquired into.

In view of the fact that the parents of the allegedly bewitched child were not even called upon to testify at the trial, Charles A. Hoppin, in his The Washington Ancestry. . .: 533-5, upon which this account of Samuel Holly is based, wrote: "One must wonder what manner of men were the judges who accepted the strange testimony of a disreputable woman, intent upon hiding her own faults, and then decreed the death penalty upon that evidence of lies and superstition. Further evidence is necessary to confirm the time, manner and place of death of Elizabeth (———) Holly-Kendall."

Samuel (1) Holly and his wife, Elizabeth, had one child:

2. i. John Holly, born about 1618.

2. JOHN HOLLY, son of Samuel (1) Holly and his wife, Elizabeth, was born in England about 1618, for "Mr. John Holly, in ye 63d year of his age, dyed May ye 25, Anno. 1681" (Stamford Town Records, 1:74). He married, presumably in Cambridge, Massachusetts, about 1640, Mary, whose maiden surname is unknown. She died at Stamford, Connecticut, as his widow, 7 April 1714 (ibid., 1:126).

In his History of Stamford, Connecticut: 25, the Rev. E.B. Huntington states that John Holly was one of its proprietors before the end of 1642, but this compiler has been unable to find any evidence of Holly being there so early. He was certainly in Stamford before 22 October 1645 when, as shown below in the record of his land holdings, he purchased property from Richard Hardy of Stamford.

Another early reference to John Holly is an entry in Stamford Town Records: 18, stating "John Hollye chosen marshall, Whilla. new [i.e., William Newman] choyse of deputy." The item is undated but follows one dated 3 December 1648. Entries were not always made in chronological order, however, and since John was only 30 years old in 1648, a rather tender age for a position of such responsibility, his election may have taken place some years later.

Mr. Holly became one of Stamford's most valuable citizens. The Rev. E.B. Huntington, in his History, op. cit.: 274-5 states, "John Holly was one of the most prominent of our early settlers. He was from the first employed in the almost constant service either of the town or of the colony." Among the town offices filled by Mr. Holly were those of marshall, noted above; fence viewer, 1664, and lister, 1666-7 and 1676. Stamford Town Records, 2:215 report "yt Rich'd Lawe, Francis Bell and Jno. Holly are chosen to make the cuntry, Mr. Bishops and towns rates for the present ye[ar]," at a town meeting held in 1665. At the town meeting held 24 March 1666, John was elected one of the five townsmen, "chosen by papers [i.e., paper ballots] for ye ordering of towns besenes for ye yeare insuing." Huntington's History, op. cit.: 470, states he had been elected for four terms, the records of such elections having been lost for the period 1641 to 1666. Holly was again elected a townsman in 1671, 1673-4 and 1678. He was a juryman in 1667, and in 1669 "John Holly senior is Chosen recorder of all bills, sales, deads, inventorys, wills, ct. [i.e., etc.] for Standford." Huntington states (ibid.: 472) that John Holly Sr. served as town clerk from 1668 to 1670. He was made a surveyor of highways for the East Field in 1671. In 1672 Mr. Holly served as an auditor "to take in the invoice of the town," and in the following year was asked to draw up the list of amounts due by the town to "each piticular man." Finally, in 1676, Mr. Holly was "chosen a town treasurer for ye yeare insuing or till a new be chosen."

John Holly was elected as a deputy to represent Stamford at the General Court in New Haven in the years 1654-5 and 1663 (Records of the Colony or Jurisdiction of New Haven, 1653-1665: 96, 147, 477, by Charles J. Hoadly). In October 1670 he was one of Stamford's two representatives to the General Assembly of the Connecticut Colony, Hartford (History, op. cit.: 463).

The General Court at New Haven on 26 May 1658 appointed John Holly of Stamford, and others, "to receive the customs & excise of wines & liquoures in ye severall plantations wherein they live." He was reappointed as collector of customs in the following year and was allowed "30 s. (besides his charges now at New-Haven) for his paines & care in gathering in the customs & excise of the towne of Stamford the yeare past." In 1662 the General Court again appointed him collector of customs (ibid.: 236, 293, 300).

At a Court of Elections held at Hartford 9 May 1667, after the absorption of the New Haven Colony by the Connecticut Colony, it was resolved that "Mr. Richard Lawes & Mr. John Holly are chosen Commissioners for the Townes of Standford, Greenwich & Rye, to assist in the execution of justice at the courts at Fayrefeild for the yeare ensueing" (The Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, 1665-1677: 63, by J. Hammond Trumbull). These courts were the Inferior Court of Common Pleas and the Probate Court. It appears that in this capacity Mr. Holly became a judge. He was reappointed in 1670, 1678-9 and in 1681 (ibid., 1665-1677: 132; 1678-1688: 5, 25, 76). During his term as commissioner, Mr. Holly was freed from taxation (ibid., 1665-1677: 59).

On 14 October 1669 John Holly Sr. was propounded as a freeman of Stamford (ibid.: 118). The Rev. Huntington, in commenting on Mr. Holly's election as commissioner on 9 May 1667 (History, op. cit.: 274-5), wrote:

> It seems to have been a singular appointment, as he is next year, 1569 [sic, 1669 was intended] propounded for freeman in the Connecticut jurisdiction, where he is distinctly indicated by the title of senior. It would seem that he had shown himself so competent and useful under the New Haven administration, that he was appointed to the most responsible offices before the usual form of enfranchisement. Mr. Holly seems to have been as active in ecclesiastical as in civil and judicial matters.

Stamford Town Records are full of references to Mr. Holly's services on town committees, most of them dealing with real estate matters. In 1667 he was placed on one which obtained from the Indians Taphance, son of Ponus, the sagamore of the Toquams, and Powahay, son of Onax and grandson of Ponus, confirmation of prior conveyances from Ponus to the town. Taphance, incidentally, had been implicated in the murder in 1649 of John Whitmore, but was released on his promise to try to locate Toquattoes, another Indian, who was suspected of having committed the crime. No later development of the case is of record.

Also in 1667, John Holly served on committees to determine areas of the town suitable for planting, to allot commonage to proprietors, and to determine where fences should be placed. He was assigned to eight committees during the period 1670 to 1678 to make layouts in general land distributions of commonage to proprietors, and served on other committees in each of the years 1669 through 1674 charged with making layouts of land granted to proprietors in individual actions. In one of these, "Mr. Holly and Left. Francis Bell" were appointed 23 December 1670 to lay out a house lot for Mr. Matthew Bellemy, the new schoolmaster. This was the first instance found in Stamford records of John Holly being styled "Mr.," the title of high standing in the community, and thereafter he was always so distinguished in the local records.

Mr. Holly participated in the long continued boundary dispute between Stamford and Greenwich. At a town meeting in Stamford held 25 February 1668/9, he was made a member of a committee formed to "treat w'th Grenwitch men about runing the line between ye too towns, & if thay se y't thay can advantage our towne by allteration of ye former agreement, thay have power to improve thayer best skill thereunto." Again, on 16 January 1673/4, Mr. Holly was one of the three requested by Stamford "to rune the lines between Stanford and Greenwidge."

The boundary line between Stamford and Norwalk was also an object of considerable dispute. On 18 May 1670 John Holly and four other Stamford men were appointed "to mark our bounds at Rowatton (or by ye English called five Mile) river, & ye same p'sons sent are impowered to cut out & deface whatsoever markes they find upon trees or otherwise, set by Norwak men or any other, on this side ye five mile river afforsaid, as bound mark, without ye approbation of this towne." Norwalk was in no mood to take this unilateral action lying down, and in June of 1670 Holly and two others of the earlier committee were empowered by Stamford to settle the location of the boundary. At a meeting with the Norwalk representatives it was agreed that Five Mile River would constitute the boundary line between the two towns.

At a town meeting held at Stamford 22 March 1669 it was decided that a new meeting house should be built of stone. A committee of five, including Goodman Holly, was appointed in the following October to procure workmen and to oversee construction. If "thay can'ot git a house built w'th stone, thay have liberty to get it dun w'th timber. . . .These orders about ye meeting house are now repealed." The retraction reflects a conflict of opinion as to the construction of the proposed new meeting house. For more than two years the size, shape and material for construction of the building were subjects of controversy. Goodman Holly was named 26 October 1670 to a select committee of five having "full power com'ited to them to procure a ston new meeting house. . .to be for ye publick worship of God in this place," but the dispute still persisted. On 29 March 1671 Mr. Holly and one other man were "chosen to take ye minds of ye town conscerned in the meeting house, to know their mindes. . .for what forme & figure they have a mind to build." Apparently no consensus was possible, for six days later, at a town meeting, "it was agreede that the finall desition & diference respecting the forme or figuer of the new meeteing house is to be done p' a solem ordinance of God, in drawing of lott; & ye reason of this way is because the towne being not capable to desyde it. . . .The solem ordinance being as above voted, the lott carid it for a square meeteng house as above. . .[to] be thirty & eight foott square & the height of ye wall to be twelve foott. . .[with] a teurett on ye tope, & for dementions of it, is left to ye comity & carpenders to order itt." On the following day "the towne doth chuse, conferme and apoynt" Mr. Holly and four others "to be a comity for ye caring on ye work about ye new meeteing, as above." Mr. Holly and Lt. Francis Bell then resigned as townsmen, "The reason is because they are chosen to be of the comity for the meeteing house & desyerd theire relese."

Mr. Holly was signally honored by the Connecticut Colony when, on 9 May 1672, he and three others were commissioned by the Court of Elections in Hartford "to measure on an east northeast lyne from Mamorenack River to the west bounds of Fayrefeild, and to make report to this Court in October next, the distance twixt the sayd places and the quantitie of miles belonging to each of those plantations. This to be don at the charge of the townes of Norwalke, Standford, Greenwich & Rye" (Trumbull's Public Records, op. cit., 1665-1677: 174). This sensitive task, involving as it did the determination of oft disputed boundaries between the towns, was one requiring tact, responsibility and good judgment.

On 7 November 1672 Mr. Holly and three other Stamford men were requested to determine what land should be offered by the town to induce Mr. Eliphalet Jones of Greenwich to become a minister at Stamford to assist and relieve the Rev. John Bishop. The town agreed 3 February 1672/3 that he be offered 16 acres of upland and meadow, a part of which was "that peice of land at Wescos which was improved by the Ingins, in case it be cleare from all English and Endgins" claims. Greenwich seems to have been disturbed at the prospect of losing its minister, for Stamford appointed a committee of three, including Mr. Holly, "to treat with Grenwidg men about theire compliance with Stanford for the uphoulding of the minister in this place." Apparently it was decided that Greenwich residents could attend church services at Stamford, for the minutes of the town meeting held 23 February 1674/5 at Stamford record that "Ye town by vote do judg it meet that Grinwich, while thay have the benifit of the ministry amung us, yt thay allso should pay to ye ministry."

Mr. Holly on 2 May 1673 was put on a Stamford committee to consider obtaining a house and meadow for Mr. Jones, and in July of that year was named to another committee directed "to provide either upon the towns common land, a home lot, and to build a comfortable house thereupon for the use of the ministry; Mr. Jones to have the use and benifit of the same as long as he continues in the work of the ministry amongst us."

Other committee work involving real estate in which Mr. Holly participated included the drafting of a covenant with Goodman Webb regarding the operation of the mill, 1670; his services in 1672 "to consider in some waye aboute the uplands lyeng betweene pine or stony brooke & five milles river for ye prevention of any Indians (or others). . .who [the committeemen] are to manifest their consent or deniall to the same"; "to treat with ye Ingens in order to theire setling upon Long Neck," 1673, and to "lay out and rectifie the common highways about the town," 1676. Perhaps Mr. Holly was not well in the spring of 1675, for he was not elected to be a townsman in February and the minutes of the town meeting of 4 May 1675 note, "Mr. Jonath. Selleck is added unto the committee in Mr. Holly, his roome, for the worke about the towne house."

One of the most delicate and sensitive undertakings was the periodic revision of seating assignments in the meeting house, for the location of seats represented a public judgment of social status, from high to low. In 1670 John Holly and two others were given "power to seat or remove men in the meeting house according to thayer discretion," and in 1673 Mr. Holly was placed on a committee of five instructed to rearrange the order of the meeting house seating.

On a number of occasions Mr. Holly was requested by the town to supervise younger men in the performance of their duties. For instance, at the 6 August 1679 town meeting, Daniel Weed and Joshuah Hoyt were chosen "to take in the list of the town's estat and they, with Mr. Holly, to fit it for the Court." At that same town meeting a committee of three was named, "with the help of Mr. Holly,. . .to order where this fence at Shiphand may most conveniantly be set."

Greenwich Early Records contain a few entries involving John Holly. On 20 September 1659 he witnessed a deed to William Hubbert (ibid.: 4); and on 14 March 1669/70 he was a witness to the conveyance by which Daniel Patrick, as heir of his late father, Capt. Daniel Patrick, transferred to the town of Greenwich any rights he might have had in the Patrick-Feake purchase, on which property Greenwich was originally settled. The consideration given to the younger Patrick was "fifty pounds & a horse, bridle & sadle & halter" (ibid.: 14).

At a town meeting in Greenwich held 30 December 1670 it was "granted that Mr. John Holly Sen'or is exsepted of to be an inhabitant, and in order thereunto, the afore sayd mr. holly is granted liberty to take up a home lot whear hee can find it most convenient, with the aprobation of Sargent lockwood and angell huestead, who are apointed to lay it out to ye quantitee of two accrees or three" (ibid.: 15). The minutes of a town meeting held 13 days later record that "Sargant Lockwood, John Hubby, Joshua knap, John Renelds, together with mr. holley, are appointed" to survey "horseneck and land ther about" as to its suitability for "encouragement for the settleing of a township, . . .to goe forth ye seacond day to tak a survey of the aforesayd land. . .and in case any three of the first fower men do go forth it shall be as effectual as the fower, only Mr. holley is to be one if it can bee, and if the day appointed be not a comfortable son son [sic], then the first next good, comfortable day they are to atend the work" (ibid.: 16).

Greenwich persisted in trying to induce Mr. Holly to move from Stamford. A resolution was adopted 13 May 1672 at a town meeting: "that parsell of land in the nut plain which was formarly Joseph Meads, the sayd parsell of land is granted unto mr. holley to mak a home lot of, uppon this condition, that mr. holley do com and be a personall inhabitant in ye settleing of ye above sayd land, and it to be within a twelve months tim, and that if mr. holley pleas to accept of this grant as above, then the formar grant of a hom lot unto mr. holley is to cease" (Greenwich Early Records: 20). Almost a year later, on 27 March 1673, "the conditions of yt grant of ye nutt plain unto mr. holly is now relinckwisht and the grant of ye nutt plaine is to stand firm and good to mr. holley, and what condition was inserted in ye grant by ye town in ye 13 of May 72 is now made voide, meaning only that condition of mr. holleys personall settleing ye nutt plain."

Mr. Holly may have temporarily succumbed to the blandishments of Greenwich, for the town minutes of May 1675 record that "mr. holly is chosen to manag and oder ye business respecting what lots ar to be drawn" in the allotment of the land between the Mianus and Byram Rivers, and south of the Westchester Path. Nevertheless, in the only deed recorded in Greenwich Land Records, 1:19, in which he was a principal, John Holly Sr. "of Stanford. . .set over" to Joseph Ferris of Greenwich, on 14 May 1679, the land in Greenwich which had been unconditionally granted to him by the town.

In 1656 John Holly and John Waterbury took the inventory of the estate of Vincent Simkins (Huntington's History, op. cit.: 42) and in the following year John Holly and Richard Law inventoried the estate of Clement Buxton (Jurisdiction, op. cit.: 293). With Daniel Scofield, John witnessed the 1660 will of George Stokey of Stamford (ibid.: 486), and in 1669 Holly was one of the witnesses to Daniel Scofield's will (Stamford Town Records, 1:118).

A listing of Stamford proprietors stating their intention of using the town's horse pasture, dated 22 April 1667, shows John Holly as registering one horse.

Cornelius Jones Sr. of Stamford, presumed to have been the father-in-law of Hannah (Sherwood) (Bradley) Jones, was addicted to strong drink, as noted in the Francis Bradley section herein. His fourth official offense was recorded ibid. under date of 26 March 1667: "In ye night, a complaynt ag't Cornilues Jons sen'er, by Jon Holly [one of the townsmen], of ye s'd Jons miscaring of hemself in abusing his wif and his neighbors in ye night tim, ye s'd Jons being over com w't drink, in so much y't he was bereaved of his understanding and void of reason, as appeared by his words and caridges, witnessed by Eleaser Slawson and Obadiah Selly, and confesed by ye s'd Jons." No account of his punishment appears in the record.

Stamford Land Records show purchases of land by John Holly from Richard Hardy in 1645, William Newman (1647), Thomas Sherwood (1648), Francis Bell (1661) and from the estate of John Pettit Sr. (1664), and grants to him from the town of Stamford in 1651, 1672 and 1681. Additionally, Stamford Town Records reveal Mr. Holly requesting the grant of a house lot in 1675, his being granted one in 1677, and on 1 February 1677/8 the meeting minutes state, "Ye town grants that Mr. Holy and Jonathan Bells hous lots shall lye next to Sam'l Weeds on ye west of his lot."

In March 1651 Mr. Holly had a record of his real estate holdings registered in Stamford Town Records. Years later he took the precaution of recording them in Stamford Land Records, A:50:

> The housing & lands of John Holly Senior, colected out of ye ould Booke of Records, with ye bounds & buttes as they stand therein recorded to him Anno. March 1651. And now this 20th of May, Anno. 1672, ye records of ye said housing & lands renewed unto ye foresaid John Holly & his forever as full evidenc of there right & title. Ye contents as followeth, viz.: > house, barn & home lott, containing one accre & half. . . .2-ly, In Rockey-neck, two accres of meadow. . . .3-ly. In the East Feeld, three accres of meadow. . . .These lands, with ye housing as above specified, sould by William Newman unto John Holly. . .ye 26th of February Anno. 1647. . . .
>
> Also in Rockey-neck, nine accres of upland. . .sould by Thomas Sherwood unto John Holly. . .ye 20th February, Anno. 1648. . . .
>
> In ye East Feeld, three accres of upland. . .& a p'sell of mayzeland adjoyning to it, ye quantity uncertain, . . .sould by Liefft. Ffrances Bell unto John Holly. . .28th February Anno. 1661. . . .
>
> Also three accres of meadow at Norwaton river, ye fresh hassaky meadows, so called, p'te of ye lands sold by Richard Hardy unto John Holly. . .ye 22 of October Anno. 1645.
> In Shiphan in ye East Feeld, twelve accres of upland. . . .

The two recordings are similarly worded except that there is no mention of the three acres near Noroton River and twelve acres in Shippan in the Stamford Town Records listing nor, of course, of the subsequent purchase from Francis Bell. That listing, however, includes two and one-half acres of meadow in Rocky Neck, purchased in 1650 from Edward Jessup, not recorded in the later listing in Stamford Land Records.

Despite these substantial holdings, there is no record of Mr. Holly having sold a single parcel of Stamford real estate during his lifetime. He did, however, exchange land with Joshua Hoyt in 1672 and 1680; and in 1679 John Holly conveyed properties to his sons John Jr., Samuel and Increase. On 2 April 1679 he gave to John Holly Jr. various parcels of land in Rocky Neck, Shippan and "ye Oxpaster (formerly so called)," and also one-half of his home lot containing three quarters of an acre, "reserving ye one half of ye fruit & benefit of ye orchard to ye use and benefit of me & my wife during our naturall lives" (ibid., A:75). Mr. Holly on the same day gave to his son Samuel a house and home lot of one and one-half acres and several tracts of land in Rocky Neck, North Field and in Shippan. A postscript to this deed provided, "If I shall at any time hereafter see cause to dispose to my pp. [i.e., proper] behalf, one acre & half of ye land in Rockey-neck, at southward end, yn I reserve liberty & power so to doe" (ibid., A:75). To his son Increase Holly, John on 28 July 1679 gave about six acres of upland and salt marsh in the East Field (ibid., A:76).

The General Assembly at Hartford on 14 October 1669 propounded John Holly Sr. as a freeman at Stamford (The Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, 1665-1677: 118, by J. Hammond Trumbull).

The will of Mr. John Holly Sr. of Stamford was dated 14 April 1681 and proved 28 June 1681 (Fairfield Probate Records, 3:62). It left "unto my Dear and Loving Wiffe Mary Holly, The use of my now dwelling house and of the remainding part of my home lot," various house furnishings and parcels of land to her "use and Sole disposal, her bible. . .and thirty pounds of my personal Estate." To his son, Samuel Holly, he gave various parcels of land and confirmation of deeds of gift previously made. To sons John and Increase, land. Unto "my Son Elisha Holly, my house Lott granted by the Towne, Lying on the West Side of the Mill River, west next Sam'll Weeds Lot; and half my peece of meadows in the South feild, two Acres. . .and half the upland and point adjoyning; alsoe, my peece of upland in the South feild right, or Ten Acres," plus several other minor parcels. To his son Jonathan Holly he left "the house I dwell in, and the garden and Land between the barn and the Street; and the peece of upland in Rocky Neck," and other tracts of land. Also, "he paying Twenty pound to my Estate, then I give him the barn and grass Lot behind the barn, when Twenty pounds he Shall pay within Two years after he is possest of the said barn and Lot." The testator bequeathed 12 pounds, in addition to what they had already been given, to each of his daughters, Elizabeth Turney, Bethia Weed and Hannah Hoit, and to his daughter Abigail he left the sum of 20 pounds. His wife, Mary, was named sole executrix.

The will was witnessed by Abraham Ambler and Francis Bell, and signed by "John Holly Sen." The inventory of his estate, appraised at a value of £312:01:06 (a very substantial amount, considering the previously made gifts of property to his sons), was made 14 June 1681 by Francis Bell, Abraham Ambler and Daniel Westcott, and given to the Probate Court upon oath by the widow (ibid., 3:79).

Mary Holly, widow of John Holly and executrix of his estate, in 1687 gave to "my two sons in law, viz., Samuel Hait & Jonas Weed, as part of their portion," a tract of land to be laid out in the ox pasture based upon her late husband's right of a £99:15:00 taxable estate assessment (Stamford Land Records, A:161). In 1692 "Mrs. Mary Holly, widow, being execatrixe to ye will of her husbande, Mr. John Holly, deseased, doth order & dispose as part of legacy unto her daughter, Abigail Cross, & now record unto her A sartain parsell of medow containing three acres lying in Noroton fresh medows, called the round fresh medow" (ibid., A:113). Mary signed both deeds with her mark.

On 31 August 1695 Sarah Newman, widow of Daniel Newman, agreed with her "Brothers" Thomas Newman (Daniel's brother), David Waterbury (husband of Daniel's sister Sarah), and Increase and John Holly (husbands respectively of Daniel's sisters Elizabeth and Hannah), to convey to them her rights to lands and meadows, with the house, barn and all appurtenances, all formerly belonging to her late husband, except "two acres of fresh medow in & nere the littell fresh medow," in exchange for the life use of the house and lot, one acre of meadow and part of the barn, the four men agreeing to shingle the house and repair the barn (ibid., A:254). Three months later the four men agreed to divide Daniel's estate (ibid., A:268).

John (2) Holly and his wife Mary had nine known children. Dates shown parenthetically are taken from a manuscript entitled Holly Family in America, compiled prior to 1861 by Charles Moses Holly and deposited with The Ferguson Library, Stamford. References shown parenthetically, unless otherwise noted, are to Stamford Town Records:

i. Samuel Holly, for many years the town clerk of Stamford, was born about 1642, for he died there 13 May 1709, aged 68 years (1:74). On 25 June 1668 he married Mary Close (1:102), daughter of Goodman and Elizabeth Close. Mary Holly, widow, died 7 April 1714 (1:126). Ancestors of J.A. Close, a typescript by Joseph A. Close owned by The Ferguson Library, deduces quite reasonably that Goodman Close's given name was John since Greenwich Early Records reveal the 14 July 1699 marriage of a "John Close Second." Mr. Close also notes that Mary, widow of Samuel Holly, died 7 April 1714, aged 72, so was born about 1642.

ii. (Capt.) Increase Holly, born (20 August 1643), died 20 May 1732, the entry identifying him as "Capt. Increase Holly" (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:21). On 2 April 1679 he married (1:113) Elizabeth Newman, born about 1654, who died 5 December 171- (1:143) or (5 December 1713, aged 59), daughter of William and Elizabeth Newman of Stamford and sister of Hannah Newman, who married Increase's brother John.

iii. Elizabeth Holly, born say, 1646, married (Capt.) Robert Turney, q.v., baptized 13 June 1663 at Fairfield, who died there about January 1690, son of Benjamin and Mary (Odell) Turney of Fairfield (The American Genealogist, 13:142; 14:224).

iv. John Holly Jr., born (3 November 1649), died 22 September 1716 (1:108). On 2 April 1679 he married Hannah Newman (1:54), born 29 January 1657/8 (1:74), died 24 January 1712 (Registration of Births, Marriages and Deaths of Stamford Families: 42, by the Rev. E. B. Huntington). She was a daughter of William and Elizabeth Newman of Stamford and a sister of Elizabeth Newman who married John's brother Increase. This is an instance of a double wedding of two brothers to two sisters.

v. Hannah Holly was born 18 April 1651 (Bates, Selleck and Allied Families of Stamford, Norwalk and Fairfield, Conn.: 155, a typescript by Henry S. Gorham at The Ferguson Library, Stamford). She died 7 December 1710 (1:130). On 16 November 167- (1:113) or (16 November 1672) Hannah married (Deacon) Samuel Hoit or Hoyt, q.v., son of Simon and Susanna (Smith) Hoyt.

vi. Bethia Holly, born (6 January 1655), married 16 November 167- (1:113) or (16 November 1672), Jonas Weed Jr., q.v., son of Jonas and Mary Weed. As did their brothers Increase and John, Bethia and Hannah solemnized their marriages in a double wedding ceremony. Bethia Weed, widow, died 29 December 1713 (1:126).

3. vii. Elisha Holly, born 6 March 1659/60 (1:74).

4. viii. Jonathan Holly, born 1 March 1661/2 (1:98).

ix. Abigail Holly, born about 1665, was mentioned in her father's will. According to Gorham's Allied Families, op. cit.: 150, 150a, she married Nathaniel Cross, who died 28 October 1714

(1:126). History and Genealogy of the Families of Old Fairfield, 1:167, gives Nathaniel's first wife as Abigail, surname unknown. Nathaniel married second, 6 November 1696, Hannah Knapp (1:104).

3. ELISHA HOLLY, son of John (2) Holly and his wife, Mary, of Stamford, Connecticut, was born there 6 March 1659/60 (Stamford Town Records, 1:74) and died there 28 October 1719 (ibid., 1:132). On 2 December 1686 he married Martha Holmes (ibid., 1:130), q.v., daughter of Stephen and Martha Holmes of Stamford.

Elisha Holly served the town of Stamford in many capacities. In 1689 he was one of two agents named to dispose of corn owned by the town. That same year, and again in 1692, he was made one of two collectors of the tax levied to pay Mr. John Bishop, the minister. Elisha was elected a pounder in 1687 and 1690; fence viewer, 1689-90, 1709 and 1715; constable, 1694; townsman, 1695, 1700 and 1704-8; surveyor of highways, 1698; lister, 11 times between 1702 and 1714; collector of town taxes, 1707; town clerk, pro tem., twice in January 1709, and three months later the town minutes state: "Elisha Holly is chosen town clerk & recorder for ye time being & during ye pleasure of s'd town, who was sworn accordingly"; sealer of weights and measures, 1711, and moderator of the town meeting held 20 April 1719, the year of his death. Additionally, Mr. Holly was named an auditor in 1700, 1703 ("to adiate or probaters [i.e., to audit or verify] of ye bills where the town are charged debters"), 1704, 1706 ("to take account of ye money rate formerly raised in ye towne for armes"), and in 1715 ("to auditt & clear accompts with ye town treasurrer, collect'r or any other persons or person with whome there is remaining any money due or belonging to ye said town"). In 1713 his name appears in the records as a justice of the peace.

Elisha Holly was frequently called upon to serve Stamford as a committeeman. He was named to committees requested to lay out or to correct layouts of land, highways or fences twelve times between 1687 and 1718; to supervise the allotment of land to individual proprietors, 1698, and to consider requests for land grants in 1701. Elisha Holly and two others were designated in 1699 "to examin and se whether or no there hath bine no wrong dun in peoples takeing up more land the' they should have dun for their heads right & medow wrights, according to laying out of Newfield." A "head right" was the claim a man had to a distribution of commonage when such right was to be based on the number of "heads" in his household (sometimes including livestock) rather than on the assessed value of his taxable property, the customary method; a "meadow right" was a claim to an allotment of meadow land as distinguished from other types of land (swamp, upland, woodland, etc.).

One month after its formation this committee was authorized by the town to use all lawful means of recovering from individuals any excess acreage taken up by them in the Newfield, and in the following month to prosecute any inhabitant found guilty of so doing. In 1704 Mr. Holly was one of a committee of five to investigate "exstravegant mesurs of lands," and in 1706 he was on a committee charged with investigating the two divisions of the Long Lots and to correct inequities, "upon ye encouragement of three shillings p' day to be paid to each member."

In 1700 Elisha Holly and one other man were asked to decide whether or not Stony Brook, Middlesex parish, Stamford, was suitable for a fulling mill. One year later Elisha was placed on a committee asked to treat with the Indians and purchase land. He was on another in 1708 "to prosecue those that have not theire fences vewed aboute theire closes acording to ye towns voate."

Mr. Holly became involved in the Stamford-Norwalk boundary dispute. In 1709 the town, "by vote, agree to deffend Jonath. Bates in his right of land where he now lives, against Norwake town, & do choose. . .Mr. Jonath Bates & Elisha Holly as plenepotentiaries in behalf of s'd town [i.e., Stamford] to defend ye s'd land or any other land on ye west side of five mile river yt may be controverted by Norwake town." Mr. Elisha Holly and two others were appointed to represent the town in claims relating to the boundary dispute with Norwalk, the appointment being confirmed at a town meeting held 10 March 1712/3. Two years later the committee was empowered "to mannage ye case depending between ye towns of Stamford & of Narwalk. . .[and] to prosecute in ye law all or any such persons or person as do or shall improve any of ye lands. . .lying between five miles river & ye perambulation line, so called."

Elisha Holly was put on a committee in 1701 "to gett ye worke done of making galeries or conveniencies in ye metting house, for seating." At that same meeting he was named to another committee "to seate people anew in ye meeting house," and on 28 June 1710 "Mr. Elisha Holly" was one of five charged with a like responsibility. This was the first instance found in local records of his being dignified with the title of respect, "Mr." Thereafter he was so styled in local records.

Chopping firewood was apparently considered undignified for men of the cloth, for ministers were invariably provided with a supply as a part of their compensation. Elisha Holly was named to committees of two charged with supervising the provision of firewood for the Rev. Mr. John Davenport in 1700, and 1703-6. Mr. Holly was in 1715 asked to serve with two others to settle an unspecified misunderstanding between the town and Mr. Davenport.

In 1704 Elisha Holly was named with two others "to treat with & agree with a person to keep schoole this yeare."

Stamford Town Records, 1:208, has an entry for "Elisha Holly, his father's ear mark, viz., a halfe peny under ye offe ear & an [illegible] s'd half peny under ye same ear. June 1681."

The records of a Town Court sitting 16 April 1686 in Stamford tell of a suit brought by "Jonas Seelly, plantife, ag'st Elisha Holly, defendant; entre his action to ye damage of 15 s. [number of pence illegible] damage; we find for the plantiff and ye defendant to pay two shillings in oats to [the] estate of Obadiah Seely, deseased, w'ch Jonas Seely is to receive as overseer."

In 13 of the semiannual sessions from 1700 to 1714, Stamford elected Elisha Holly as its deputy, sometimes alone and sometimes with one other, to represent the town in the General Assembly at Hartford (The Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, 1689-1706, 1706-1716, by Charles J. Hoadly).

The General Assembly of the Colony of Connecticut appointed Mr. Elisha Holly in May 1704 to a committee of five "to auditt the Colonie accounts with the Treasurer." He was reappointed in 1708, 1709 and 1711. In the October 1711 session the General Assembly appointed "Peter Burr, Esq., forthwith to assist the gentlemen now upon the audit of the Colonys accompts with the treasurer, in the room and stead of Mr. Elisha Holly, who is sick and not able to attend it." Mr. Holly had been chosen at the May session as one of the seven Justices of the Peace for Fairfield County, a position he appears to have filled for some years (ibid.).

The May 1711 session of the legislature also adopted a resolution that "Mr. Elisha Holly, Mr. Samuell Hanford and Mr. John Ambler are appointed to return the thanks of this Assembly to the Reverend Mr. Stephen Buckingham for his good service in preaching the election sermon, and also to request of him a copy thereof, that it may be printed."

Stamford Land Records include many deeds in which an Elisha Holly was a principal. Assuming that all such deeds not identified by indexing or analysis and dated after 10 November 1708 (when Elisha Jr. attained his majority) relate to Elisha Jr., his father was grantor in 37 and grantee in 47 deeds and 12 layouts by the town during the period 1682 to 1719.

Of interest is the conveyance in 1692 from Elisha Holly to his father-in-law, "Stephen Homs" of Stamford, of one acre of meadow "commonly called the Reedy hole" (ibid., A:230). In 1703 Samuel Holmes of Stamford granted one acre of meadow in Shippan to his brother-in-law, Elisha Holly (ibid., A:379). Elisha in 1713 "granted unto my respected son in law, Cary Leeds, & martha his wife, in part of his & her portion of my estate, a certain parcel or tract of land. . .eastward of noroton River. . .containing by measure, Ruff & smooth, fiveteen or Twenty acres or more, be it more or less" (ibid., B:203). Four months before his death Elisha, on 24 June 1719, "of my own free will & Fatherly affection towards my son Israel Holly of s'd Stanford, do give. . .a certain tract or parcel of Land. . .near Amblers Ridge . . .forth [sic] acres" (ibid., B:343). This land had been laid out to Elisha in 1700 (ibid., A:230). Other layouts from the town to Elisha Holly included 1 1/2 acres, 23 rods on Long Neck, 1688; 21 acres, 3 roods in Amblers Ridge, 1700; 27 1/2 acres beside Pine Brook, 1699 and 1700; 2 acres near Elbow Plain, 1709; 30 acres between the Mianus and Mill Rivers and below the Eight-mile Line, 1710; 2 acres on the east side of Stony Brook, 1715, and 1/2 acre near the Little Fresh Meadow, 1717. Additionally, recorded in Stamford Town Records under date of 5 March 1699/1700, was a grant by the town to Elisha Holly of 6 acres of land.

On 30 May 1716 Elisha Holly gave two acres on the east side of Stony Brook and below the Country Road to the town of Stamford (ibid., B:498), and in the following March conveyed to the town one-half acre near the Little Fresh Meadows, "on this proviso, yt said parcel of Land Ly comon & be to ye publick benefit & advantage of ye Inhabitants of s'd town" (ibid., B:310). These gifts were referred to in the minutes of town meetings held 8 December 1722 (Item 36) and 18 December 1722 (Item 40):

> P. vote, ye town do bind themselves to defend that part of land sequestered by Mr. Elisha Holly that lyes on ye north part of ye littel fresh medows. . . .the town do impower the townsmen or any three of them to agree with Joshua Scofield and to exchaing that peac of land which Mr. Elisha Holly sequestered to ye use of the town on the Easte side of Stoney Brook, as allso a peac of salt marsh on the east side of Richard Scofields mill pond, for ye convenancie of a highway down to Scofields mill or any other way which may be for the best benefit of the town.

The will of Elisha Holly, dated 7 October 1719, was proved 2 January 1719/20 (Fairfield Probate Records, 6:83):

> . . .to my dear and loveing wife, Martha, the use of my house and halfe the Orchard and corn lott as Low as it was planted last year; the use of half my barn & Stouer in it, And all the dung about it; the use of one third of all my field land and meadow and woodland, all my cattell, Jades, Sheep and Swine. . .all my household goods of all Sorts, all the money that is with me, my Smallest plow and pitch fork, my cart, boxes and hoops and all my wheat upon the ground. . .all my turnups, all my corn in the Chamber, & tabaco and all my wheat in Eliphelets barn, And all my oats in my own barn.

mothers decease, all my Mansion house and barn, the Residue of homestead. . .my Orchard and Swamp att the bottom [and twelve described tracts of land]. . . .also a gun that he has of mine. . . .

Also, I give unto my Son Elisha, one acre of Land in the plains Joining to that formerly mentioned; also the house & lott in the South Street that was Samuell Hollys; this last I give him to encourage him to repair the barn and house his mother lives in. . . .

The legacy to his son Eliphalet consisted of land and a gun. Son Elnathan received five parcels of land with the buildings thereon, and "A gun that is called Granedeer gun." To his son Israel he left, in addition to previously made gifts of land, a gun and a two-year-old heifer. Besides what had formally been given to them, Elisha's eldest daughter, Martha Leeds, received five shillings, and daughter Abigail Holly, three lots, household utensils and "A cow that has been in the woods this year that is dry." His daughter Sarah was to have, at the age of 18 years or upon marriage, 12 pounds in money, a tract of land, a brass kettle and a cow, and his granddaughter, Elizabeth Waterbury, upon the same conditions, was to receive a tract of land. Elisha named his wife, Martha, as his sole executrix.

The three witnesses appeared 27 October 1719 before Joseph Bishop, Justice of the Peace, and swore they saw "Mr. Elisha Hawley" sign his will, and on the same day Mr. Holly acknowledged before Justice Bishop that the instrument was his free act and deed.

The "Inventory of the Estate of Mr. Elisha Holly, who deceased Octo'r 27th [sic] 1719," was taken and appraised 2 February 1719/20 by John Hait and John Bell. Included with the usual farm implements and household furnishings were a large number of tracts of land, "A bible dixonary and other book, £3. . .4 guns, £7. . .3 old guns, £2. . .2 Swords, £1. . .14 lb. ledd, £7. . .7 Silver Spoons, £4:07:05; £11:5:7 Silver Money; p'r Silver Shoe Bukles, 10 s.," etc., a total of £1,594:13:03, an exceptionally large estate for that period. The inventory was approved by the Probate Court 29 June 1720 and ordered recorded (ibid., 6:88-9).

A receipt dated 1 July 1725 was recorded ibid., 8:29. "Elisha Holly, Eliphelet Holly, Elnathan Holly, Israel Holly, Cary Leeds in Right of his wife, Joseph Whiting in Right of his wife, Eliphalet Seely in Right of his wife, all of Stanford, . . .Children & heirs of our Hon'd Mother, Mrs. Martha Holley, late of Stanford, deceased, . . .acknowledge, . . .Each of us, to have received our full, just & Equall Part & proportion of our s'd Mother's Estate. . . ." The receipt was signed by each of the men but not by their wives, and witnessed by Charles Bishop and Andrew Bishop.

Elisha (3) Holly and his wife, Martha Holmes, had 10 children. Unless otherwise noted, parenthetical references for events dated prior to 1723 are to Stamford Town Records, and subsequent to 1722 are to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

5. i. Elisha Holly Jr., born 10 November 1687 (1:130).

ii. Eliphalet Holly, born 29 March 1690 (1:130), died 28 October 1744 (1:63). He married, in 1714, Mercy Penoyer (1:145), born 28 September 1693 (1:131), daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Knapp) Penoyer. The inventory of Eliphalet's estate was filed 2 May 1749 by his former wife, "Mercy Holly, alias Gregory" (Stamford Probate Records, 2:9).

iii. Martha Holly, born 28 December 1691 (1:130), was married by her father, Elisha Holly, J.P., to Cary Leeds on 10 December 1713 (1:129). Cary died 7 June 1730 (1:15).

iv. Elizabeth Holly, born 28 January 1693/4 (1:130), died 2 November 1717 (1:138). On 26 April 1716 she married Thomas Waterbury (1:106), born 12 May 1687, died 18 July 1758, son of John Waterbury, q.v., and his wife, Mary. Thomas' unidentified second wife died 18 September 1730 and he married third, Hannah, born 23 March 1700/1, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Gold?) Finch and widow of Joseph Hoyt (The American Genealogist, 27:241, 245).

v. Elnathan Holly, born 20 March 1696 (1:130). On 2 April 1717 he sold to his father a house, five-acre lot and barn "which I had of Cary Leeds. . .on ye Great plains, so called, east of noroton River" (Stamford Land Records, B:294).

vi. Israel Holly, born 16 January 1697/8 (1:130). He married, 25 February 1724/5, Sarah Cross (1:4), born 15 November 1705, daughter of Nathaniel and Hannah (Knapp) Cross (1:133).

vii. Abigail Holly, born 8 June 1700 (1:130), married on 21 April 1720, Joseph Whiting (1:96). Abigail, wife of Joseph, died 2 May 1733 (1:23) and was buried in the Noroton, Connecticut, cemetery. Joseph married second, on 25 January 1733/4, Hannah Beachgood, who died in May 1786, aged 85, and was buried in the same cemetery. Joseph died 6 August 1757, aged 65, and was interred beside the graves of his two wives (Gorham's Allied Families, op. cit.: 293). In his Holly manuscript at the Long Island Historical Society's library, William A. Eardeley identifies Joseph Whiting as a son of Joseph and Rebecca (Prescott) Whiting.

viii. John Holly, born 20 November 1702, died 8 December 1702 (1:130).

ix. Mary Holly, twin, born 5 May 1705, died three days later (1:130).

x. Sarah Holly, twin, born 5 May 1705 (1:130), married on 10 December 1724, Eliphalet Seely (1:3), who died 3 May 1784, aged 83 years, and was buried in the Old Parade Ground Cemetery, New Canaan, Connecticut. He was a son of Jonas and Mary Seely. Beside his grave is that of Sarah, "relict of Lieutenant Eliphalet Seely, died 1 March 1785: aged 81." Charles M. Holly in his Holly Family, op. cit., incorrectly identifies the subject Sarah Holly as the one of that name who married Obediah Seely 20 December 1727 (1:9), but the receipt dated 1 July 1725 and quoted above settles the matter.

4. JONATHAN HOLLY, son of John (2) Holly and his wife, Mary, was born at Stamford, Connecticut, 1 March 1661/2 (Stamford Town Records, 1:98). He died there 12 October 1712 (ibid., 1:138). On 2 December 168- (ibid., 1:101) or 2 December 1686 (Huntington's Registration, op. cit.: 41) he married Sarah Finch, q.v., daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Hoyt) Finch. "The ancient widow, Sarah Holly, Being in 88th year of her age, dyed January ye 16th 1750/51" (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:90).

Jonathan served in Stamford as a pounder in 1688, 1693, 1702 and 1706. He was appointed in 1689 as "packer for ye town, & to attend the work as in the law is derected," and in 1702 Jonathan "is chose packer & gager for ye yere ensuing." He was one of the two collectors of the tax for the salary of the Rev. John Bishop in 1693, and was also made a lister in that year. In 1702 and 1710 Jonathan was a surveyor of highways "northward," and was appointed a viewer of fences in Rocky Neck, 1706.

On 18 December 1695 Jonathan Holly and Nathaniel Cross purchased from the town of Stamford, for five shillings, six pence, "ye fort gates, ye wheels of ye great guns, & all the woodwork belonging to ye guns." Jonathan was in 1697 one of those agreeing to postpone the laying out of the Long Lots.

The list of taxable estates "belonging to ye proper inhabitance in Stanford," recorded 28 January 1701/2 in Stamford Land Records, A:376, included that of Jonathan Holly, appraised at £58:10:00.

"Jonathan Holly, his eare marke is two hapencs under ye neare eare & one on the fore side of the off eare; entered ye 14th of Desember 1702."

In comparison with his brother Elisha, Jonathan participated in relatively few real estate transactions. He appears as the grantor in 12 and grantee in 4 deeds, engaged in 1 exchange of land, and was the recipient of 7 layouts of land from the town during the period 1682 to 1710. His layouts included allotments of 9 acres beside Noroton River in 1684; 1 1/4 acres, 8 rods on Long Neck, 1688; 1/2 acre, 16 rods, in the Fresh Meadows, 1688; 19 acres on the west side of Noroton River, 1701; "six acres & a roode & some rods of land south of Hekquch Hill," 1701, and 19 acres "at Shitten plaine," with rectification to 31 1/2 acres of land laid out "at or on ye south east side of a hill called Hecquess," in 1707.

An additional layout to Jonathan Holly, in 1710, was recorded twice in Stamford Land Records, B:320 and 509, described as 7 acres on the west side of Noroton River, of which 3 acres were on account of the right of John Holly Sr., and 4 on the right of Samuel Hait, smith, in the right of his father, Joshua Hait. It is not clear how Jonathan Holly became entitled to this Hait right. The index to the land records does not reveal any such purchase by Jonathan, and it could not have come to him by descent, for Joshua Hait was not an ancestor of either Jonathan or his wife.

In 1695 Jonathan (4) Holly conveyed to his brother, John Holly Jr., "my half of the home lot granted to me by my father" (ibid., A:268 and 276).

Jonathan Holly died intestate 12 October 1712, and an inventory of his estate was taken 11 November 1712 by Joseph Holly, Elisha Holly and Samuel Finch (Fairfield Probate Records, 5:262). In addition to the usual farm and household items, the estate included various tracts of land appraised at £257; livestock and grain, £61; looking glass, 6 pence; two Bibles, £1, and old books, 5 shillings. The total value was estimated to be £375.

The probate record states, "There is Surviving the widow and 8 Children, the Eldest Son, Jonath' Holly, upward of 25 years; ther Son Charles Holly, 19 years; the 3'd Son, David, Son [sic], His age 17 years; the 4th Son, Jabez Holly, aged 13 years; the 5th Son, Increase Holly, aged 9 years; the 6th Son, Nath'll, 4 years old; the Eldest Daughter, Sarah, aged 22 years, the 2'd daughter, Deborah, aged 7 years."

Sarah Holly, the widow, appeared 30 June 1713 before Elisha (3) Holly, J.P., and swore to the completeness of the inventory. The Court of Probate approved the inventory and appointed Jonathan Holly and his widowed mother as administrators of the estate on 1 July 1713. The Probate Court on 3 March 1713/4 ordered distribution:

> the widow to have one third part of the houseing and Lands during her naturall life, and one third part of the moveable estate. . .forever; and there being eight Children of the s'd dec'd: Six Sons and two daughters, the eldest Son to have A double portion and the rest of the children to have equall and Single portions of the S'd Estate, and the Court do desire and appoint Mr. Elisha Holly and Mr. John Holly, Cooper, to distribute the said Estate according to the above order of Court.

Stamford Land Records reveal the details of only three distributions of Jonathan Holly's estate by Elisha Holly and John Holly, distributors. All were dated 6 April 1714 and recorded ibid., B:335, 346 and C:174, each being noted to the effect that the widow's one-third interest in the lands was reserved for her use during her life. Jonathan Jr. received property appraised at £67:16:00, and David and Deborah were each given assets valued at £33:18:00.

Jonathan (4) Holly and his wife, Sarah Finch, had ten children. Unless otherwise noted, parenthetical references for events dated prior to 1723 are to Stamford Town Records, and subsequent to 1722, to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Jonathan Holly Jr., born 16 August 1687 (1:120), married 25 April 1717, Sarah Buxton (1:145), q.v., daughter of Clement and Judith Buxton.

ii. Sarah Holly, born 4 December 1690 (1:120), died unmarried 18 December 1733 (1:24).

6. iii. Charles Holly, born 21 April 1694 (1:120).

iv. David Holly, born 16 January 1695/6 (1:120), died 1 April 1751 (1:91). He married twice; first, on 10 May 1722, Margery Webb (1:112), who died 19 April 1742 (1:55). David married second, at Norwalk, Connecticut, 28 July 1743, the widow Sarah Little of Norwalk (1:73).

v. Bethiah Holly, born 4 February 1697/8, died 20 January 1698/9 (1:120).

vi. Jabez Holly, born 20 November 1699 (1:120), died 11 February 1782, aged 82, and was buried in St. John's Episcopal Church Cemetery, Stamford. On 9 November 1727 he married Waitstill Clason (1:37), q.v., daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Denham) Clason.

vii. John Holly, twin, born 2 December 1703, died 20 December 1703 (1:120).

viii. Increase Holly, twin, born 2 December 1703 (1:120).

ix. Deborah Holly, born 11 March 1705/6 (1:120). The will of Deborah Holly was dated 4 June 1776, signed by her mark and recorded 11 December 1776 in Stamford Probate Records, 5:434. She left "unto my Brother Nathaniel Holly Ten Pounds . . .which I order my Executor to pay my said Brother's debts with. . . .unto my two loving Cousins, namely, to Elizabeth Ayres, wife to Ebenezer Ayres, and Sarah Scofield, Wife to John Scofield, all the remainder of my Estate to be their own forever. I do nominate and ordain Ebenezer Ayres, Executor. . . ."

The witnesses were Abraham Scofield Jr., Thomas Scofield and Benjamin Weed. "Cousins" was used here in the then common usage of "nieces." Elizabeth, wife of Ebenezer Ayres, q.v., and Sarah, wife of John Scofield, q.v., were daughters of Deborah's brother Charles.

x. Nathaniel Holly, born about 1708. His birth is not of record but he was called the 6th (surviving) son, aged four years, in the record of the inventory of Jonathan's estate, taken 11 November 1712 (Fairfield Probate Records, 5:262). Nathaniel was baptized 21 May 1758 as an adult at Stamford's St. John's Episcopal Church. He was still living in 1776 when he was named as a legatee in the will of his sister Deborah.

5. ELISHA HOLLY, JR., son of Elisha (3) Holly and his wife, Martha Holmes, was born 10 November 1687 (Stamford Town Records, 1:130), and died 14 May 1752 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:96). On 24 January 1716/7 Elisha was married to Rebecca Bishop (Stamford Town Records, 1:106), q.v., daughter of Stephen and Mercy Bishop. Inscribed on a wall of St. John's and St. Andrew's Episcopal Cemetery, Stamford, are memorials to Elisha Holly, died 14 May 1752, aged in his 65th year, and to Rebecca, relict of Elisha Holly, died 23 November 1757, aged in her 65th year.

Elisha Holly Jr. was elected one of two sheepmasters in the years 1704, 1705 and 1706. In the latter year the minutes of a sheep owners meeting note, "It is voat that ye sheepe masters shall take diligent care aboute the flock, yt they be not hurried two great a travill, & that they goe not two longe one way" (Stamford Town Records, 1:378). Elisha was named pounder for Shippan in 1710 and 1711, and for the East Field in 1715. Two years later Elisha Holly Jr. was appointed as one of two grand jurors, and was again so honored in 1726. He was a fence viewer for the East Field in 1719 and 1736, and in 1720 was elected "counstable for ye year insuing, and he is ordered to collect ye country rate."

The name of Elisha Holly appears on the 30 March 1734 list of Stamford freemen.

Assuming all Stamford deeds in which an Elisha Holly was a principal, not identified by indexing or analysis as Elisha Sr., and dated subsequent to 10 November 1708 (when Elisha Jr. became of age), to have been those of Elisha (5) Holly, he was the grantor in 29 and grantee in 33 deeds, and the recipient of four layouts, from 1708 to 1751. Additionally, not recorded in Stamford Land Records, was a grant to him of a piece of land at a town meeting held 14 December 1713. Only two deeds are of interest. Elisha purchased from his brother, Israel Holly, 5 acres in the East Field in 1721 and 10 acres on the east side of Amblers Ridge in 1729 (ibid., B:411, C:169).

Elisha Holly's will was dated 18 April 1752 and proved 9 July 1752. For some reason not explained (perhaps overlooked by the probate clerk for 22 years), it and the inventory were not recorded until 20 April 1774 (Stamford Probate Records, 5:170-2):

> . . .all the grain or meat, meal, fat and Soap Left By me In my house at my Decease, Shall Not Be Inventoried, But Shall Be for the use of my famyly & my Son Stephen, under the Care of my Loving Wife, Rebeccah, & the Remainder I give & Dispose of In the following manner. . . .unto my Loving Wife, Rebeccah, the one third part of my personal or movable Estate, to be her own absolutely and forever; and ye use & Improvement of the one half of my mansion house wherein I Now Dwell, and of ye one half of my Barn, and the one half of my homsted and the one third Part of my Land and meadow In the East fild, and the one third part of my interest In the Southern Commons or Sequest Land, So Called, S'd houseing and Lands Being all in Stamford afors'd. I say, the use and Improvement of them So Long as She Shall Remain my Widow. . . .

To his eldest daughter, Elizabeth Holly, he left £387:10:00, and to his daughter Abigail Holly, £337:10:00. In addition to what he had formerly given them, he made bequests of £50 to each of his married daughters: Rebecca, wife of Nathaniel Waterbury; Martha, wife of Ezekiel Smith, and Mercy, wife of Samuel Lines. Elisha's eldest son, Stephen, was to receive three-fifths of the residue of his estate and his son Abraham, two-fifths. Rebecca, Elisha's wife, and their son Stephen, were made co-executors of the will.

The inventory of Elisha Holly's estate was taken 9 October 1752 by John Holly and Alexander Bishop and was presented to the Probate Court 5 December 1752. Real estate holdings, including two houses, were valued at £6,520; livestock, £418:10:00; 57 pounds of tobacco, £7:02:06; a gun, £5; a great coat, £7; a pair of leather britches, £5; a brass kettle, £8:10:00; a warming pan, £5; a pair of silver scales and weights, £1:08:00, and wheat, corn and flax, £170. The inventory shows no total, but approximated £7,500. This very large appraisal and the values shown above reflect an obvious inflation prevailing at this period.

Abraham and Stephen Holly, the surviving sons of Elisha (5) Holly, on 25 February 1757 entered into a partition agreement to divide their share of their late father's real estate (Stamford Land Records, F:357). Abraham took as his share the 301 1/2 acres of land "at a place Called the den," which land had been conveyed to them jointly on 5 February 1754 as part of their father's estate (ibid., F:47), and Stephen received "all the Remainder of S'd Estate" as his portion. On 15 January 1759 Stephen purchased from his sisters and their husbands, for £103, their rights to the real estate of their "Hounoured dec'd father, Mr. Elisha Holly, Late of Stamford" (ibid., F:356).

Elisha (5) Holly and his wife, Rebecca Bishop, had nine children. Unless otherwise noted, parenthetical references are to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Elisha Holly III, born 31 October 1717 (Stamford Town Records, 1:140). It seems certain that he was the Elisha, son of Elisha and "Elizabeth" (sic) Holly, who died 19 December 1717 (ibid., 1:138). There is no record of a marriage by Elisha (5) Holly prior to that with Rebecca Bishop, or of the death of a wife Elizabeth, or of the birth of a son prior to the 31 October 1717 birth of the subject Elisha. It appears obvious that the clerk, in recording this 19 December 1717 death, made an error in writing the mother's name.

ii. Elizabeth Holly, born about 1719. On 29 January 1749 Elizabeth Holly, aged 29 years, was baptized at St. John's Episcopal Church, Stamford. She was called "my Loving and Eldest Daughter, Elizabeth holly," in her father's will of 1752, and was then not married.

iii. Rebecca Holly, born say, 1721, for she died 23 October 1813 in her 92nd year, according to William A. Eardeley's Holly manuscript at the Long Island Historical Society's library. On 29 December 1743 she married Nathaniel Waterbury (1:68), born 2 May 1717, died 8 December 1777, son of Lt. John Waterbury and his second wife, Hannah Cross (The American Genealogist, 27:244).

iv. Martha Holly, born 28 September 1723 (1:0), was married 9 July 1747 at The First Congregational Church, Stamford, to Ezekiel Smith (1:93).

v. Elisha Holly (again), born 21 September 1726 (1:7). He was not mentioned in his father's will of 1752, and presumably died before that date, doubtless unmarried.

7. vi. Stephen Holly, born 19 October 1728 (1:12).

vii. Mercy Holly, born about 1730, married 28 February 1748/9 (1:86), Samuel Lines, son of Benjamin and Esther (Sturges) Lines (Families of Ancient New Haven: 1097, by Donald Lines Jacobus).

On 10 April 1752 Samuel Lines of Stamford sold to his brother-in-law, Stephen Holly of Stamford, for £30, "the Right of nine pounds, fifteen shillings & six pence List of Estate in the Southern Commons. . .Commonly Called ye Sequest Land, it Being a part of the Right which did originally Belong unto Daniel Scofield, Late of Stamford, deceased, according to his List of Estate, Ad. [A.D.] 1687, which I bought of Miles Scofield" (Stamford Land Records, E:462).

8. viii. Abraham Holly, born 12 January 1732/3 (1:23).

ix. Abigail Holly, born 16 June 1736 (1:31), married 29 May 1757, Israel Smith (1:145), born 9 February 1732/3 (1:22), son of Ezra and Mary (Weed) Smith. Abigail, wife of Israel Smith, died 12 April 1758 (1:145).

6. CHARLES HOLLY, son of Jonathan (4) Holly and his wife, Sarah Finch, was born 21 April 1694 at Stamford, Connecticut (Stamford Town Records, 1:120). On 16 January 1717/8 he was married to Elizabeth Bradley, (ibid., 1:145), q.v., daughter of John and Hannah (Sherwood) Bradley.

Charles Holly was appointed as a pounder for Rocky Neck in 1715 and 1718. At a town meeting held 20 December 1743 he was appointed as a surveyor of highways.

Stamford Land Records show Charles as a grantor in six deeds and a grantee in two during the years 1716 to 1728. Of interest are his sale in 1719 to Elisha Holly Sr. of a three-fourths interest in a house and 1 1/2 acre lot, described as "ye three quarter part thereof, together with ye three quarter part of ye hous thereon, & of fences, trees, well & all other priveledges" (ibid., B:357). In 1727 "Charls" Holly sold 8 1/2 acres of land on Newfield Ridge to Elisha Holly and Charles Webb for £24 (ibid., C:113).

No record of the death or probate of estate of Charles Holly has been found. Nor is any record found of a 17th or 18th century birth of a Charles Holly other than the subject one. It is therefore tentatively assumed that Charles (6) Holly was the one of that name who witnessed the 26 May 1750 will of Samuel Finch (Stamford Probate Records, 5:28); and who, on 25 May 1772, with John Holly, took the inventory of the estate of Nathan Selleck of Stamford, deceased (ibid., 3:505), although Charles (6) Holly would have been 78 years old in 1772. The identification seems unlikely, however.

Charles (6) Holly and his wife, Elizabeth Bradley, had five known children (unless otherwise noted, parenthetical references are to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths):

9. i. Elizabeth Holly, born 20 November 1718 (Stamford Town Records, 1:146).

ii. Jonathan Holly, born 13 June 1720 (ibid., 1:132), died unmarried 17 July 1747 at Rye Harbor (1:81). The inventory of the estate of Jonathan Holly Jr. of Stamford (called "Jr." to distinguish him from an older Jonathan Holly) was taken 12 September 1747 by John Holly and James Bell. His brother -in-law, Ebenezer Ayres, was appointed by the Probate Court to administer on his estate (Stamford Probate Records, 1:332, 338).

iii. Sarah Holly, born 28 April 1723 (1:0). On 30 December 1742 (1:56) she married John Scofield Jr., q.v., born 4 October 1716 (1:49), son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Pettit) Scofield.

In her will dated 4 June 1776, Deborah Holly, q.v., sister of Charles Holly, made a bequest "to Elizabeth Ayres, wife to Ebenezer Ayres, and Sarah Scofield, Wife to John Scofield, all the remainder of my Estate. . . ."

iv. Increase Holly, born 2 March 1726/7, died the following day (1:8).

v. Bethia Holly, born 21 April 1733 (1:23). According to William A. Eardeley's Holly manuscript at the Long Island Historical Society, Bethia married Joseph Peney in 1757.

7. STEPHEN HOLLY, son of Elisha (5) Holly and his wife, Rebecca Bishop, was born at Stamford, Connecticut, 19 October 1728 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:12). He died after 22 November 1770, the date of his will, and before 4 February 1771, when an inventory of his estate was made. Stephen married twice. On 9 October 1751 he was married in Greenwich, Connecticut, to Hannah Marshall (ibid., 1:94), who died 26 May 1761 (ibid., 1:141). Stephen married second, on 19 April 1762 (ibid., 1:146), Lois Todd, q.v., daughter of the Rev. Abraham Todd (pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Greenwich, who officiated at the wedding) and his wife, Hannah Dickerman. Lois was the widow of Obadiah Mead, born 20 February 1719, son of Benjamin Mead, q.v., and his wife Sarah Waterbury (History and Genealogy of the Mead Family: 389, 414, by Spencer P. Mead).

Stephen was elected as a surveyor of highways at a town meeting held at Stamford in 1752, as a grand juryman in 1755, and as a tithingman, 1761. His death at the early age of about 42 years prevented his having a more extensive record of public service.

Stephen Holly and his wife owned (i.e., agreed to abide by) the covenant of The First Congregational Church, Stamford, 25 September 1757, and on 9 October 1757 the wife of Stephen Holly was made a new member of that church. Four years later, on 8 November 1761, Stephen became a new member.

Stamford Land Records show Stephen Holly as grantor in 19 deeds, grantee in 24, recipient of 1 layout and participating in 2 partition agreements during the years 1751 through 1769. Several of the deeds are of interest. By three of them (ibid., F:293, 294; G:10), Stephen in 1756, 1758 and 1761 purchased from his cousins, children of Eliphalet and Mercy (Pennoyer) Holly, their rights to 5 acres of land in the East Field, south of the Country Road and east of Noroton River. In 1761 Stephen bought from his brother Abraham and their sisters Elizabeth, Rebecca, Martha and Mercy, their rights to land in "Stamford, Commonly Called The Sequest Land or Southern Commons, both Divided & Undivided, which belongs to ye Estate of our Honoured Mother, Mrs. Rebecca Holly, late of Stamford, Aforesaid, Dec'd, & Descended to us As Heirs to the S'd Rebecca, Dec'd" (ibid., G:11, 20). One other deed involving relatives is of record (ibid., G:185). In 1763 Eliphalet and Sarah (Holly) Seely sold to Stephen their interest in three small parcels of land in Stamford. Sarah was Stephen's paternal aunt.

Deeds recorded in Stamford Land Records show Stephen Holly as residing in that town as late as 31 May 1763. By 14 December 1764 he was called "of Greenwich," and was so described in 16 other Stamford deeds dated on or before 10 November 1769, 10 of which were executed in the last mentioned year. Greenwich Land Records do not contain any transactions in which Stephen was a principal. He presumably moved to Cortlandt Manor, Westchester County, New York, late in 1769 or early in 1770.

The will of Stephen (7) Holly was dated 22 November 1770, proved 8 February 1771 and recorded three days later (Stamford Probate Records, 3:429):

> I, Stephen Holly of the mannor of Courtland In the County of Westchester & province of New York in America. . .unto my true & Loving wife, Loiss Holly, one third part of my moveables & the negro Girl pru, & the use of one Third of my Estate During her natural Life, and the use of the Remainder of my Estate untill my Children Come to the age of fourteen years, & as they Come to that age, their part of my Estate to be put out or Let out for their benefit till they Come of age. Item, I Give to my four Sons, Silas Holly, Stephen Holly, Isaac Holly and Jonah Holly, the rest of my Estate Excepting one Hundred Pounds New York Currency, to be Equally Divided between them, only allowing five pounds more to Silas then Either of his brethren. Item, I Give unto my two Daughters, Rebecca Holly & Hannah Holly, fivety pounds a peice, making one Hundred pounds between them both. And I do nominate, Constitute and appoint my wife, Loiss Holly, Together with my Brother, Abr'm Holly, to be the Executors of this, my Last will and testament. . . .

Stephen Holly

An inventory of Stephen's estate located in Westchester County was taken 4 February 1771 by Gould Bowton and Joseph Benedict (ibid., 3:430-2). No total was shown, but the many items aggregated about £1,132 in value, "New york money," including notes and bonds, £175:15:10; Newman's bond and interest on it, £272:10:00; others' notes, with interest, £274:13:00; Jack, the servant man, £80:00:00; the negro woman servant, £65:00:00; one desk, £3:10:00; the woman's saddle, 16 shillings; five dozen sleeve buttons, £1:08:09; the gun, £1:12:00; the brewing tub, 4 shillings; 437 lbs. of pork, £6:17:08; livestock, £106:15:00, and 32 acres of wheat on the ground, £48:00:00.

The inventory of Mr. Holly's estate situated in Greenwich was taken 6 February 1771 by Daniel Smith and Henry Mead. The £57:02:05 total included, "a Slay, £1:10:00. . .34 Sheap, 11:01:00. . .one Heifer, 2:12:06" (ibid., 3:432).

The executors, Lois Holly and Abraham Holly, exhibited the two inventories 8 February 1771 to the Stamford Probate Court, sitting at Greenwich, which accepted them (ibid., 3:432).

In the probate file, as distinguished from the recording, is "An Inventory of the Estate of Stephen Holly, Late of Greenwich, Dec'd, who had for Sometime until not long before his Death been Resident in Cortlands Manor." The total was shown as £1,132:10:01 1/4. Another document shows the Greenwich property valued at £57:02:05, lawful money, equivalent to £76:03:02 1/4 "in Newyork money."

Lois Holly of Greenwich was on 12 May 1772 appointed by the Stamford Probate Court as guardian of "Stephen Holly, Isaac Holly, Jonah Holly & Hannah Holly, Children of Stephen Holly, Late of s'd Greenwich, Dec'd, upon her becomeing bound to s'd Judg, w'th Abr'm Holly of Stamford, in a bond of fifteen Hundred pounds" (ibid., 3:487). Abraham was the paternal uncle of the children.

On 6 July 1771 Silas Holly, son of Stephen Holly, late of Greenwich, deceased, being 14 years or more old, "made Choice of Stephen Holly of said Stamford for his Guardian" (ibid., 3:445). The recording is in error. As shown by the £500 bond in the file, Abraham Holly of Stamford, not Stephen Holly, was made "Guardian to Silas Holly, Son of Stephen Holly, late of Greenwich, Dec'd, a Minor." Silas' guardianship was correctly indexed in Volume 3.

A calculation found in the file shows a gross estate of £1,208:13:04 (£1,132:10:02 plus £76:03:02), less total debts owing by the estate, £150:13:04 (to 60 different persons, including £65:01:06 due to Nehemiah Mead), plus debts due to the estate of £13:12:00, leaving a "Clear & Divideable" estate of £1,071:12:00. This net amount, less £65:00:00 for "The negro wench, to the widow exclusive of 1/3d." (her "thirds," or legal dower) left £1,006:12:00 as "Dividable to the widow & Children." The widow's thirds amounted to £335:10:08; Silas, as eldest son, received £146:10:04; Stephen, Isaac and Jonah each received £141:10:04, and Rebecca and Hannah were given £50:00:00 each.

Stephen (7) Holly and his first wife, Hannah Marshall, had three children, their births having been recorded in Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Rebecca Holly, born 12 July 1752 (1:99).

ii. Elisha Holly, born 8 March 1755 (1:116). Charles M. Holly's Holly Family, op. cit., records a son "Eliphalet Holly" born 8 March 1754 to Stephen and Hannah, but the given name and year of birth are probably in error.

Elisha died before 22 November 1770, for he was not mentioned in his father's will of that date, nor in the distribution order of the Stamford Probate Court.

iii. Silas Holly, born before 25 September 1757, when Rebecca, Elisha and Silas were all baptized at The First Congregational Church, Stamford.

Stephen (7) Holly and his second wife, Lois (Todd) (Mead) Holly, had four children, their births having been recorded in Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

10. iv. Stephen Holly, born 12 January 1763 (1:146).

v. Isaac Holly, born 24 December 1764 (1:169). He died 9 March 1851. On 14 April 1790 Isaac married, at the Second Congregational Church, Greenwich, Sarah Reynolds, born 3 November 1767, died 2 June 1853, daughter of Joseph Reynolds (The History and Descendants of John and Sarah Reynolds: 407, by Marion H. Reynolds).

vi. Jonah Holly, born 26 November 1767 (1:169). He is said to have moved to Bedford, New York.

vii. Hannah Holly, born 11 February 1770 (1:171). She married at the Second Congregational Church, Greenwich, on 6 January 1791, James Knapp, born at Greenwich "21/27, 1764/5" (sic), died at Genoa, New York, 3 February 1847, son of Uriah and Hannah Knapp. Hannah, wife of James Knapp, died 22 October 1841 (Nicholas Knapp Genealogy: 134, by Alfred A. Knapp).

8. ABRAHAM HOLLY, son of Elisha (5) Holly and his wife, Rebecca Bishop, was born 12 January 1732/3 (Stamford Births, Marriages, and Deaths, 1:23). Charles M. Holly's unreliable Holly Family, op. cit., states he died in 1815, aged 83, but this seems unlikely, for the inventory of his estate was not taken until 1821. His will, however, was drawn in 1815. Abraham was married 12 January 1758 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:127) to Mary Webb, q.v., born 12 March 1739/40 (ibid., 1:44), daughter of John and Mary (Holmes) Webb. The record of death of his wife has not been found, but his will and the record of its probate shows she died before 15 November 1815.

Abraham served as a surveyor of highways for nine annual terms between 1771 and 1803; was a grand juror in each of the three years 1773-5, and again in 1801; lister, 1773 and 1781; selectman, 1777, and fence viewer, 1780.

In the 1767 and 1770 baptisms of his daughters, Abraham was called "of Stanwich," originally a part of Stamford, but later of Greenwich.

Among those listed in Stamford Town Records as having taken the Oath of Fidelity to the new State of Connecticut on 16 September 1777 is "Abr'm Holly."

On 7 December 1789 Abraham Holly made application "respecting a highway from branch bridge runing out by Dr. Isaac Smith's dwelling house; the town voted and directed the Selectmen to make inquiry therein and do as they may judge proper & just." The nature of the application is not stated.

Abraham Holly and his wife were members in good standing of the Stanwich Congregational Church on 25 May 1796.

Stamford Land Records show Abraham Holly as grantee in eight deeds and six mortgages, and grantor in 22 deeds during the period 1760 to 1813. As noted in the section of their father, Abraham and his brother Stephen entered into a partition agreement in 1757 respecting their late father's lands.

Deeds of interest in which Abraham was a principal include the sale in 1765 to the town of Stamford for £5 of a right of way for the construction through his property at Hunting Ridge of a highway to the Meeting House in Stanwich (G:393), and a like sale in 1800, for $11.00, of 30 rods in Long Ridge (M:474). In 1787 Abraham sold 60 acres in Hunting Ridge to his son Stephen for £75 (M:199), and three years later sold a 21-acre apple orchard in Hunting Ridge to his son Elnathan for £120 (L:528). In the year 1802, "in consideration of the affection I bear towards my son, Jared Holly of said Stamford," Abraham Holly of the same place gave 40 acres, 1 rood in Hunting Ridge to Jared, "Reserving to Myself the use and improvement therof During my Natural Life" (0:129). Abraham again deeded the same property to Jared, but without reservations, in 1812 (R:157), and in 1819 purchased from Jared, for $100, "Aboute ten Acres with the building thereon Standing" in Hunting Ridge (T:440).

Greenwich Land Records reveal only two deeds in which Abraham Holly was a principal. In 1788 he purchased, for £20, seven acres of land in Greenwich from Henry Waring of that place (13:359); and in 1792 sold to Henry Waring, for £10, about five acres at a place called Pine Swamp, in Greenwich (13:487).

The will of Abraham Holly was drawn 15 November 1815 and proved 3 September 1821 (Stamford Probate Records, 12:159-160):

> . . .unto my daughters Mary, Rebecca & Lucy, five hundred & twenty five dollars to be divided among them. . . .unto my daughter Chloe, one hundred dollars. . . .unto the children of my daughter Elizabeth, one hundred seventy five dollars, to be equally divided amongst them. Item, the residue & remainder of all my real & personal estate to be divided among my children as follows: my sons to have two parts & my daughters one part, that is, my daughters to have one half as much as my sons, & to be divided among them accordingly. Item, my son Abraham to have only the use of what I have given him during his natural life, & at his decease, to go to his children. Item, John Holly, son of my dec'd son Elnathan, to have one hundred dollars. Item, the children of my dec'd daughter to have as much as one of my other daughters, to be equally divided among them. And I. . .constitute & appoint Jared Holly, my son, as executor on this, my last will & testament.

William Scofield and Hezron Scofield took the inventory of the estate of Abraham Holly 17 September 1821. The total value, not shown but approximately £1,165, included house and land, £1,000; 1 acre of salt meadow, £30; 1 lot of books, 12 shillings, and 1 Bible, 75 shillings. The inventory was accepted by the Stamford Probate Court 20 September 1821 and ordered to be recorded (ibid., 12:182). It seems strange to find values expressed in pounds so many years after the dollar had been adopted in 1787 as the official currency of the United States.

The Stamford Probate Court on 11 April 1822 authorized Jared Holly, executor of the estate of the late Abraham Holly, to sell at public auction sufficient land to satisfy claims against the estate, aggregating $569.87, plus expenses of sale (ibid., 12:210). Two weeks later Jared reported the sale of one acre of salt meadow to William Scofield, he being the highest bidder, for $35 (sic – the consideration was reported as $25 in Stamford Land Records, U:201); and the sale of 32 acres of land lying at Hunting Ridge to William Youngs, he being the highest bidder, for $576.88 (sic – the land was described ibid., U:117, as 32 1/2 acres on the west side of Bedford Road, and the consideration as $576.38).

Distribution of the remaining estate of the late Abraham Holly was ordered 4 May 1822 by the Stamford Probate Court as follows: to Abraham Holly, eldest son, two-eleventh parts; to Stephen Holly, second son, and to Jared Holly, third son, one-eleventh part each; to Mary Pardee (eldest daughter), Rebecca Hobby (second daughter), Lucy Smith (third daughter), and "Cloe" Ingersoll (fourth daughter), one-eleventh part each, and a one-eleventh part was to go jointly to Electa Simmons, Samuel Coley and Hannah Coley, they "being the only Children of Elizabeth Coley, Dec'd, a Daughter of the Testator." The distribution was approved by the Stamford Probate Court 15 June 1822 (Stamford Probate Records, 12:222-4).

Abraham (8) Holly and his wife, Mary Webb, had ten children, their births having been recorded in Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Abraham Holly Jr. born 23 November 1758 (1:129). The pension application (S-37110) dated 26 July 1820 of "Ab'm Holley Jun'r" of Stamford, "62" years old, stated he enlisted in December 1775 in a company commanded by Capt. (Joseph) Hoyt in Col. (Charles) Webb's regiment for a term of one year, served out his time and was honorably discharged. The application stated he was destitute and unable to work, and that his wife, aged 64 years, was "from Infirmity unable to Labour." A monthly pension of $8 was awarded to him, beginning 2 April 1818.

ii. Stephen Holly, born 15 October 1760 (1:138). An indenture of interest, dated 23 October 1829, was recorded in Stamford Land Records, W:454. Andrew, John, Abraham, William, James, Clarra and Chloe Holly, and Lydia Hitchcock, Lois Dutton and Mehetable Palmer, all "Heirs of the late Stephen Holly of Westerlo, County of albany and State of New York," for $100 conveyed to "Jarard Holly of Stamford," their paternal uncle, 10 acres of land in Stamford, "in his actual possession now being."

iii. Mary Holly, born 1 April 1763 (1:147). She was called Mary Pardee, eldest daughter, in the distribution of her father's estate.

The Pardee Genealogy: 173-4, edited by Donald Lines Jacobus, gives an account of Nathaniel Pardee, born 1759 in Salem, New York, who died 22 August 1824 at Salisbury, Herkimer County, New York, son of Nathan and Sarah (Mead) Pardee. The account states that Nathaniel's wife is unknown, but she is now identified, for she was surely the subject Mary Holly. Their children were Jared, William, Chauncey and Willis Pardee, and Mary, wife of Robert Sly of Boonville, New York. On 26 February 1827 all these children conveyed land in Stamford to Silas Holly of Fairfield (Stamford Land Records, W:440). He was either the Silas Holly who was their mother's first cousin born about 1757 to Stephen (7) Holly, or their second cousin, the Silas Holly born in 1781 to Stephen (10) Holly.

iv. Elnathan Holly, born 27 August 1765 (1:172). He joined The First Congregational Church, Stamford, 17 September 1786. Elnathan died before his father drew his will in 1815, leaving a bequest to "John Holly, son of my dec'd son Elnathan."

v. Rebecca Holly, born 31 May 1767 (1:172), was baptized 5 July 1767 at The First Congregational Church, Stamford. On 8 July 1823 Rebecca Hobby, wife of Seymour Hobby, was made a new member of the Second Congregational Church, Greenwich. She was an original member in 1827 of the North Greenwich Congregational Church. On 3 May 1835 "Rebecca (Holley), wife of Seymour Hobby," was dismissed to the church in Scipio, New York.

vi. Elizabeth Holly, born 25 January 1770 (1:172), was baptized 28 March 1770 at The First Congregational Church, Stamford. She was called Elizabeth Coley, a deceased daughter, in the 1815 will of her father.

vii. Lucy Ann Holly, was called "Lusian" in the record of her birth on 2 March 1773 (1:194). She was named as Lucy Smith in the 1822 distribution of her father's estate.

viii. Jared Holly, born 14 January 1775 (1:194). Jared Holly of Hunting Ridge, Stamford, died 24 June 1849, aged 74 years, according to the register of the Long Ridge Congregational Church, of which he was a founding member on 5 July 1842.

His date of death, as shown on a gravestone in the Hunting Ridge Cemetery, however, was read as 21 June 1849, aged 71, the digit 4 apparently having been misread as 1, a common occurrence in reading eroded inscriptions.

The register of the Stanwich Congregational Church records the marriage on 24 December 1802 of Jared Holly and Polly Waring. They became members of that church on 24 June 1804.

ix. Abigail Holly, called "Abby" in the record of her birth on 14 July 1778 (Registration of Births, Marriages and Deaths of Stamford Families: 44, by the Rev. E.B. Huntington).

11. x. Chloe Holly, born about 1782.

9. ELIZABETH HOLLY, daughter of Charles (6) Holly and his wife, Elizabeth Bradley, was born at Stamford, Connecticut, 20 November 1718 (Stamford Town Records, 1:146). On 14 February 1739/40 she was married to Ebenezer Ayres (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:44), q.v. for the record of their children. He was a son of Richard and Abigail (Buxton) Ayres.

Elizabeth was a legatee in the will of her aunt, Deborah Holly, q.v.

10. STEPHEN HOLLY, son of Stephen (7) Holly and his second wife, Lois Todd, was born at Stamford, Connecticut, 12 January 1763 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:146). He was baptized 13 February 1763 at The First Congregational Church, Stamford. Stephen died, doubtless at Stamford, 23 March 1833. On 5 January 1780 Stephen was married to Deborah Ferris (ibid., 2:33). According to its register the marriage took place at the Second Congregational Church, Greenwich, Connecticut. Deborah's parentage has not been determined. In a pension application deposition made 13 September 1837 she stated she had been 74 years old on the 19th (or 17th) of July 1837, indicating a birthdate of 19 (or 17) July 1763 (pension claim W-21354).

Charles M. Holly's Holly Family, op. cit., incorrectly states that Deborah Ferris married Abraham Holly, son of Abraham (8) Holly, but her marriage record and her pension claim clearly prove her husband to have been Stephen Holly. He is identified as the Stephen, son of Stephen (7) Holly, by the statement in Deborah's deposition that "her husband, the said Stephen Holly, in March 1779 entered the service as a substitute for his brother, Silas Holly."

During the period 1792 to 1829 Stephen Holly was the grantor in six deeds and grantee in a like number recorded in Stamford Land Records. In eight of these deeds the principals were relatives of Stephen. In 1792 Stephen Holly of Stamford purchased from his cousin, Elnathan Holly of the same place, for £120, 20 acres in Hunting Ridge (M:200); and three years later "Stephen Holly of Cooksockee, County of Albany, State of New York" (i.e., Coxsackie), sold the same property to Abraham Holly of Stamford, his cousin, for £80, losing £40 on the transaction (N:133). In 1819 Stephen Holly of Stamford, for $124.80, sold 7 acres, 1 rood and 16 rods of land in Stamford, bordered by lands of William Scofield and Hezron Scofield, to his son-in-law, Philander Smith (T:233). (A rood equals one-fourth of an acre; 40 square rods, usually called just "rods" when area is involved, equal 1 rood.) On 19 September 1820 Stephen made two purchases from his half-brother Silas: 8 acres in North Stamford abutting lands of William Young, William Scofield and Hezron Scofield, for $120 (T:498) and, for $100, "a certain house standing in. . .Hunting ridge in the Society of Stanwich" adjoining Stephen's own land (T:498). On the following day Stephen, for "the love and affection I bear to Sammy T. Holly and Sally M. Holly, son and daughter of my son Silas Holly, all of s'd Stamford," conveyed to them "one tract of land covered by a Dwelling House and including s'd House, s'd land containing 4 roods of ground, more or less, bounded North and East by my own land, South by Highway and West by Bedford Road" (U:356). Presumably this was the dwelling he had purchased the day before. Six months later Stephen, for $100, sold 1 acre in Hunting Ridge, with the buildings thereon and including the garden on the south side of the house, to his son-in-law, Levi Sherwood (U:16). The last instrument in which Stephen was a principal was a mortgage deed to 5 acres in Hunting Ridge by which Silas Holly of Stamford (perhaps Stephen's uncle but, more probably, his son), secured debts of $34 to Hezron Scofield, $25 to Stephen Holly, both of Stamford, and $16 to Reuben Finch of Greenwich, the grantees (V:416).

There was also a Stephen Holly of Greenwich who, between 1832 and 1842, was a grantor in 8 deeds and a grantee in 10, according to the indexes to Greenwich Land Records. The first deed, dated 27 March 1832 (ibid., 22:310), was a conveyance by "Stephen Holly & Emeline A. Holly, Husband & wife, of the Town of Greenwich," and the last one was executed nine years after the death of Stephen (10) Holly. This Stephen Holly of Greenwich was doubtless the son of that name referred to in the 1849 will of Isaac Holly of Greenwich (Stamford Probate Records, 19:12-3), brother of Stephen (10) Holly.

In the 1790 Federal census of Stamford, Stephen Holly headed a household of one male aged over 15 (himself), one male under 16 (Silas) and three females (wife Deborah and daughters Sally and Phoebe).

On 16 August 1832 Stephen Holly of Stamford, aged 69 years, declared before the Stamford Probate Court in an application for a pension based on his Revolutionary War service (No. 2039), that:

> . . .in the month of March 1779 he took the place of his Brother, Silas Holly, who was an enlisted Soldier in a Company of Artillery Commanded by Lieut. Hughs, employed as Coast Guard & stationed at Horseneck [a part of present-day Greenwich]. Col. John Mead had command of the Guards on the lines at the time – The Declarant served out the Term of his Brothers enlistment (which expired in the Month of Sept'r 1779) as his Substitite – That his said Brother agreed with him, at the time, that he should take the whole bennefit of his enlistment – This Lieut. Hughs under whom he served, afterwards deserted to the enemy under this enlistment – The Declararant went frequently in the Whale boats by order of his Officers – The Whale boats were under command of Jabez Fitch. On one occasion they Captured a Schooner in East Chester Creek & killed the Capt. of the Schooner in capturing her – the Declarant was on board of the Whale Boat at the time. . . .

Apparently Stephen's application was not fully processed before he died, for the printed form at the end of his declaration bears this notation:

> We, Daniel Smith, a clergyman, residing in the town of Stamford, and S.H. Minor, residing in the same, hereby certify that we are well acquainted with Stephen Holly, who has subscribed and sworn to the above declaration; that we believe him to be sixty nine years of age ["at the time of his death," interlined]; that he is reputed and believed, in the neighborhood where he resided [the printed word "resides" has been altered to "resided"] to have been a Soldier of the Revolution; and that we concur in that opinion.
> Sworn and subscribed the 27th day of July 1833.
> S.H. Minor

Isaac Holly of Greenwich also deposed 16 August 1832 before the court that his brother Stephen was taken prisoner by the Refugee Light Horse "in the latter part of the Revolutionary War – The Deponent does not remember the year, but knows it was early in the Summer as they had just planted a field of Corn." Amos Hobby of Greenwich also testified on the same date as to the service of Stephen Holly. The Refugee Light Horse was a Loyalist cavalry unit.

The Revolutionary War pension application No. 2699 of Deborah Holly, widow of Stephen, includes a declaration reproduced below:

> County of Fairfield

On this 13th day of September A.D. 1837, before the Court of Probate within and for the District of Stamford in the said County and State, . . .personally appeared Deborah Holly, a resident of said Stamford, aged seventy four years the 19th [17th?] day of last July who, being first duly sworn, according to law, doth on her oath make the following declaration in order to obtain the benefit of the provision made by the act of Congress passed July 4th A.D. 1836.

That she is the widow of Stephen Holly, who was a private Soldier in the Army of The Revolution – That, to the best of her Knowledge & belief, (her Memory being greatly impaired by Sickness and old-age) her husband, the said Stephen Holly, in March 1779 entered the service as a substitute for his brother Silas Holly, who was an enlisted soldier in a company of Artillery commanded by Lieut. Hughes. This company, as declarant has been informed and verily believes, was employed to guard the Coast – was stationed most of the time at Horseneck and, with the other companies on the lines, was under the general command of Col. John Mead – That, her said husband continued in the service in the capacity of substitute for his brother Silas, as above stated, till the September next following – Declarant has been informed and she believes that a part of the above mentioned service was performed on board the Whale Boats.

She further declares that in the Fall of the same year her husband, the said Stephen, was draughted to keep Guard in the village of Stamford for two months, and served out that period under Capt. Reuben Scofield – That in January 1780, her said husband enlisted for two months in Captain Isaac How's company of Rangers and served during the period of his said enlistment.

Declarant says that during most of the year 1780 her said husband was employed in scouting parties, which were under the immediate command of Col. John Mead, till on the 7th of June 1781, as Declarant well recollects, her said husband was taken prisoner by the Refugee Light Horse and carried to New York and, as Declarant was told, confined there, as Prisoner of War, in the Sugar house – That, after having remained there as such prisoner, three months and one day, or three months wanting one day, he was exchanged and returned home to Stamford – Declarant saw her said husband when he was taken prisoner – saw the said Refugees strike at him with their cutlasses when he was endeavouring to effect his escape – saw him pinioned and bound to another man, by name, Briggs Reynolds, likewise pinioned, who was taken Prisoner at the same time, and saw them, thus pinioned and bound together, driven off before the Refugees on their way toward King's Bridge.

She further declares that on her said husband's return from his confinement in New York in Sept. 1781, he enlisted as a private in a company commanded by Capt. Charles Smith, of which company Jesse Hoyt was Lieut. and David Smith, Ensign – all of whom are dead. That she does not Know whether Gen. Waterbury or Mead had command of the Regiment to which said last mentioned company belonged, but thinks she has been informed that it was commanded by the latter – That the usual place of rendeyvous of this last mentioned company was at the fort in said Stamford called Fort Nonsense, and that her said husband continued to serve by enlistments under said Capt. Smith till the close of the Revolutionary War.

She further declares that she was married to the said Stephen Holly on the fifth day of January in the year seventeen hundred and eighty by Rev. Mr. Murdock – That her husband, the afore said Stephen Holly, died on the 23rd day of March 1833, and that she has remained his widow ever since that period as will more fully appear by reference to the proofs hereto annexed.

She also refers to the annexed declaration of her said husband and the proofs in support of the same as evidence of his revolutionary services. There is, as Declarant understands, a record of her said marriage in the Town records of Said Stamford.

On 30 October 1837 Deborah Holly was issued pension W-21354, recorded in Book A, Vol. 2, page 6, of $23.33 per annum, starting as of 4 March 1831. The first payment, including arrears to 4 September 1837, amounted to $151.65.

"The widow of Stephen Holly, Dec'd, late of said Stamford, being incompetent to administer his estate, Silas Holly of said Stamford is appointed administrator" on 4 April 1833 by the Stamford Probate Court. One week later Selleck Scofield and Isaac Ayres presented the inventory of Stephen's estate to the court, which was approved and ordered recorded (Stamford Probate Records, 14:484-5). The inventory showed no total amount, but came to about $1,220, of which 57 acres of land were appraised at $1,140.

The accounts of the administrator were exhibited to the court on 14 January 1834, showing that claims against the estate exceeded its value. The court allowed "& sets out to the widow of the Dec'd, as her own property, the following articles, being property exempt from liability to be taken in execution, viz. . . ." A listing of furniture and household effects aggregating $39.51 in value followed (ibid., 15:39).

Apparently Silas was able to make other arrangements for the payment of his father's debts, for on 18 January 1834 "The administrator of the estate of Stephen Holly, Dec'd, late of said Stamford, having as he alledges made provision for the payment of all the debts & charges against said estate without selling real estate belonging thereto for that purpose, this Court" ordered named distributors "to assign & set out to the widow of said Stephen her Dower in said estate, viz.: one third part of all the real estate of which s'd Stephen died seized, & also to distribute said estate in equal shares among the heirs at law of said Stephen, viz.: Silas Holly, son of s'd Stephen, & the Daughters of said Stephen, viz.: Sally, the wife of William Scofield; Phebe, the wife of Hezron Scofield; Clarissa, the wife of Philander Smith; Huldah, the wife of Robert R. Barlow, & Sabrina, the wife of Levi Sherwood."

The distribution was made 6 March 1834 and approved by the Court 15 October 1834. The portion given to Sally, wife of William Scofield, was described as "two acres of land, bounded North by land set off to the widow, East by Ebenezer L. Dan's land in part and partly by the burying ground set off for the use of all the heirs at law of the said Dec'd, and South by said burying ground in part and partly by highway, and West by land set off to Phebe, the wife of Hezron Scofield and land set off to the widow" (ibid., 15:40-1).

This burying ground, located in what was later known as Sarle's Farm, Hunting Ridge, was used for several of Stephen's children and their spouses, including Sally and her husband.

In a series of six deeds remarkable for the fact that they were executed on successive days from 3 June 1839 to 8 June 1839, the heirs of Stephen (10) Holly divided his real estate among themselves. By the first deed, Silas Holly; Hezron Scofield and Phebe, his wife; Philander Smith and Clarissa, his wife; Robert R. Barlow and Huldah, his wife, and Levi Sherwood and Sabrina, his wife, all of Stamford, for $60, quit-claimed to Sally Scofield, wife of William Scofield of Stamford, their rights to three acres adjoining land owned by Sally (Stamford Land Records, Y:750-1). In like manner each of the other children of Stephen (10) Holly acquired, by payment of $60 to his or her five siblings, a full and undivided interest in a portion of the property (ibid., Y:752-6).

Stephen (10) Holly and his wife, Deborah Ferris, had six children, parenthetical references being to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Silas Holly, born 16 November 1781 (2:33), died 4 March 1861, aged 79 years, and was buried in the family cemetery in Hunting Ridge. Rhoda, wife of Silas Holly, was baptized 7 September 1845 at the Long Ridge Congregational Church and made a new member on that day.

12. ii. Sarah (called Sally) Holly, was born 4 May 1784 (2:33).

iii. Phoebe Holly, born 5 January 1788 (2:33), died 8 May 1857. She married, as his second wife, Hezron Scofield, q.v., whose brother William married Phoebe's sister Sally. Hezron died 6 February 1866, aged 80. He, Phoebe and his first wife, Mary (who died 25 May 1816, aged 27 years), were all buried in the family cemetery.

iv. Clarissa Holly was born 27 October 1790, her birth record calling her "Clary" (2:33). She died 25 November 1858. Clarissa married Philander Smith, who died 13 September 1841, aged 52 years. He was born 4 December 1788 (2:2), son of Isaac and Abigail (Waring) Smith. Three children of Philander and Clarissa (Holly) Smith were baptized at the Stanwich Congregational Church in 1825, and one in 1831. Philander and

"Clarrissa" were buried in the family cemetery.

v. Huldah Holly, born about 1793, married Robert R. Barlow 14 December 1815 at the Stanwich Congregational Church.

vi. Sabrina Holly died 28 May 1857, aged 60 years, 9 months, 20 days, so was born about 8 August 1796. She was baptized 18 October 1796 at the Stanwich Congregational Church. Sabrina, wife of Levi Sherwood, was buried in the family cemetery in Hunting Ridge.

11. CHLOE HOLLY, daughter of Abraham (8) Holly and his wife, Mary Webb, was born in Stamford, Connecticut, about 1782. On 9 September 1804 she married at the Stanwich Congregational Church, Greenwich, Connecticut, John Ingersoll, q.v. for the record of their children. He was the son of Benjamin and Mercy (Webster) Ingersoll.

On 14 June 1805 Abraham Holly (Chloe's father), for $161.00, sold to "Cloe Ingersoll, wife of John Ingersol of said Stamford," 9 acres and 33 rods of land in Hunting Ridge (Stamford Land Records, R:526).

In the distribution of her father's estate, ordered 4 May 1822 (Stamford Probate Records, 12:222-4), "Cloa Ingersoll, fourth daughter," received one piece of land containing 10 acres, 3 roods and 25 rods.

12. SARAH (called Sally) HOLLY, daughter of Stephen (10) Holly and his wife, Deborah Ferris, was born 4 May 1784 at Stamford, Connecticut (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 2:33). She died 31 August 1854, aged 70 years (gravestone record). Sally was married 5 February 1804 (ibid., 2:91) to William Scofield, q.v. for the record of their children. He was a son of Billy and Elizabeth (Ayres) Scofield and brother of Hezron Scofield, who married Sally's sister Phoebe. The marriage of Sally and William was also recorded in the register of the Stanwich Congregational Church, Greenwich, Connecticut, but under the date of 6 February 1804.

William died 29 June 1842, aged 67. He and Sally were buried in the Holly family cemetery on Hunting Ridge, Stamford, later a part of Sarle's Farm.

An account of the search for the paternity of William Scofield is given in The American Genealogist, 46:209-11.

BISHOP

On 12 September 1693, the year before he died, the elderly Mr. Bishop made a substantial gift of land to his son Joseph (Stamford Land Records, B:210). Some years earlier he had made a like gift to his eldest son, Stephen (ibid., A:138). During the period 1650 to 1690 the Rev. Bishop was a grantee in 12 deeds and a grantor in six. On the important list of estates for the year 1687, upon which the rights to the Sequestered Land, or Southern Commons, were based, Mr. Bishop's assessed value of £ 107:10:00 was eighth highest of the 81 proprietors listed.

Rev. John Bishop died between 16 November 1694, the date of his will, and 31 December 1694, when the town voted to pay £35 to his estate for past services rendered. His tombstone in the burying ground at the rear of St. Andrew's Episcopal Chapel reads, "Rev. John Bishop came to Stamford from Massachusetts Bay: Erected 1694 by his sons Stephen and Joseph." The genealogist William A. Eardeley notes that the stone was moved there from the old cemetery in 1866 by Edwin Bishop, Esq.

The old minister could not refrain from converting his will into a sermon pointed at his children, so unusual an occurance that its preamble is quoted here in full.

This 9th Month ye 16 day 94 [16 November 1694].

For as much as all are mortall and ought to be All way redy for sudain deth if it So Come, as it doth to many, & lest I should have no Liberty of speech at death, as was ye case of my dear wife: I desire this may stand valid & In force as my Last will & testament. I now have use of my understanding, I Comende my Soule Into the hand of God who Gave it: and my body when ded to be decently buryed by those that survive me, & if it may be, to be Laide between ye two Graves of my dear wives, Rebecka and Joana, who are fallen a Sleep in Jesus & Gon to heaven before me.

Concerning my dear Children, all of them, This is my Will & Solemn Charge, yt they Labour, all of them, to Get Interest in Christ & be pertakers of his Sancifieing and Saveing Grace in this their day of Grace, which may not Long Last; for I fear yt ye Gospell is Going from New England for the Neglect & Contempt it hath found hear. If then they draw nigh unto God in God's way, take hold of his Covenant, Ingageing themselves in open and visable subjection unto the Lord & his kingdom; & that they Indeavour to walke worthy of the Lord in his holy fear all there dayes, keeping allways under the meens of Grace if it may be had, whatsoever it Cost them; that they Carry with reverence & due respects to Christs faithfull minesters, being all that is duty for their uphoulding & due Incoragment [apparently a reflection of his difficulties with the local Quakers]; That they carry Inoffencively toward all and among themselves (by all means), in peac & Love, without any unbrotherly Strife & Contention, and with mutuall helpfullness, one to another, the Elder takeing care of the younger, and the younger submiting to the Elder, as is meet in the Lord; & that they seeke & observe the advice of their friends In matters Concerning there Estate, that there be no defference upon that account. I shall Endeavour to do things as well as I Can to prevent after trouble, but where the father falls short and cannot forsee what is most Expedient in all points, Let Children Labour to be Content with what is don by there father in his Love to them all.

Concerning the desposall of what the Lord hath Given me, I declare it to be my will that it should be after this maner; Imprimis, I Setle on my Son Steeven all that he hath receaved of mee and my Estate, as house & house hold Goods and Lands, and of which I Gave him Lately, viz: the Eight Acres beyond Benjemen Greens. I Give him all that may be due to me and my Estate till my death. I Give him all my Right of Land In ye horse pasture and my 200 Acres Granted by the Court & Recorded, he paying what was due to Mr. Brockit, who Layed it oute, as his Letter Shows.

It[em]. I Give to my Son Joseph [parcels of land].... to my son Ebenezer, what was my Right and his Brother Josephs part in that which was Goodman potter's Lot [and other land].... to my Son Benjemin, my house and homelot and Butteings thereon [and other tracts of land].... to my daughter Whiteing, as ading to what She hath had (tho all to Litle, and Sory I can do no more), therty pounds, with my [clock?] and all belonging to it, and my Silver kan, with the Six yards of Black Stufe Sent from Yorke. To Strengthen my Executors to pay the s'd therty pounds to my daughter, I do Give them power to Sell my Land on Long neck.

I Constitute my two Sons, Steven and Joseph, to be Executors of this, my Last will, & desire brother Bell, Brother Ambler & Brother Weed to Assist them in what deficulty Soever may be in any matter, yt there may be no deference nor disagreement amoung my Children by any meens, as I have Charged them.

I Charg my Executors to Se all accounts Cleared and All Just debts paid; to whom I Give all the rest of my Estate not otherwise desposed off, and Invest them with power to Comand and receave whatsoever Shall be due to me....

The will was signed by John Bishop in the presence of Jonathan Sellick, Sen'r, and John Davenport (Fairfield Probate Records, 4:118b-118c).

"This is A true Inventory of the Estate of the Reverend Mr. Bishop of Stanford, deceased, orderly taken & according to Law, as nigh as we Could Com at in ye pertickulars [taken by]...Daniell Scofield, Daniel Wescoat, David Watterbery, Townsmen." The listing required two and one-half folios; no total amount was shown. Included in the inventory were "The Homlot and buildings on it, £115:00:0...the Lot that was potter's, £25:00:0..."; 15 other tracts of land, valued at £176:05:0, a clock, £1:10:0; another clock, £7:00:0; silver spoons and a silver tanker, £8:03:0; "A Gold Ring, as mony, £1:16:00"; three guns, a sword, dagger and pen knife, £3:15:6; many items of clothing, various livestock, and considerable house furniture and furnishings (ibid., 4:118c-118f).

"Mr. Steven Bishop gave oath in Court this 12 of March 1694/5 that ye above Inventory is A true Inventory of his deceased fathers Estate.... Mr. Bishop's Liberary, Apprised by Mr. John Davenport, and amounts to ye sum of £35:00:--....The Last Will and ye Inventory of the reverened Mr. John Bishop of Stanford, deceased, was Exhibited in Court and was Accepted & approved and ordered to be Recorded" (ibid., 4:118f.).

The six known children of the Rev. John (1) Bishop and his first wife, Rebecca Goodyear, were all born at Stamford (parenthetical references for events dated prior to 1723 are to Stamford Town Records, and subsequent to 1722, to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths):

2. i. Stephen Bishop, born by 1648.
   ii. Joseph Bishop, born by 1650; died at Stamford 14 September 1733 (1:23); married there 3 November 1691 (1:54 and 101), Elizabeth Knowles of Fairfield, who died at Stamford 22 April 1754, aged 85 (1:105). Joseph was a Justice in 1704, 1711 and 1714-33; lieutenant 1709, and captain, 1710.
   iii. Mary Bishop, born by 1658; died at Stamford 25 July 1658 (1:20).
   iv. Rebecca Bishop, died at Southampton, New York, 26 April 1726, aged 63 years, 2 months, so born about February 1663. She married the Rev. Whiting.
   v. Ebenezer Bishop, born circa 1666, since he died at Stamford 12 March 1710, aged 44 (1:144). On 2 October 1700 he married Sarah Slawson (1:144), born 20 January 1667, daughter of John (1:134), died 17 January 1743/4 (1:58).
   vi Benjamin Bishop, born say, 1670, who died at Stamford 25 January 1727/8 (1:9). He married on 24 August 1696 (1:104), Susannah, daughter of the Rev. Abraham Pierson.
   vii-x. Four unidentified sons, born and died before 1678.

2. STEPHEN BISHOP, son of the Reverend John (1) Bishop and his first wife, Rebecca Goodyear, was presumably born by 1648. As noted above, on 21 February 1670 the town of Stamford granted ten acres of land to Stephen and a like amount to his brother Joseph. Assuming that each had by then attained his majority Stephen, the elder, must have been born by, say, 1648 and Joseph, by 1650.

Mercy, the otherwise unidentified wife of Stephen Bishop, died 5 April 1735 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:29).

Stephen was one of the most active men of his day in Stamford's affairs. How long he served as schoolmaster is not revealed in the records, but on 11 January 1680/1, "P[er] vote, ye town release Steven Bishopp from keeping schoole." He was elected a fence viewer for the years 1682, 1690, 1695-6 and 1705; lister, 1682; made one of two "sirvaiers. . .for ye east field & eastward, & to make a highway over long swamp in to ye horse pasture. . ." at the 26 April 1683 town meeting, and again chosen as a surveyor of highways in 1691, 1699 and 1700; townsman (now called "selectman") in was taken on 2 November 1647 by Matthew Gilbert and Richard Miles, delivered to the court on 7 December 1647, and recorded in New Haven Probate Records, I:12. Real estate, consisting of dwelling house and home lot, the little house and barn, and meadow acreage, was appraised at £246:00:00; personal estate was valued at £225:19:06; and claims against others, including "an adventure in the Susan to Barbadoes," £18:07:00; leaving a gross estate of £490:06:06. Indebtedness to others, principally Stephen Goodyear, amounted to £126:03:02, reducing the estate to a net value of £364:03:04. Distribution was not made until 2 April 1716 (sic – a remarkable 70 years after his death), to daughter Phebe Russell and to the heirs of his only son Richard and of his daughters Anna Daniel, Susanna Crittenden, Rebecca Bowers and Sarah Whitehead (ibid., IV:397).

In the reassignment of the meeting house seats made 10 March 1646, "Mrs. Grigson" and three other ladies were placed in seat No. 2 of "the weomens seates. In the midle," just behind the empty seat reserved exclusively for the excommunicated wife of Governor Theophilus Eaton. Mrs. Gregson was also assigned to seat No. 2 in the 1656 and 1662 revisions of meeting house seating.

At a court sitting 6 February 1648 at New Haven, Mrs. Gregson, Christopher Todd and 16 others were each fined "12 d. for not bringing their waights & measures to be tryed upon the day appoynted."

Early colonial records contain many accounts of the difficulties the proprietors had with their servants, i.e., apprentices. Of interest here is a trial held 5 February 1649/50 (New Haven Town Records, I:3 ff.):

> Richard Fido, servant to Mr. Gibbard, and Nicolas Sloper, servant to M'ris Gregson, were called before the Court & told that they stand charged w'th sundrie miscariages, as theft, lying, disorderly night meetings, drinking sacke, strong watter, and having ther feasts in the night, w'th goods stollen from ther Governors or others; w'ch upon Examination they have confessed, and deserved to be kept in prison, but they were left to the dispose of ther Master and Mistris, w'ch might have bine an Ingagment upon them to have made them keep from such sinnfull courses; but notw'thstanding, they have since runn away, and that upon the Saboth, stolle sundrie things, and brought great disturbanc upon the Saboth, the Magistrats being necessitated to send men after them, the charge whereof they must beare, though the men tooke them not; but God sent Indians after them, who tooke them and brought them backe by force. they were now wished to speake and make a true, full and free confession of the severall miscariages of this nature, w'ch they know by themselves or others.

The account of the trial runs on for more than 10 printed pages, involving a number of others, including Captive, an Indian servant of Mr. Richard Malbon, Thomas Meekes and his wife, and their servant, James Clements. All were found guilty, the Meekes of receiving stolen goods and of fraternizing with other men's servants "in ye night when ther Governers were in bed, to drinke strong watter," etc.

Mrs. Gregson complained in 1653 that the bounds of her land at Solitary Cove were not defined in the town's original grant. The court on 27 February 1653/4 ordered "that the Townsmen shall goe and set out ye bounds of it, w'th due respect to M'ris Gregsons conveniency and also the Townes, both in refferrenc to high wayes and any other consideration."

According to a footnote in New Haven Town Records, I:8, Mrs. Jane Gregson lived on the southwest corner of Church and Chapel Streets.

The third division of commonage on the western side of New Haven was made in 1680. "Mrs. Greckson" received 116 acres. She was listed as heading a household of four persons and having a taxable estate assessed at £ 500. In the fifth division, made in 1711, "Mrs. grexons Lott" was 12 acres in size. Since she was not living then, the reference was to her estate. In the minutes of a town meeting held 20 September 1720 these 12 acres are referred to as belonging to "Mrs. Grizson and Danll." Anna, daughter of Jane Gregson and widow of Stephen Daniel, was intended. The second division of the Sequestered Land took place in 1713, "Mr. grixsons Lott" being four acres in size. In the minutes of a meeting held later that year the grant is referred to as "Mrs. Jane grixsons Lott." Both she and her husband had long been deceased, the lot being granted to their heirs.

Jane, widow of Mr. Gregson, died 4 June 1702. Her will, dated 5 February 1691/2 (sic), called her aged and weak. She requested "to be buried by her executrix and dear relatives." She left to her "daughter, Anna Daniel, my house and homelot and the remainder of my upland not yet disposed of at my farm on the east side of New Haven harbor, unless some of the children of my son Richard Gregson in England come over," in which event such children were to have the farm. Also to Anna, "my meadow at my said farm for life, then to her daughter. . . .also to my daughter, Anna Daniel, 6 or 7 A. of meadow near Westfield, for life, then to those of the children that need it most." Finally, daughter Daniel was to have all moveables in the house, and be executrix.

Mrs. Gregson left to her "daughter Mary in England, 30 A. of my Third Division near the Sperries farm." To "grandchild Ruth Frisbie of Branford, 14 A. of my East Side farm" (Ruth was the daughter of Rebecca Bowers and wife of John Frisbie); "also 15 A. of said farm to daughter Susanna Crittenden." To "daughter Phebe, 40 A. in the Third Division. . . .grandchild Elizabeth Winston, 8 A. of meadow and 10 A. of the Third Division" (she was a daughter of Anna Daniel and the wife of John Winston). To "grandchild Joanna Thompson, 9 A. of Third Division and 5 A. in the Quarter by the west lane, after my daughter Daniels decease." Joanna, daughter of Anna Daniel, was the wife of William Thompson. To "grandchild Rebecca Thompson, 6 A. meadow at Westfield (so called) now in her possession, and 10 A. of Third Division." She was a sister of Joanna (Daniel) Thompson and the wife of John Thompson. To "great-grandchild Elizabeth Glover that now lives with me, 9 A. on the Neck." Elizabeth was a daughter of John and Joanna (Daniel) Glover and granddaughter of Stephen and Anna (Gregson) Daniel. To "the four children of my daughter Whitehead, 6 A. of Third Division each." The witnesses to the will were William Peck and John Jones.

A verbal codicil was made a short time after the will was drawn, giving her daughter Anna Daniel a life interest in 3 acres of meadow at the South End and 3 acres at the west side, to go after Anna's death to her daughter Joanna and her children; and 3 acres of meadow at the South End were to go to Jane's daughter, Susanna Crittenden. The sole witness to the codicil was Hannah Falconer. The three witnesses were sworn in at the Probate Court 30 July 1702 (The Register, op. cit., 46:152).

An inventory of Jane Gregson's estate was taken 4 August 1702 by Thomas Tuttle and Nathaniel Boykin. Her house and homelot were appraised at £80; the meadow on the West Side Cove, £24; a meadow on the East Side, £30; land on the East Side not yet taken up, £15, and Third Divison Land, £27, the total estate, including personal property, being valued at £198. Distribution was ordered to Mrs. Ruth Frisby alias Hoadly, Joanna Thompson, Mrs. Susanna Crittenden and Mrs. Mary Wyke (ibid., 46:152).

Thomas (3) Gregson and his wife, Jane, had eight children whose records are, unless otherwise noted, taken from Families of Ancient New Haven, by Donald Lines Jacobus:

i. Richard Gregson, born in England about 1630. He appears to have been left behind in England, probably for the purpose of being educated, when his family sailed away to the New World. As shown below, he was living at Bristol, England, in 1640. By March 1656, however, Richard certainly resided in New Haven with his mother, for he was then assigned to seat No. 5 of the cross seats at the upper end of the meeting house (New Haven Town Records, I:271). He was living back in England when his mother drew her will in 1692.

Confirmation of the identity of Thomas (3) Gregson of New Haven is provided by two documents, each involving his son Richard. The first is the will of the London draper, Richard Gregson, son of Thomas and Alice (Merry) Gregson, which was proved 31 August 1640 in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury (116 Coventry). He referred to "my cosen, Thomas Gregson in Newe England" (who was Thomas (3) Gregson, the testator's first cousin), and bequeathed "unto my cosen [i.e., first cousin, once removed], Richard Gregson of Bristol, one Judgement confessed by one Samuel Oldfeild unto Thomas Gregson, which the said Thomas assigned to me." As will now be shown, the Richard Gregson of Bristol was the subject Richard.

The second document is a deed dated 26 March 1736 and recorded in New Haven Land Records, X:520, as reported in Papers of the New Haven Colony Historical Society, I:76-7, by which "William Grigson of the City of London, Gent., son and heir of William Grigson, late of the same place, Gent., deceased, who was the only surviving son and heir of Richard Grigson, formerly of New Haven in New England but lately of the City of Bristol, deceased, which said Richard Grigson was the only son and heir of Thomas Grigson, late of New Haven aforesaid, deceased, . . .out of his piety towards God and out of his zeal for the protestant religion and the Church of England" conveyed property in New Haven to be used for the erection of a church edifice and parsonage. This same land had earlier been distributed, in the settlement of the estate of Thomas (3) Gregson, to the "heirs of Richard, the oldest and only son of the deceased" (New Haven Probate Records, IV:397-8, as reported ibid., I:51).

4. ii. Anna Gregson, born circa 1632.

iii. Rebecca Gregson, born say, in 1635, who died before January 1685. She married the Rev. John Bowers, born about 1629, who died at Derby, Connecticut, 14 June 1687, son of George and Barbara Bowers. John married second, Bridget Thompson, daughter of Anthony Thompson. She died 19 May 1720 at Derby (The Frisbee-Frisbie Genealogy: 27, by Edward S. Frisbee).

Ruth, daughter of John and Rebecca (Gregson) Bowers and the widow of John Frisbie, married second, William Hoadley. She was the "Mrs. Ruth Frisby alias Hoadly" named in the record of distribution of the estate of her maternal grandmother.

iv. Susanna Gregson, born about 1637, died 8 September 1712 at Guilford, Connecticut. On 13 May 1661 she married at New Haven, Abraham Crittenden Jr., who died 25 September 1694, son of Abraham and Mary Crittenden of Guilford.

v. Mary Gregson was baptized 26 January 1639/40 at the First Congregational Society, New Haven. In the probate record of her mother's estate she was called Mary Wyke, living in England.

vi. Phebe Gregson was baptized at the First Congregational Society on 15 October 1643. She was twice married, and died 19 September 1730. In 1673 she married at New Haven the Rev. John Whiting, born about 1635, died 8 September 1689 at Hartford, aged 54 years, son of William and Susanna Whiting, and widower of Sybil Collins, who had died 3 June 1672, daughter of Edward and Martha Collins.

In 1692 Phebe married second the Rev. John Russell, son of John Russell of Cambridge, Massachusetts; Wethersfield, Connecticut, and Hadley, Massachusetts. The Rev. John Russell was widower first of Mary Talcott, who died between 1655 and 1660, daughter of "The Worshipful Mr. John Talcott" and his wife, Dorothy Mott of Hartford; and widower second of Rebecca Newberry, who died at Hadley 21 November 1688, aged 57 years, daughter of Thomas and Jane Newberry of Windsor, Connecticut. The Rev. John Russell died 10 December 1692 at Hadley, aged 66 years (Talcott Pedigree in England and America: 30-1, by S.V. Talcott, and Newberry Genealogy: 46, by J. Gardner Bartlett).

vii. Abigail Gregson, baptized 23 February 1644/5 at the First Congregational Society. She died young.

viii. Sarah Gregson, born, say, in 1646; died in 1697. On 12 December 1667 she married at New Haven John Gilbert, baptized in April 1644 at the First Congregational Society, who died at New Haven 26 November 1673, son of Matthew and Jane (Baker) Gilbert. Sarah married second, 9 May 1676 at New Haven, the widower, Capt. Samuel Whitehead, who died there in September 1690.

4. ANNA GREGSON, daughter of Thomas (3) Gregson and his wife, Jane, was born about 1632 in England and died 3 May 1709 at New Haven. Called by the then equivalent name "Hannah" in the New Haven records, Anna in 1651 married Stephen Daniel, q.v. for the record of their children.

"Hannah" and her sister Rebecca testified in a suit brought 3 July 1649 by Lancelot Fuller against Francis Newman and his wife for slandering Fuller's wife.

Dear Mr. Witheridge:

First, I apologize for the tardiness of my reply to your request!

Enclosed are copies of entries in the registers of St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, New York, and a copy of a brief history which mentions your relatives. It appears that Peter Selleck was on the very first vestry and continued on that vestry from 1797 - 1801.

The records do not mention your father Joseph by name, but I believe he was one of the seven children of Peter Selleck baptized on November 14, 1797. This is really the only information in our possession.

Faithfully,

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, PARIS HILL

St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, the first Episcopal Church in the State west of Johnstown, had its beginning in the autumn of 1796, 149 years ago.

In days gone by it was known as the "ox cart church" because: "Peter Selleck, Uri Doolittle and others, on training day that year (probably October, 1796), accidently meeting on Paris Green, retired to an ox cart and there held their first consultation in relation to the Church and agreed to organize a Church if possible and forthwith took measures to comply with the law in such case provided."

The first Episcopal service "on the Hill" was in the home of Gideon Seymour, who was the first Junior Warden. This service was held on December 18, 1796.

An attempt was made to organize in 1796, but because of legal "red tape" it was abandoned. On February 13, 1797, the parish was formally organized.

Since there was no church building, "an humble edifice of the dimensions of a schoolhouse" was purchased for $250, in which regular services were held on Sundays. The congregation, made up of pioneers who had moved from Connecticut in 1789 to settle in the heart of Coxe's Patent, was "full of joy and gladness, having the opportunity to worship God after the manner of their forefathers in the wilderness according to the form and order prescribed by the Protestant Episcopal Church."

Lay Readers conducted the services until the Rev. Robert Wetmore, an itinerant missionary for the propagation of the Gospel in the State of New York, came to Paris Hill. In the fall of 1797, while at Bridgewater, he heard of the new parish at Paris Hill, and visited the congregation. According to the Parish Register, the Rev. Mr. Wetmore baptized William Doolittle (son of Uri Doolittle), and the seven children of Peter Selleck on November 14, 1797. (You'll find the names of Uri Doolittle and Peter Selleck on the stone plaque in the vestibule).

"The first clergyman called to the parish was the Rev. Jonathan Judd, in 1804, who combined the cure of St. Paul's with that of Trinity Church, Utica. This dual charge continued until 1813, during which time the parish received two Episcopal Visitations - from Bishop Moore in 1810, and Bishop Hobart in 1812, when there were 77 communicants."

"In 1817, under the energetic leadership of the Rev. Nathaniel Huse, the vestry voted to 'build an Episcopal Church 50 feet long by 36 wide in 1818'. The original contract, with the specifications, is preserved in the parish records. The contractors agreed to erect the building according to the specifications, provide all the material, including masonry, plaster the inside and paint all woodwork 2 coats, ---all for $2,700." Bishop Hobart consecrated the church and confirmed 79 persons on September 20, 1819. This church is the one which we use today.

Many of the people came to church with ox teams, through deep and drifting snow, biting winds, and from miles away, and then sat through the long service without a fire. When the present church was erected in 1818, no provision whatever was made for heating, and it was not until 1822 that the congregation began to realize their inability to endure the cold as formerly. On January 1, 1822

Many of the people came to church with ox teams, through deep and drifting snow, biting winds, and from miles away, and then sat through the long service without a fire. When the present church was erected in 1818, no provision whatever was made for heating, and it was not until 1822 that the congregation began to realize their inability to endure the cold as formerly. On January 1, 1822 the vestry authorized the purchase of a stove - "not to exceed thirty three dollars!" During the 25 years previous the congregation had worshiped throughout the long, cold winters without any fire in the church, and it "required a great effort to overcome the prevailing prejudice against the use of stoves."

It is easy to see that the people were interested in their church. Their church meant something to them! "One man walked seven miles every Sunday, and one woman went without a new calico dress that she might add to her part in the building of the new church."

700 Attend Consecration Luncheon

Following the consecration service, more than 700 people attended the luncheon at the Hotel Onondaga, Syracuse, at which Bishop Coley was toastmaster and the Presiding Bishop made an address.

Mr. W. Dexter Wilson welcomed the Bishop Coadjutor on behalf of the laity and the Rev. Harold E. Sawyer spoke on behalf of the clergy. Bishop Oldham welcomed the new Bishop into the ranks of the Episcopacy, and Bishop Peabody closed with an address and his benediction.

Change in Membership of the Standing Committee

The Hon. Kennard Underwood, County Judge of Cayuga County, elected successively for several years past by the Convention as lay member of the Standing Committee of the Diocese, presented his resignation at the September meeting of that body, and Mr. David S. H. Howard of Utica was elected to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Howard was a member of the Board of Directors of the Diocesan Fiscal Corporation from its inception, in 1922, and declined re-election at the annual meeting last January under a plan, recently constituted, whereby the directors limit their terms of service.

Recent Gifts and Improvements

The rector of St. Peter's Church, Bainbridge, reports that during the summer the Altar Guild purchased and presented to the church a new green brocaded silk chasuble and appareled amice to match. A new furnace, complete with thermostat, airstat and blower, has been installed in the basement of the Guild House.

At St. Ann's Church, Afton, also under his charge, new lights have been installed in the nave of the church.

Church Mission of Help Annual Meeting

The Rev. Otis R. Rice, assistant at St. Thomas' Church, New York City, will be the speaker at the luncheon at the annual meeting of the Church Mission of Help, to be held at Calvary Church, Utica, on Thursday, October 27.

The day will begin with a celebration of the Holy Communion in Calvary Church, followed by a meditation.

After lunch, which will be at 12:45, a short Board meeting will be held.

Historic Marker Placed at Oldest Parish

Commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the formation of the original Diocese of Western New York, a diocesan pilgrimage was made to St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, on October 12, at which a bronze tablet was dedicated by Bishop Coley. Given by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese, the tablet, set in a native boulder recently moved to a site near the church entrance, is inscribed as follows:

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH
PARIS HILL, N. Y.
ORGANIZED FEBRUARY 13, 1797
THE OLDEST PARISH IN THE DIOCESE OF WESTERN NEW YORK WHEN ORGANIZED
NOVEMBER 1, 1838
THIS TABLET COMMEMORATES
THE CENTENNIAL OF THIS DIOCESE FROM WHICH THE DIOCESE OF CENTRAL NEW YORK
WAS FORMED IN 1868.
THIS TABLET WAS PLACED OCT. 12, 1938

The pilgrimage opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion, at which Bishop Coley was the celebrant, assisted by Bishop Peabody, the Rev. D. C. White and the Rev. E. L. Harvey. Following the service both Bishops made brief addresses and the Rev. Dr. H. G. Coddington, chairman of the diocesan Committee on Historic Celebrations, spoke on the history of the Mohawk valley and the pioneer faith that laid the foundations for the Church. A paper on the history of St. Paul's Church was read by the Rev. William J. Vincent, secretary of the Diocese.

An original poem, "A Pioneer Church," was read by Miss Margaret Root Garvin, after which those present formed groups on the church grounds for a box luncheon.

St. Paul's Church is in a splendid state of preservation. The exterior of the building was painted a few years ago and the interior thoroughly renovated last spring, the cost of which is being met by contributions from individuals and parishes.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, PARIS HILL, N. Y.

St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill

With the placing of an historical marker, on the occasion of the Diocesan Pilgrimage to Paris Hill, on October 12, the primacy of St. Paul's Church as the oldest existing parish in the geographical area that comprised the original Diocese of Western New York, when formed in 1838, was accentuated.

Known as the "ox cart church" because: "Peter Selleck, Uri Doolittle and others, on training day that year (1796) probably October, accidentally meeting on Paris Green, retired to an ox cart and there held their first consultation in relation to the Church and agreed to organize a Church if possible and forthwith took measures to comply with the law in such case provided."

St. Paul's Church and parish is a continued witness to the devotion and loyalty of its pioneer founders who moved from Connecticut in 1789 to settle in the heart of Coxe's Patent.

The first service of the Church was in the home of Gideon Seymour, on December 18, 1796. Two months later, on February 13, 1797, the parish was formally organized, a small house "about the size of a schoolhouse" was bought for $250, in which regular Sunday services were held, the congregation being "full of joy and gladness, having the opportunity to worship God after the manner of their forefathers in the wilderness according to the form and order prescribed by the Protestant Episcopal Church."

The Rev. Philander Chase (afterwards Bishop of the West), the founder of Trinity Church, Utica, who visited Paris in 1798, says he found the congregation "well kept together by regular Sunday Services led by lay readers from their own number."

An itinerant missionary, the Rev. Robert G. Wetmore, while at Bridgewater in the fall of 1797, heard of the new parish at Paris Hill, and visited the congregation. The first record of Baptism—that of the seven children of Peter Selleck—is entered in the parish minutes in his own handwriting, as also are baptisms by the Rev. Philander Chase, Father Nash of Otsego county, and by that indefatigable missionary to whom the Church in Western New York is deeply indebted—the Rev. Davenport Phelps.

The first clergyman called to the parish was the Rev. Jonathan Judd, in 1804, who combined the cure of St. Paul's with that of Trinity Church, Utica. This dual charge continued until 1813, during which time the parish received two Episcopal Visitations—from Bishop Moore in 1810, and Bishop Hobart in 1812, when there were 77 communicants.

In 1817, under the energetic leadership of the Rev. Nathaniel Huse, the vestry voted to "build an Episcopal Church fifty feet long by thirty-six wide in eighteen hundred and eighteen." The original contract, with all specifications, is preserved in the parish record. The contractors agreed to erect the building according to specifications, provide all the material, including masonry, plaster the inside and paint all woodwork two coats, for $2,700.

To ensure payment the vestry bound themselves for $6,000. Subscriptions to the total of $2,978 were received in pledges and all but $55 paid.

BISHOP HOBART

A house and "glebe for our clergyman" was purchased in 1824. The church was first heated in the winter of 1821—three years after its construction—when the vestry authorized the purchase of a stove "not to exceed thirty-three dollars." This same year subscriptions were taken to "employ a teacher of Sacred Music for this Society." An organ was purchased by subscription in 1830, and a committee was appointed to "case said organ." This organ still stands in the west gallery.

In 1868, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of its construction, the church was "modernized." The east wall was cut through and the present recessed chancel built, the original chancel being an enclosure extending eight feet into the nave of the church. The "horse box" pews, with high backs and swinging doors, were made over into the present pews and the surplus lumber used for paneling the present chancel. The "three decker" pulpit, standing back of the original altar, was torn down and the wood used in making the present altar; the original altar, drawn from Connecticut in an ox cart, becoming the sacristy table. At this time, also, two stained glass windows were installed, and a chandelier, with oil lamps, hung in the nave.

Five days after the Diocese of Central New York was formed (on November 10, 1868) Bishop Coxe of Western New York, and acting Bishop of the new Diocese, consecrated the additions and renovations to St. Paul's and, at the same service ordained John Bartlett Wicks to the diaconate, who was immediately called to charge of the parish.

The Rev. Mr. Wicks was born in Paris, baptized, confirmed, married, ordained to the diaconate and priesthood in St. Paul's Church; he served the parish for 33 years as rector, in two periods, from 1868 to 1883, and from 1895 to 1912; died as rector emeritus in 1915, and was buried from the church.

Apart from the several missionaries who ministered occasionally to the parish in its formative days, thirty-three clergymen have served, successively, as rectors during the one hundred forty-two years of parochial existence.

Since 1917, because of the removal from the community of many of the descendants of the old church families and the influx of new settlers of other nationalities and religious affiliations, St. Paul's Church has been served as a mission by the clergyman in charge of St. George's Church, Chadwicks.

For technical reasons, in 1934 the Convention of the Diocese declared the parish extinct, and possession of the property was taken by the Trustees of the Parochial Fund of the Diocese.

Oldest Episcopal Church In District Gets Marker

Placed in Front of St. Paul's Edifice at Paris Hill

St. Paul's Church on Paris Hill, oldest Episcopal church in New York State west of Johnstown, has been given a roadside marker calling attention to its distinction.

Situated in front of the church at the sharpest turn in the highway from Utica to Waterville, the marker is sure to attract the attention of motorists.

Private contributions and the aid of the Rt. Rev. Edward Huntington Coley, D.D., bishop of the diocese, made the erection of the marker possible. It was made by Thomas & Hughes, Utica contractors, who used redwood for the panel and cypress for the supports.

The committee in charge of the erection consisted of Mrs. W. B. Crouse, chairman; Mrs. Earl Putnam of Waterville and the Very Rev. D. Charles White, Utica, dean of the second district.

The marker calls attention to the founding of the church, Feb. 13, 1797; the erection of the first church in 1800, which was burned in 1818; and the erection of the present white frame structure in 1818. Inside the church is a marble memorial tablet containing the names of the founders of the church.

Another interesting relic is an organ, believed to be the first one in this country. It is no longer used for church purposes but is

Honors Founders

was erected yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Crouse played "Onward, Christian Soldiers" on the ancient instrument while the Rev. Mr. White did the pumping.

The key for the church may be obtained by visitors from the former rectory, adjoining the church, where Mrs. Julia Stinehour resides. The lower floor of the rectory building is used for church socials. For many years the Rev. J. B. Wicks of Paris Hill was rector, but now the church is supplied by the Rev. Ernest L. Harvey of Chad-

Dear Joan,

I was delighted to get the photocopies you sent, and I am very grateful for your work. Although we haven't yet found Joseph Selleck, I am continuing my search, and I am confident he will turn up in the records some day. Meanwhile, we do have the references to Selleck family members in the articles and church records you sent.

My next line of attack is to write to the Rev. John LaVoe at All Saints Episcopal Church in Utica. The record states that "The first clergyman called to the parish was the Rev. Jonathan Judd, in 1804, who combined the cure of St. Paul's with that of Trinity Church, Utica. This dual charge continued until 1813, during which time the parish received two Episcopal Visitations--from Bishop Moore in 1810, and Bishop Hobart in 1812, when there were 77 communicants."

I believe either you or Carol Greis in the diocesan office told me that Trinity Church was later combined with All Saints Church, Utica, and that All Saints Church still has its early records. I'm hoping that the early records of St. Paul's Church that seem to be missing may be among the early records of Trinity Church and therefore now at All Saints Church.

You did not say how much I owe you for your help, but I am enclosing a check for $23.00 to cover $20.00 for your time and $3.00 for photocopies and postage. If I owe you more, please let me know.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Dear Father LaVoe:

I am helping my daughter-in-law track down her Selleck ancestry, and we know that her great-great-grandfather, Joseph Whiting Selleck, was born Dec. 14, 1799, near Utica, N.Y. Family records also state that there was a ancester by the name of Peter Selleck, who was a Revolutionary War soldier. Peter Selleck's pension records from the govern-men ment archives show that he lived in Paris, Oneida County, New York, and died in 1840.

From a history of the town of Paris published in 1881 I learned that Peter Selleck was one of the first vestrymen of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, which was organized in 1797. A visiting clergyman baptized a number of children, including seven children of Peter Selleck, whose names are given, on Nov. 14, 1797. Of course, that was too early to include Joseph, who was born a year later.

The office of the Episcopal Diocese of Central New York looked up the early records of St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, but found there were several gaps in those early years, and Joseph Selleck's baptism did not appear. Neither do there appear to be confirmation records for that early period. They did send me published information that "the first clergyman called to the parish was the Rev. Jonathan Judd, in 1804, who combined the cure of St. Paul's with that of Trinity Church, Utica. This dual charge continued until 1813, during which time the parish received two Episcopal Visitations--from Bishop Moore in 1810, and Bishop Hobart in 1812, when there were 77 communicants."

Carol Greis of the diocesan office told me that Trinity Church was later combined with All Saints Church, Utica, and that All Saints Church still has its early records. I'm hoping that the early records of St. Paul's Church that seem to be missing may be among the early records of Trinity Church and therefore now at All Saints Church.

Would you be kind enough to look through the early records of Trinity Church to see if the records of St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, during the time when they had the same minister, are there? If so, I'd be very grateful to have you or someone in your congregation go through them and copy any references to the Selleck family. Enclosed is a check for $20.00 to reimburse you for the time and expense involved. If the cost is greater, please let me know. Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yoursesincerely,

David E. Witheridge

ANCESTOR'S SERVICES

My ancestor's services in assisting in the establishment of American Independence during the War of the Revolution were as follows:

Peter Selleck volunteered at Stamford, Conn. Dec. 23, 1775 for one year, with Capt. Elie Leavenworth. Joined his regiment at Prospect Hill, commanded by Col. Chas. Webb. for a siege of Boston, and was soon detached to fortify Dorchester Point - which was followed March 17, 1776 by the evacuatio of the city, and was ordered to New York City. On the marc he was left sick at Providence R.I. and did not join his regiment until it was stationed at Long Island in the command of Lord Stearling. Was not in Battle Aug 27 1776 - when Lord Stearling and some other officers wer taken prisoners. He retreated with the army to N.Y. City and from there being sick, he was sent to Ring Bridge, whether Selleck was with his regiment in the battle of White Plains is not distinctly stated

Gen. Chas. Lee was taken prisoner, and Gen. Sullivan took the command - Gen. Washington was pursued by the enemy until he crossed the Delaware River amid floating ice and facing a driving snow storm. During the night, Washington's army crossed the Delaware and surprised the British occupying Trenton, early in the morning of Dec. 26, 1776 and captured over 900 Hessions. Selleck participated in this Historic expidition and was discharged Jan. 1, 1781. He served 8 mo. from April 17, 1779 in Lieut. Davis company of artillery as Sea Coast guard on the shores of Long Island, and had a sever engagement with the British vessel, from which a foregoing party attempted to land and plunder the inhabitants. He served from April 1781 anothe 8 mo. under Capt. Lockwood.

He applied for a pension and was granted one Sept. 1832.

On motion, Mr. Warner, Mr. Skinner and Mr. Beardsley, were appointed a committee to prepare and report resolutions to the convention.

Mr. H. G. Warner from such committee, reported the following, which were unanimously adopted:

RESOLUTIONS:

Resolved, That our confidence in the President of the United States is undiminished and firm.—We look upon him as not inferior to any proud champion of democracy and equal rights in the days of our patriotic fathers, and feel honored that he is a citizen of our own great State.

Resolved, That in the Independent Treasury Law we see a declaration of principle by the Congress of the United States, that augers well for the permanency of our democratic institutions. We hail it as the harbinger of good to our country—as an effectual check to fraud and corruption in banking—as well calculated to foster and render permanent a healthy commerce—as a salutary preventive of extravagant and ruinous speculation—as the great remedy for the deceased financial system of the government—destined to purge the life blood of the body politic, and restore to just rights and equal privileges all classes of our fellow citizens—in short, to render more democratic the federal Union, and bring it near to the spirit of that noble form of rule conceived by the patriots of eighty-seven, and which for half a century the Democrats of the nation have been struggling to establish.—The name of Martin Van Buren will be loved by the American people as long as prosperity shall continue them free and independent.

Resolved, That in the manifest intention of the whig party, to fasten upon the nation the responsibilities of the individual States as proposed by their leading prints in 1839, we behold another insidious attempt, not only to enrich a horde of British and American bankers at the expense of our enterprise and industry, but to subject the finances of our general government to the power of English money changers and their mushroom aristocratic associates in our own country. Let infamy rest upon the head of the first American who countenanced the project, for he is an enemy to the country that gave him birth.

Resolved, That we solemnly protest against the policy of our state government involving the finances of the commonwealth to such a degree that its obligations are selling in the money market, urged upon stockjobbers and brokers at a discount. Shame! that the great State of New York, with her "abundant resources," should be compelled to pay usury to shavers, when by its statutes the taking of usury is a misdemeanor.

Resolved, That it needs no argument to prove that the "credit system," as understood and practiced by the whig party at the present day, is but a plausible device to cover the frauds and speculations of the unprincipled and designing. It brings ruin and disgrace upon individuals and states, and is as unlike the credit always at the command of integrity and responsibility, founded upon property, as the principles of aristocratic sway in government, to the just and equal rule of democracy.

Resolved, That we cordially respond to the nominations made by the State Convention at Syracuse, on the 2d inst. In the nominees for Governor and Lieut. Governor, we recognize high-minded democrats, always supporting the principles we profess—let democracy prove her triumph in their elections.

Resolved, That upon the Presidential Electoral Ticket we see many names that are dear to our country, and all the friends of liberty; we rejoice to see them stand forth once more in the holy cause, and doubt not that the country will be gratified with their triumphant election.

MARRIED:

In this city on Tuesday evening 22d inst. by Rev. P. A. Proal, Mr. Wm. B. Hubbard [printer] to Miss M. C. Lundegreen.

At New Hartford, on the 24th inst. by the Rev. M. C. Searle, Mr. O. G. Kellogg of Utica, to Miss Fanny D. Shepard of the former place.

In this city on Thursday, Sept. 20th, by Eld. Thomas Kill, Mr. William B. Foot to Mrs. Elizabeth Pearce both of this city.

In Marcy, on the evening of the 24th, by the Rev. Mr. Snyder of Yorkville, E. Farwell jr., merchant of Orleans Co. to Laura M. daughter of P. C. Baldwin Esq. of the former place.

In Vernon, on the 22d inst. by the Rev. J. P. Simmons, Geo. W. Cushman Esq. of Lairdsville, to Miss Electa, daughter of Alvan Dodge Esq. of the former place.

DIED;

At Marshall, Michigan, on the 20th inst, George Langford, Jr. Esq., recently of this city, aged 23 years.

The death of Mr. Langford has awakened in this place a sensibility which such an event rarely produces. Here, where he was best known and mostly and justly honored, the shock produced by his sudden death has been deep and universal. But a few weeks since he left his friends here, and filled with flowing hope and manly resolution, started to earn out for himself a fortune amid the flowing destinies of the West. His noble talents, his spotless character, his lofty ambition, indeed every thing about him in mind, manners and morals, gave strong assurance that success would crown his efforts, and those here from whom he separated himself, waited in the confident belief that in his career all their expectations would be fully realized.

How sadly have our hopes been disappointed. One step only in his course was taken, and by it he has sunk in the grave. The warm heart beats no longer, the bright intellect delights us no more. We can only mingle our sympathies with those relatives whose just hopes centered in him, have been blighted by death: we can but cherish the memory and emulate the virtues of our friend who is gone—and wonder at the mysterious Providence by which a life so full of promised excellence and usefulness, has been cut short in its very opening. S.

At his residence, in the town of Paris on the 16th inst. Mr. Peter Silleck, in the 84th year of his age.

Mr. Silleck removed from Connecticut to Paris at an early stage of its settlement, and was present and included in the earliest organization of the Episcopal society in the Parish of St. Paul's Church. And more than forty-three years sustained the character of a worthy communicant. In all the different relations of life, which in the order of Providence he was called to sustain, his uniform character and conduct was marked with integrity and uprightness. As a husband and parent he was affectionate and kind. In his more public social relations he was esteemed for his virtues which seemed to flow from a heart naturally kind and benevolent. As a soldier of the Revolution, he held a rank among those who successfully withstood the torrent, and sustained the cause of civil and religious freedom, against the powerful odds of might and oppression, while the fearful tide of war rolled its desolating waves over our distracted and suffering country, then bleeding at every pore. He lived for many years to participate in common with the remains of the patriot band who survived the war of the revolution, the blessings of civil liberty, and to share the bounty justly due from a nation's gratitude. In a word he was an honest and upright man, and a worthy member of the communion to which he belonged. G

Editor's Note

This folder contains miscellaneous unnumbered documents.

They start with a letter to me from Mom, which was accompanied by several pictures by Dad of a place called "Sellack" that they visited during their trip to England in 1976. (They knew I had recently begun my relationship with Virginia Selleck.) I presume this is the Sellack in Herefordshire mentioned in the index, but Mom doesn't specify.

In those days, of course, there was no Internet — no digital anything. Rolls of film were physically removed from a camera, developed by a machine at a photo shop, then sent from Great Britain to the United States by barnacle and snail mail.

Dear Tom,

Please forgive the rather girlish notepaper! I wouldn't normally choose this for a note to our son but when away from home one uses what comes to hand and this came to hand via Mabel. Before we left she sent a box of this for me to take along and write to her on so she'd have more than just postcards all summer. So I promptly misplaced it in the depths of one of our flight bags. Since it came to light finally several weeks ago I've used it to write to lots of people, and Mabel has only had one note so far — postcards all summer!

Well anyhow, the reason I chose this for you instead of plain paper is that the envelope is a good size for the enclosed pictures for Virginia. They turned up today having been lost at the photo shop when your father brought home the other ones. Some hurried clerk had written "Nitheridge" on the envelope instead of our name. Aren't you glad it isn't so?

Please tell Virginia that there are two other very good ones that we want an extra copy of for ourselves, so we're waiting to send hers until we get the prints some time after we get home. You know your dad he will never let the original out of his clutches until he gets extra prints. His philosophy is "a print in the hand is worth two in somebody elses!" Hope she enjoys having them.

When we got home from our 2 days in Cornwall we found a message to call Jim, which we promptly did, catching him just as he was about to leave for work. He's fine & peppy fine – he just wanted to hear our voices, I guess. So good to hear his. It won't be long now.

All our love, M. & R.

Bishop Keeler Dies in Germany

Episcopal Bishop of Minnesota, 69, Was at Army Camp

The Rt. Rev. Stephen E. Keeler, 69, Episcopal bishop of Minnesota, died Tuesday at a United States army camp near Heilbronn, Germany.

News of the death came to members of the Keeler family from the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, New York, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church. Bishop Sherrill, contacted by the Minneapolis Tribune, said he had no information about the manner of death.

TWO WEEKS AGO Bishop Keeler left Minneapolis to administer his duties as Episcopal bishop in charge of American churches in Europe. The assignment took Bishop Keeler overseas twice a year.

On such trips, he always made it a practice to meet with military chaplains and officiate at services for GIs stationed overseas. He expected to return late in October.

In 1955 while traveling in Europe on a similar assignment, Bishop Keeler was stricken with a heart ailment. After a long convalescence in Italy, the bishop returned home and plunged into local church activities with his usual vigor.

Bishop Keeler's successor will be the Rt. Rev. Hamilton H. Kellogg, who has served as bishop coadjutor under Bishop Keeler.

ONLY LAST June, the diocese joined with Bishop Keeler in celebrating the 25th anniversary of his consecration as bishop.

At that time, Bishop Keeler said: "I can truthfully say I know one animal very well—and that's the clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal church."

And they, in turn, knew Bishop Keeler as a man wholeheartedly "for" the ministerial profession.

"I'd recommend it to any young man who is truly fond of people," Bishop Keeler said.

THROUGHOUT his life, Bishop Keeler was a man of many achievements.

He was so gifted a speaker that a Yale classmate, the late Sen. Robert Taft, told Bishop Keeler while in college he should study law.

Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale urged the bishop to consider writing for a life's work. Phelps once said that Sinclair Lewis, Stephen Vincent Benet and Stephen Keeler were the three most promising young writers he encountered.

But Stephen Edwards Keeler grew up with the clergy as his ambition. For a short time after graduating from Yale in 1910, Bishop Keeler bowed to the wishes of his father and took a position in a bank.

The elder Keeler always wanted his son to become a banker.

BUT YOUNG Keeler saved his salary for one year. Then he enrolled at General Theological seminary in New York. In 1913, he graduated a Bachelor of Divinity.

Of the many achievements that came after, Bishop Keeler took the most pride in the World Anglican Congress.

He was instrumental in bringing the meeting of world clergy and laymen to Minneapolis in 1954—the first time the congress was held outside England.

Acting as host to them was a happy duty for Bishop

Editor's note:

This clipping is from page 1 of the Minneapolis Tribune, Sept. 26, 1956. For the back story, see the index entry for the Rev. Charles M. Selleck, including especially the editor's note at that entry. See also pp. 75-76, folder 1.59a. DEW wrote (on p. 76) that the Rev. Mr. Charles M. Selleck was "Rector of the Prot. Episc. Church of New Haven, Conn., in 1887 and baptized [the Rt. Rev.] Stephen E. Keeler, later Episc. Bishop of Minn. [meaning Minnesota, not Minneapolis, which was always abbreviated "Mpls." by DEW]." When Stephen was seven, wrote DEW (here quoting the Tribune article verbatim): "Dr. Selleck used to let the boy accompany him to services of some of the smaller mission churches in the area. It wasn't long before young Stephen began to take an active part in Dr. Selleck's services. The clergyman allowed the boy to read the Bible Lesson to the assembled congregation."

BISHOP Arrived in Minnesota in 1931

Keeler. And the Congress' most popular feature—the tea tent on the lawn of Cathedral Church of St. Mark—also was the idea of Bishop Keeler.

"YOU CAN'T properly entertain the English without tea," he had said.

Within the big diocese of Minnesota, Bishop Keeler traveled 30,000 miles annually.

To him goes full credit for:

Re-opening many small churches in the state and placing young men in charge.

Organizing the Cathedral School of Bishop's men in 1941 through which laymen have been trained for work throughout rural areas where there is no resident clergy.

Uniting old Seabury Divinity school at Faribault, Minn., with Western Theological seminary, Evanston, Ill., into Seabury-Western, at a time when both schools were operating "in the red." The union was a profitable one.

Moving the cathedral of the diocese from Faribault to Minneapolis and reuniting the two dioceses of Duluth and Minnesota into one that now has a communicant membership of 26,538.

Initiating missionary work among the sick, under-privileged and unfortunate in the Twin Cities and among the Indians of Minnesota in an effort to better their living conditions materially and spiritually.

Bishop Keeler was born April 16, 1887 and reared on a historical plot of ground in New Canaan, Conn., that was his father's farm.

The Rev. Charles M. Selleck baptized the young bishop-to-be. And when young Stephen was 7, Dr. Selleck used to let the boy accompany him to services at some of the smaller mission churches in the area.

It wasn't long before young Stephen began to take an active part in Dr. Selleck's services. The clergyman allowed the boy to read the Bible lesson to the assembled congregation.

Bishop Keeler often recalled that he'd grown up knowing stories about Noah and the Ark long before he became acquainted with nursery rhymes.

His early school years were spent at Hoosac school, an Episcopal school at Hoosick, N. Y. At Yale, he scored on the inter-collegiate debate squad.

Sen. Taft was a teammate, but it was Bishop Keeler who won the two top awards for oratory—the Ten Eyck prize his junior year and the DeForest medal his senior year.

Bishop Keeler was the first Yale student in more than 80 years to win both awards. And the victory always seemed sweeter because he did it while competing against his good friend Taft.

After graduation from seminary in 1913, Bishop Keeler was ordained a deacon. In 1914, he was ordained a priest.

IN 1915, he married Eunice Daskam Stevens of Norwalk, Conn., after a courtship of several years.

Their son, Stephen, Jr., was born in 1916. A teacher in Turkey, the younger Keeler has been living in the Bishop's house, 920 Mount Curve avenue, while home on leave.

Bishop Keeler served churches in Massachusetts, Ohio and Illinois. At St. Paul's in Akron, Ohio, he was known as the "rubber rector" because so many rubber firm executives were church members.

He was serving as rector of St. Chrysostom's, Chicago, on April 15, 1931 — the day before his 44th birthday—when he was elected bishop-coadjutor of Minnesota. He was consecrated a bishop June 24.

HE BECAME Minnesota's fourth Episcopal bishop Jan. 1, 1944, upon the retirement of Bishop Frank A. McElwain.

Bishop McElwain was unable to come to Minneapolis for the 25th anniversary celebration last June.

But a special surprise guest who did come in time for the diocesan dinner at Nicollet hotel was Bishop Sherrill.

Friends for 49 years, Bishop Sherrill startled Bishop Keeler by approaching him from behind and bestowing a bear hug.

"My first reaction," Bishop Keeler told the audience, "was that it was one of my layman friends—and he had stopped in somewhere along the way."

THE DIOCESE presented the bishop at that time with an $85,000 trust fund to be used by him after retirement. After his death, the fund was to be used to continue missionary work within the diocese.

Bishop Keeler had hopes of retiring some day and doing some serious writing. He wanted to do a history of the diocese.

A collection of Bishop Keeler's beloved "diaries" also may have become a book.

The bishop also expected to catch up on his reading. The books he recommended in the "diary" usually would be about English history or biography or perhaps an Agatha Christie mystery.

"FOR REAL satisfaction," Bishop Keeler recommended reading the novels of Sir Walter Scott.

Among the many awards bestowed on him through the years were five honorary degrees. The most recent, an honorary doctor of laws (his first) was given last May by Carleton college, Northfield, Minn.

He served the national Episcopal church in many capacities. In addition to diocesan work, Bishop Keeler served as president and board chairman of the Minnesota Council of Churches and had been active since 1931 in the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches.

OF ALL the honors, however, he was most pleased at the number of Indian children that had been named Stephen after him.

Bishop Keeler's pleasant, clipped speech was familiar to people of many faiths in Minnesota. He was a skillful and sought after speaker.

But when asked about his "accent," Bishop Keeler would reply:

"If I have an accent, I don't know why.

"Some English friends once asked me what part of England was my home," he recalled.

"I told them I came from NEW."

Survivors include Mrs. Keeler, his son, and a brother, Warner V., Northfield Falls, Vermont.

Funeral services have not yet been arranged.

Editor's note

This page and the next contain a "to do" list made by DEW for his work on Whitings, Keelers, and Sellecks. It's unclear how much of it he was able to get to.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA) COUNTY OF ALLEGHENY) SS:

Personally before me, the undersigned authority, appeared MARY R. SELLECK, who being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that she resides at 737 Third Street, Borough of Oakmont, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, and is the widow of Charles J. Selleck, alias Jefferson P. Selleck, Pension Certificate No. 32458, he having enlisted as a Landsman in the United States Navy, having been honorably discharged August 17th, 1865, under the name of Jeff P. Selleck, as shown by Discharge No. 10628. That the said deponent's name, prior to her marriage with the said Charles J. Selleck, was Mary Rebecca Sheade, also known as Mary Rebecca Shade. That the said Charles J. Selleck and Mary Rebecca Sheade, also known as Mary Rebecca Shade, were married on the 3rd day of May, 1868, in what was then the Borough of Lawrenceville, now the City of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, by Richard Lea, Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a true and correct and photostatic copy of the marriage certificate being hereto attached and made part hereof.

That immediately after said marriage, this deponent and the said Charles J. Selleck procured a home and cohabited and lived together at Coleman Station, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, where they lived together for six years and upwards, when they left and went to Oil City, Venango County, Pennsylvania, where they lived for four years or thereabouts, from whence they moved to Tarentum, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, and lived together for four or five years, and from thence they moved to Harmarville, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, where they lived together and cohabited for a period of four or five years, from whence they moved to what is now the Borough of Oakmont, then the Second Ward of the Borough of Verona, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, in which Borough they lived and cohabited together until the time of the death of the said Charles J. Selleck, on the 19th day of October, 1925. That this deponent and the said Charles J. Selleck lived together continuously from the time of their marriage, viz, May 3, 1868 to the time of the death of said Charles J. Selleck, October 19th, 1925, and are the parents of eight children, all of whom are living. That this deponent and the said Charles J. Selleck lived together and cohabited in what is now the Borough of Oakmont, formerly part of the Borough of Verona, for forty years and upwards, and were husband and wife and never divorced.

Deponent further says, in answer to an inquiry from the Department of the Interior, relative to this application for pension, that the said Charles J. Selleck never was married to any one prior to the time of his marriage with this deponent; that he never was married to Mary Freeman about the year 1866, or at any other time. That the said Charles J. Selleck told this deponent that he had been in trouble with the said Mary Freeman prior to their marriage, but that he had paid her bounty money, $300.00, received by reason of service in the Civil War, the said Charles J. Selleck having been home on sick leave and had settled up the whole affair, as he stated to this deponent and returned to the War. Deponent further says that the said Mary Freeman lived in the City of Erie, County of Erie and State of Pennsylvania. That after diligent inquiry deponent has been unable to learn of any record of marriage to the said Charles J. Selleck, and is informed and verily believes that they never were married. That she has learned she has been married to the said Charles J. Selleck did the said Mary Freeman at any time make, to her knowledge, any claim against the said Charles J. Selleck for support for herself or child or otherwise, and that the question of former marriage was never raised or brought to her attention until raised by the Government after the said Charles J. Selleck had become old and practically out of his mind by reason of old age and made irresponsible statements.

This deponent, Mary R. Selleck is now of the age of seventy-seven (77) years having been born on the 30th day of January, 1850.

This affidavit being made to induce the Department of the Interior of the United States to issue a Pension to the said widow of said decedent, the present deponent.

Nov. 9, 1907.

Sir:

In your above-cited claim for pension under the act of Feb. 6, 1907, you alleged in application filed Feb. 16, 1907, that you were born Jany. 1, 1838, while at enlistment Aug. 25, 1862, you gave your age as twenty-two, which would indicate that you were born Jany. 1, 1840, and at enlistment Sept. 6, 1864, you gave your age as twenty-three which would indicate that you were born Jany. 1, 1841.

In view of these discrepancies in your statements as to your age, there should be furnished a verified copy of the public records of your birth, or of the church record of your baptism. If you are unable to furnish such record evidence you should state the fact and reasons under oath, and comply with the requirements of the attached circular letter.

Very respectfully,

Commissioner.

ACT OF MAY 1, 1920

Under the provisions of the Act of May 1, 1920, the widow of any person who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps during the Civil War for ninety days or more, and was honorably discharged, or regardless of the length of service was discharged for or died in service of a disability incurred in the service in line of duty, may be entitled to pension, without regard to her financial condition, provided she was married to him prior to June 27, 1905. The rate of pension is $30 per month, and $6 additional for each of his children under the age of 16 years. Pension commences from the date of filing a valid declaration in the bureau.

"That no claim agent or attorney or other person shall be recognized in the adjustment of claims under this Act, except in claims for original pension, and in such cases no more than the sum of $10 shall be allowed for services in preparing, presenting, or prosecuting any such claim, which sum shall be payable only on the order of the Commissioner of Pensions; and any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section, or shall wrongfully withhold from the pensioner or claimant the whole or any part of a pension allowed or due to such pensioner or claimant under this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall, for each and every offense, be fined not exceeding $500 or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court."

INSTRUCTIONS—READ CAREFULLY

Declaration and testimony must be executed before some officer authorized to administer oaths for general purposes. If such officer is not required by law to have and use a seal, his official character, signature, and term of office must be certified by the proper State, county, or city officer under his official seal, unless such certificate has been filed in the Bureau of Pensions for general reference.

Under the law, a person may not receive pension from the Bureau of Pensions and compensation or vocational training pay through the United States Veterans' Bureau, covering the same period of time, except that the receipt of compensation by a widow or parent on account of the death of any person will not bar the payment of pension on account of the death of any other person.

That part of the declaration referring to service between April 6, 1917, and July 2, 1921, should show whether the claimant or any member of her family rendered any service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States during said period, and if so, the full name under which each served should be stated, together with the designation of the organization in (or the vessel on) which such service was rendered with dates of enlistment and discharge.

The term "family" includes: Child, legally adopted child, stepchild, father, mother, stepfather, stepmother, father and mother through adoption, and person who has stood in place of parent for a period of not less than one year prior to induction into service.

In reply to letter of the 18 ultimo, I have to advise you that your above entitled claim for pension is awaiting the evidence indicated in the attached circular letter.

The evidence was called for in letter of Nov. 13, 1925.

Referring to paragraph 7 of the circular I would add that the ~~soldier~~ sailor stated that he was previously married to Mary Freeman in 1864 and was divorced from her in 1866. If you are unable to furnish evidence indicated in paragraph 7 or to comply with any other of the requirements indicated you should state the facts and reasons under oath.

M a d a m :

Referring to your affidavit filed on the eighth instant by Hon. Clyde Kelly, I have to advise you that when the sailor was fifty-four years old, he stated in a paper filed February 23, 1893, that he married Mary Freeman in 1864 and was divorced from her in 1866. As they lived in Erie, Pennsylvania, during that period, you should correspond with the clerk of the court in that city and obtain a certified copy of the alleged divorce decree or the statement of the clerk that no record of such divorce proceedings can be found, and file the same with your claim.

The claim also awaits a verified copy of the public record of the sailor's death, or of the cemetery record of his burial, and the sworn statement of two witnesses who knew you and the sailor from 1897, showing whether you were ever divorced, and whether you and he lived together as husband and wife from that time to the date of his death.

Persons testifying should state their ages, postoffice addresses, and means of knowledge of the facts to which they testify.

Do not fail to inscribe on each paper furnished, the name and service of the sailor, and the number of the claim to which it relates.

Respectfully,

Dear sir

Your circular of December 21st 1912 recieved & contents noted stating that my entitled claim under Act of May 11 1912 that part based upon disability is rejected
In filing my application under this Act I based it upon time of service - not on Disability - although I am badly disabled and realy unfit for any manuel labor

My first service was 1862 on the Gunboat Lomestiga at Cairo Illinois this was about sept 6th 1862 - I was discharged at Cairo Illinois from disability - Chronic diarhea this discharge I have lost and therefore I cannot give dates - My second enlistment Sept 6th 1864 at Erie pa 1 year was put on the Gunboat Silver Lake at Evansville Indiana and discharged Aug 17 1865 from the Mississippi Squadron - My first enlistment 1862 I was at Vicksburg Mississippi under flag of flag of truce exchanging of prisoners
So for I basing my applications on Service rendered My discharge being lost or destroyed first Enlistment

I first enlisted August 20th 1862 on Gun Boat Conestoga and was discharged for chronic Diarrhea at Cairo Ills in Dec 1862 & January 1863. I again enlisted Sept 6th 1864 for one year and served on Silver Lake until Aug 17th 1865, when I was discharged from U.S.S. Mat Western. The above is the only claim for pension I ever filed.

I contracted the reumalgia in the year 1868 it is not due to my vicious habits and is to the best of my knowledge and belief of a permanent character.

MRS. J. R. SELLECK

Mattoon, Illinois 61938

Dear Elizabeth and David:

Thank you for the excellent pictures and also your lovely letter. We are more than happy to welcome Tom as a member of the family. He is such a fine young man and we have hoped since becoming acquainted that he would be "the one". All of our relatives are pleased as well. They met Tom when he and Virginia attended our reunion in Pennsylvania.

We expect them down when our friends from New Jersey visit later this month. Our sons and families will be here also, and we always have lots of fun when they converge.

Your invitation is much appreciated and we want you to know you are welcome in our home, and hope you will favor us with a visit to Mattoon. Do you still travel so much? Perhaps you could stop over here sometime.

No frost here yet so Jack still has a few vegetables in his garden.

Cordially,

Jean and Jack

P.S. Those snapshots are the best pictures we have of Virginia and Tom. Thanks again.

April 17, 1982 Dear Elizabeth:

We had a very enjoyable and busy time with all our family here over the Easter weekend. The twins were one year old in January and, as you can imagine, are walking (and even running) now, each in a different direction when not confined to their playpen.

Virginia and Tom brought us up to date on their plans and it looks as though they have all arrangements well in hand.

Thus far, I have not found a dress to wear at their wedding. Have in mind something pastel and am not particular about the color. They are showing lots of white but, of course, I don't want to wear white or black. If all else fails, I will buy fabric and make one.

If you are able to find something you like, or to have one made, please go ahead and don't wait for me to decide. I'm sure we won't both select the same thing and, even if we did, it wouldn't bother me.

As I told Virginia, if you are willing to entrust the quilt to me I will attempt to repair it, and do not think it would be any trouble to transfer it from your car to our trunk at the Hyatt House, which is where I presume we are all to be housed. This could be arranged when we first arrive on June 5 around noon. We plan to start out early that morning.

However, we do hope you will stop in Mattoon and visit us. Perhaps on your return from the East (depending upon how long you are gone, and whether I am able to do the repair) you could pick up the quilt then.

Your "family album" will sounds like a wonderful idea and you are fortunate to have pictures of so many generations. I'd love to see it some day.

I think Virginia feels honored to be part of the arrangement. You did send us a print of that picture and it is excellent.

We look forward to seeing you and David in Chicago. We may go up prior to the wedding but am not certain.

Cordially,

Jean

Dear Elizabeth:

Our holiday weekend with Rob and family and Virginia and Tom was most enjoyable, and this weekend we expect Terry and John to be with us. Her sister and a girlfriend have scheduled a baby shower for Sunday, so we will have another good weekend.

Our plans for the trip northwest have been abandoned for the present. My brother Jim has not been well and has returned to the hospital, and we are quite worried about him. Marge and Bill agreed that we should postpone our trip, so we intend to go to Allison Park sometime next week for a visit there.

Because the work on the quilt was as complete as I thought advisable (to retain the antique quality), Virginia and Tom took it when they left here, and you can get it when in Chicago.

We still hope to see you in Mattoon. Virginia will always know

Dear Elizabeth & David:

I trust this finds you both well and ready for a joyous holiday. We are busily preparing for our family's arrival the weekend before Christmas, and are looking forward to a lovely time together.

Today it is 65° here with bright sunshine — almost afraid to enjoy it because it may precede severe weather which would spoil our plans.

Love,
J

Jack & Jean

Dear Elizabeth & David:

Was pleased to receive the picture taken on Christmas Eve of your family. Your table looks so pretty and it is a good likeness of all.

Virginia tells me you will be in Chicago at Easter and they look forward to seeing you. By that time the weather will surely be settled.

John is changing jobs and will move to a town near Goleta, so we may be called into service there.

Thank you for your prayers.

Monday AM

Dear Elizabeth:

While speaking with Virginia yesterday, we learned you were having a special birthday. Just wanted to send our best wishes to you both, and hope you will have many more happy birthdays to come.

Beginning to look like fall is on the way although our weather continues to be mild and Jack is still getting a few tomatoes.

Love, Jean

Dear Elizabeth and David:

The family and I appreciate your kindness and generosity. The flowers are red roses and white carnations and here with us.

The picture of Rebecca and Rob is precious. She is such a joy to us all and we are happy she and Virginia can stay until Wed. After that reality will set in.

Love, Jean

Your kind expression of sympathy is deeply appreciated and gratefully acknowledged by the family of Jack Sellock

Editor's Note

The next two documents were created by my daughter, Rebecca Elizabeth Witheridge (b. 1988), when she was in 10th grade at Eastview High School in Apple Valley, MN, a south suburb of Minneapolis. I'm including them for three reasons:

1. I'm her proud papa, and I see no reason to miss any opportunity to show her off.
2. She is, and always will be, David and Elizabeth Witheridge's only granddaughter, whom they passionately adored.
3. She used her school assignment on "oral history" to add something that would otherwise be almost totally lacking in this collection of dry factoids about the Ash and Meyers families: Color. (The preceding item about Will's harp is another welcome bit.)

Rebecca interviewed the two female elders of the Ash/Meyers clan, her maternal grandmother, Jean Selleck (Eleanor [Jean] Virginia Meyers [b. 1915]), and her great aunt, Marge Brod (Mary Margaret Meyers [b. 1919]), tape recording and transcribing their memories of the most significant worldwide calamity of their childhood: The Great Depression. (The 1918 influenza pandemic is probably a distant second or third for that "honor," and besides, the sisters had no firsthand memories of it. Jean was too young to notice it, and Marge was even younger, having been born between the third and fourth waves. The same can be said for World War I.) So Rebecca was right in her choice of topic.

Then she turned the transcript into a paper on the Depression, interleaving segments of her oral history interview with brief descriptions of the major public effects and events. Her technique foreshadowed her honors thesis in cultural anthropology at Oberlin College six years later (on a completely different topic, the attitudes of her fellow students on gender and sexuality).

Enjoy!

Oral History Transcript
Interview with my Grandma and Great Aunt
Topic: The Great Depression

Q: Approximately what ages were you when the stock market crashed?

Grandma Jean Selleck (Gma): I would say 14 or 13 for me.
Great Aunt Marge Brod (GAm): So I was about 9.

Q: Did you notice a change when it actually happened? Was it more gradual or sudden?

Gma: People were shocked about it, and of course we had a father working and 2 brothers working, and 2 out of the 3 were laid off. Business went down so we only had one wage earner after that.

Q: Did you, as children, notice it? Did your parents sit you down to talk about it, or was it more of a... 'Hear it through the grapevine' thing?

Gma: We talked about it at home... and when people are laid off and you don't have much income it makes a difference in your living.

Q: Were your clothes made at home? Was the material recycled?

Gma: Yes, Mother made them, but she didn't do that-GAm: She could alter things to make things into something else. She could use things that were, well, like a nice piece of fabric; she could alter so it would fit someone smaller.

Q: What about food? Did the Depression change your eating habits?

Gma: No, I don't think we changed our eating habits. Mother baked bread, and we had our own chickens and eggs and that helped, I'm sure. We didn't have to buy every bite of meat we were going to have.
GAm: We had an Aunt who had a cow, and we could get a bottle of milk for a nickel, and that sort of thing. Dad always had a garden and mother made preserves. But I'm sure it wasn't easy.
Gma: We didn't starve.
GAm: No, we didn't. Oatmeal was our basic cereal. All the cereals on the market today were not available.
Gma: Shredded Wheat and Corn Flakes were about the only things you ever heard of in those days.

GAm: We had our own garden and apple trees. Daddy would gather all the apples and put them in barrels in the cold cellar. We'd use 'em for apple pies and applesauce and we could go down there and get a bowl of apples any time-
Gma: Yeah, we were in good shape really, for that sort of thing. Because we had so many things right there. And mother was very good at managing the money. She made sure we never spent money foolishly.

Q: What did you do for Entertainment?

Gma: (laughing) We made our own entertainment!
GAm: Well there was a radio in the house and we'd listen programs like (?) Fibber McGee and Molly, Gma: ...And Amos and Andy,
GAm: Yes...
Gma: We had a record player and we had records that we played. We made our own games really. Betty and Gertrude were in the neighborhood and we played games. I was the oldest one and sometimes Aunt Eleanor would be busy doing something and she'd ask me to come up and I'd play with the girls while she churned butter. Her husband had tuberculosis and she had to make sure everything was scrubbed clean so that no one else in the family would catch it.
GAm: We used to play cards. We played little games like Highest Card Wins and eventually worked our ways up to 500.
Gma: We had this wonderful Grimm's Fairytale book and we'd read it to one another. We used to go to the theater. We'd go in to Pittsburgh and watch the full stage show and watch the cartoons and someone playing the organ and everybody would sing along to the bouncing ball on the screen... and then you had the theater presentation from Hollywood. This cost a quarter... the whole deal. It was... the whole ball of wax, I can tell you it was a wonderful stage show to be seen! But you had to go in before noon to get in for a quarter.

Q: What kind of town did you live on? Did you live on a farm or...?

GAm: Rural, rural. It was not actually a farm. There were about 7 acres involved. The garden took up about... about ½ an acre.
Gma: Just a kitchen garden. Enough for us but not sold to other people. Just for the family.
GAm: Daddy had a Scythe, you know, with a wooden handle and curved blade. He used to cut the fields with that and the hay was used in the chicken houses. He also, in the fall, he would butcher a pig. He'd buy it, and make sausage and smoke it and hang it from the rafters in the cold cellar and such.

Q: What kind of house did you live in?

Gma and GAm: The one we live in now.
Gma: 3 bedrooms.
GAm: 6 rooms.

Q: You were in school when this happened? Where was it? Did you have to buy school supplies or did they supply it?

GAm: Yeah we were.
Gma: It was at where the church is. You've been there. We walked there every day. It was like a mile and a half everyday. And you carried the lunch; there was no cafeteria. You maybe had to buy a notebook or pencil maybe, but most of it was ah...
GAm: I don't even think the pencils were 10 cents then. Things were much cheaper than they are today, because I know for a while a month's tuition was a quarter-
Gma: 50 cents. You'd bring your report card home, and then you'd bring it back with 50 cents. Now, we could do that, but I know some people might not have been able to afford it. It was a parochial school and connected with the church.

Q: How would you compare the money today with the money then?

Gma: You could buy a WHOLE lot more with a dollar. A loaf of bread was 10 cents. And I remember mother would give me 50 cents to go down to the butcher to buy steak and there were 6 people in the family. And that's a fact.

Q: Did you have any pets other than the chickens?

Gma: Yeah, we had dogs. Fox Terriers! We'd give away their puppies. We fed them table scraps. And I never knew ANYBODY to buy dog food. Everybody gave their dogs their table scraps, and they ate bones! Now these people don't give them a bone! The dogs don't get bones anymore! I think that's wrong! (laughing) They're fake bones aren't they-GAm: Well, they get the bones caught in their throats now. I don't know, the dogs swallow different now then they used to, I guess...(Laughter) They're not attuned to it...

Q: How many siblings did you have...?

Gma: 2 brothers. John was born in 1908. And Jim was born in 1911.

Q: What kind of jobs did they have?

Gma: John had lost his job, like my father. Jim had been driving some sort of delivery truck for the dairy and he was kept on. My father also worked at the dairy. But he had no education beyond, like, the 8th grade.

Q: Did you have any specific chores?

Gma: We never had any specific chores really. We'd do dishes.
GAm: We'd dust the floors. In the fall we'd make apple butter by peeling apples and then heating them and putting them into a huge kettle and keep adding apples and cider and stirring all day. We'd take our turns stirring when we got home from school.

Gma: Well, I really don't know...
GAm: Well the only time when I can really remember anyone being sick was when John had the rheumatic fever. And mom took care of him. I'm sure a doctor had to come to diagnose it.

Q: Were there things during the Depression years that you guys couldn't afford that you could before hand?

Gma: (laughing) We couldn't afford very much! I went into school to learn typing and such right after 8th grade and when I got out it was 1930 and I went to get a job. I tried to get a job, but it was very difficult. Mother took me by the hand and took me to Etna high school and I got the 4-year course and got my diploma in 1933. When I graduated, of course, I wanted to get a class ring, and... I guess I talked about it because mom gave me the money and I thought afterwards that 'I don't need that'. I had had another class ring I'd gotten when I graduated in the 1930's! So I brought the money back home... because it was needed for other things and I was old enough to know that.

Q: Did you have to learn more habits when it came to saving things during the Depression years? Did you have to become thriftier?

Gma: Oh yes. We were ALWAYS taught to be thrifty. Even with water. We had a bad well, and whenever we didn't have enough rain we had to be very careful with the water. And so when it came to washing dishes, if we had had a pot of corn on the cob, we'd use that to wash the dishes- and then we'd rinse them of course. But our father then, that was one thing that happened during the Depression, when he was out of work; he decided we needed a cistern. We had to have this water that came on the roof go into a cistern. It was all brick and then the water would filter through and go into the toilets and washing machines. The well water was what we drank.
GAm: And we shared bathwater too.

Gma: Yes but that was when we were younger...but not later, no.
GAm: No, but I can remember doing that.
Gma: That's true. In Etna we shared bathwater.
GAm: Well I don't remember much about Etna.
Gma: Well that's where we shared bath water!
GAm: Well I think we shared bath water on Elfinwild road too, before the cistern. It seemed to me that you and I used the same bath water...
Gma: Iiii don't remember that, I would have never-! (laughter) I don't remember that at all! (More Laughter)

Q: is there anything else that stood out to you during the Depression? Andy huge changes in life in general?

Gma: Well, at one point a big thing was that we stopped buying butter. Rather than normal butter we started getting margarine, and it was white. And you had to dye it yellow... nobody wanted it white, it looked like lard or something! And our Uncle Richard, a carpenter, was out of work, and he and his wife had to go on Welfare. They couldn't get any jobs and had no money! And they were furnished with butter! We thought that strange, we had money to buy stuff but we couldn't afford butter! And they had butter! But that was for a short period, I don't think he was ever off very long. In the winter, you know, I don't think people built much in the cold. In the spring maybe he got a job, I don't know.
GAm: Well, when you think about what houses were built for too in those days. Take the house we live in now. It was under $6,000 dollars to have that built.
Gma: And that was another change, when there was not enough money coming in and they had built this house and of course they had a mortgage and had borrowed from the bank. Well, I guess it was Roosevelt who put through the FHA, Federal Housing Administration. It was created in order for people to be able to be helped by the government, and instead of the bank coming and telling you to get out, you could fall back on the government until you got it paid off. And that's what happened, it was a very big break because I think our parents were very afraid they were going to lose the house and they didn't know what they would do. I think that's one of the reasons they liked FDR.

Q: Do you think that living in the country as you did with the animals and garden and such made a difference on how you coped with the Depression?

Gma: I think so.

Q: Did you know anyone in the city or read papers about people on whom it had a greater impact?

Gma: I can't say that I know anybody like that, but I can just imagine that if you didn't have the apples or even the pears and plums we'd sometimes get and stuff, you know, we had a great advantage over the people who didn't have the money to go buy those things. Mother was a master at stretching things and creating them. She always baked bread; we never bought bread.
GAm: And she had sewn for people. Mother had been like a seamstress.
Gma: She was good at it... and we learned to sew! Before we went to high school! We learned to make stuff!

Q: Did you notice when it got better?

Gma: Well I can't say that I actually remember when Dad went back to work and when john went back to work.
GAm: (looking at Gma proudly) Well when you went to work for a while, you made 5 dollars a week, going into Pittsburgh everyday, figuring out your own transportation too! And you worked 6 days a week for 5 dollars
Gma: 6 dollars (laughing)
GAm: ok then, 6 dollars.
Gma: Well that was later, that wasn't the Depression years.
GAm: Well that Depression didn't just solve itself real quick, I know when Bill and I got married in 1940, for 2 weeks pay he got 65 dollars.
Gma: Well I know it lasted...
GAm: Things were not easy then! It just seemed as if there was never enough money to go around!
Q: When you guys were in school did you hear about the problems of other families?

GAm: You would notice some people... their shoes... their clothing... it was pretty bad. And you would feel bad... you'd know that they were pretty poor.
Gma: I don't think our story was very bad compared to other peoples. I mean, if we hadn't lived where we had and had access to all of the home grown food we had, things would have been a lot worse!

Q: Do you remember any other specific government programs that were instated besides the government-housing program?

GAm: Well the CCC boys (civil conservation corp.). They'd build forts and roads and state parks, etc.
Gma: A lot of them were people who couldn't get a job, who were out of high school and they'd join and they got a trade out of it.

Oral History Paper: The Great Depression

"We had dogs. [...] We fed them table scraps and I never knew anybody to buy dog food. Everybody gave their dogs their table scraps, and they ate bones! Now these people don't give them a bone! The dogs don't get bones anymore! I think that's wrong! (laughing) They're fake bones, aren't they-"

~Jean Selleck

"Well, they get the bones caught in their throats now. I don't know, the dogs swallow different now than they used to, I guess...(laughter) they're not attuned to it..."

~Marge Brod

Jean Selleck and Marge Brod laughed fondly about memories of a time period that most people would consider to be one of the hardest in American history. Most Americans have grown up hearing about it as early as elementary school. Because it is the only event of its kind that is usually given a lot of attention, it can be a shock for students to discover that there ever was more than one. The Great Depression seems to have been the working definition of 'hardship' for America because of the obvious meaning of an economic depression -- unemployment, low wages, and homelessness. While the Great Depression has been considered such by historians because of the figures and statistical evidence of the time, its true impact on the country can only be understood by looking at its economic and domestic effects on the citizen's everyday life.

On October 24, 1929, the stock market began what would be its most devastating downward spiral. By 'Black Tuesday', October 29th, more than 29 million shares of stock had been sold. Before long, it became exceedingly clear that the recession occurring was not normal and that it could not be easily remedied. Within the four years between 1929 and 1932, 44% of the country's banks had failed, and approximately two billion dollars in deposits had vanished (Thorkelson 345). Unemployment rose at an alarming rate, from 1.5 million to a staggering 16 million -- roughly 1/3 of the labor force ("Great Depression" 1132). Between 1929 and 1932, the total value of the stocks on the New York Stock Exchange plummeted from $89.7 billion to $15.6 billion (Burg 65), and the "prices for agricultural products dropped to their lowest level since the Civil War" ("Great Depression" Britannica 1). The stock market's dropping value showed how unconfident the public was in the business world, and it illustrated the reason for many of the bankruptcies that occurred during the Depression.

With America facing statistics such as those, experts of the time faced the challenge of unveiling the cause of the Great Depression. At the time it was believed that the stock market crash itself had caused the chain of events, while nowadays historians believe it was a multitude of other factors; the stock market's crashing simply exposed the weaknesses in America's economy (Thorkelson 344). Once the complicated whole is broken down, the true causes of the disaster can be picked out and examined more closely. According to the Britannica Intermediate Encyclopedia's article entitled "Great Depression", the main causes of the Depression included such things as "an extremely unequal distribution of incomes", the prosperity of Wall Street consisting of paper money that wasn't actually backed up by specie, banks acting foolishly in making loans before the Great Depression happened, and a lack of ability to predict the outcomes of actions that had been taken in the past. Such factors combined to produce a snowball type effect. In an article by Axel Leijonhufvud entitled "Reflections on the Great Depression", the analogy of a man slipping on a banana peel was used: a physicist would explain that the speed with which he was walking versus his weight was the cause, a doctor would bring up the osteoporosis in his bones, and a psychologist would argue that a disagreement he'd had earlier in the day had caused him to not pay attention. In the absence of each of those things, the accident would never have happened -- they all contributed. Such was the case with the Great Depression.

Economically, the Great Depression ravaged the country and its financial resources. With hundreds of banks failing and deposits vanishing, the market economy began to lose value rapidly. As shares of stock were practically given away, bankruptcy loomed in the mind's eye of many a business owner. The rising unemployment rates were also crucial because once families had fewer wage earners less money could be spent. Businesses were unable to thrive because so many people were out of jobs and unable to buy as many products as they had previously been able to buy. The United States was forced to give up on the previous gold standard by increasing the value of gold per ounce from $20.67 to $35, thus devaluing the dollar by 70% (Thorkelson 345). This was meant to encourage spending, but the price rebound hoped for did not occur. For those who did have money it was enormously helpful, considering that prices were so low: One could buy a new men's suit for $10, a shirt for 75 cents, or a loaf of bread for a nickel. While today those kinds of prices seem more like a scam than a deal, during the Depression those nickels and dimes were hard to come by.

"Mother would give me 50 cents to go down to the butcher and buy steak, and there were six people in the family. And that's a fact," Selleck stated with a stone face, "You could buy a whole lot more with a dollar". With a single person supporting their family, sisters Selleck and Brod had little money to spend on trivial things. Although the worth of a dollar was more, in retrospect they were paying the same 'amount' of money as Americans do today. Their entertainment consisted of running around outdoors, playing cards, reading, and listening to the radio. Occasionally they would be able to afford a trip to the theater to see the newest Hollywood picture. "[It] cost a quarter," Jean said, "…the whole deal, […] it was a wonderful stage show to be seen!" The hard times taught the girls to be thrifty, and when Selleck graduated from high school she gave up the chance of getting a class ring:

> I guess I talked about it because my mom gave me the money and I thought afterwards that 'I don't need that.' So I brought the money back home… because it was needed for other things, and I was old enough to know that.

Brod and Selleck's family was nowhere near as bad off as many others had been. They had lived in a rural area where fruit grew wild and their garden supported them. With their mother baking them bread and their aunt selling them milk for a quarter, Brod and Selleck's family was well fed, compared to families living in crowded cities:

> You would notice some people… their shoes… their clothing… it was pretty bad. And you would feel bad… you'd know they were pretty poor (Brod).

> I don't think our story was very bad compared to other people. [...] If we hadn't lived where we had and had access to all of the home grown food we had, things would have been a lot worse (Selleck)!

The Great Depression did not only affect the monetary aspects of America, but the domestic and social aspects as well. While the low wages and unemployment rates did impact the social aspects, money itself was not necessarily the only issue. Hoovervilles, named after President Herbert Hoover who was in office at the time of the stock market crash, appeared all over the county. They were shantytowns where the poor and homeless could go to find shelter. The homeless also slept under aptly and unfortunately named "Hoover Blankets" – old newspapers ("Great Depression" Britannica 1). People would stand on street corners and sell anything they had, even apples or pencils (Brown 1). Desperation caused families to beg for food. A large percentage of the population immediately withdrew all of their money and tried to keep it safe themselves, hiding it in walls and under their mattresses. As clichéd as it may sound, the Great Depression really did demonstrate the phrase 'desperate times call for desperate measures.'

"We were always taught to be thrifty. Even with water," Jean Selleck said matter-of-factly, "We had a bad well." Selleck and Brod's family learned to be awfully careful with their resources. Because of their bad well, their father eventually decided that they needed to have a cistern. Their cistern was a system of getting rainwater gathered outside of their house into their house and to the places it was needed, such as toilets and sinks. They also used every drop of water as efficiently as possible; "When it came to washing dishes," Selleck said, "if we had a pot of corn on the cob, we'd use that to wash the dishes – and then we'd rinse them of course". Their mother also made their clothes from patterns and taught them how to do it as well. They were lucky enough to have a garden and other sources of food, so that was never an especially large concern. The domestic problems caused by the Great Depression didn't really affect Selleck and Brod's lives as it did the majority of the population.

Prior to the Great Depression, the Federal Reserve System had been established in 1914, and was used in an "effort to eliminate periodic financial panics" (Thorkelson 345). It was meant to be a source of cash from which banks experiencing difficulties could borrow, but during the Great Depression the need was not for money, but for an increase of consumer confidence in the market economy (Thorkelson 345). "Banking Holidays" were also used in effort to reduce the risk of panic induced by banks' inability to pay off all of the public's deposits (Thorkelson 345). When Roosevelt became President, he created the "New Deal", a collection of legislation, acts, and committees, all for the purpose of getting America back on track. It encompassed 2 phases: "the first attempted to provide service and recovery through programs of agricultural and business regulation, inflation, price stabilization, and public works", and "the second phase... while continuing with relief and recovery measures, provided for social and economic legislation to benefit the mass of working people" ("New Deal"1919). A few of the programs that were involved with "The New Deal" included the Social Security System, the National Youth Administration and Work Projects Association, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Communications Commission, and various acts including the Trade Agreements Act, and the National Housing Act. Selleck and Brod's family was extremely grateful to Roosevelt and his plan because they happened to have had worries about losing the house at one time. Selleck described the situation:

> The FHA, Federal Housing Administration was created in order for people to be helped by the government, and instead of the bank coming and telling you to get out, you could fall back on the government until you got it paid off. And that's what happened, it was a very big break because I think our parents were very afraid they were going to lose the house and they didn't know what they would do. I think that's one of the reasons they liked FDR."

The "New Deal" was incredibly helpful in easing the pain of the Great Depression, but it never really ended until World War II began and created more job opportunities (Thorkelson 346).

The Great Depression finally ended, to the gratitude and relief of all American citizens. Today we have the luxury of examining files of facts and statistics on the amount of money lost, and the rate of unemployment, but in reality, the only way it can truly be examined is by looking at it through the eyes of the everyday person. While some people were lucky enough to escape the major blows it dealt, the Great Depression was probably the worst hammer that had ever fallen on America's economy. It makes sense that elementary school teachers would only concentrate on the Great Depression, considering its severity and importance. By examining the effects the Great Depression had on the common citizen, one can evaluate the true impact that it had on America.

Dear David and Elizabeth,

Lest I forget, David, the mention of Elizabeth's Gilbert ancestors yesterday rang a bell!

May 1981 I received a lett from Nick Hornyak 3123 Northwest 40th Street, Des Moines, Iowa. 50310. His ancestry from his ~~Aa~~ Mary Anne Curry's death certificate:

Jane' Sill m. Andrew Curry
dau. Mary Anne[2] b. 1827 Pa. d. 29 Feb. 1888 Brown Co. Ind.
m. Johnson Gilbert
ch. William Andrew Gilbert (1850-)
~~Ma~~
Margaret Gilbert m. John S. Barnes (1859-)

Nancy J. Gilbert (1859-1879)

After collecting and photocopying much Sill data for you I really don't have time to write a letter.

I would appreciate receiving your lineage on your Sill family, Elizabeth. I might be able to identify a surname. Or any other pertinent data might be useful.

Sincerely,
Mary Ellen (Sill) Lucas

Dear Mary Ellen,

Thank you for your note of June 27 with all the enclosures on your Gill ancestors and also for the information about the Gilbert of Brown County, Indiana.

We are in the midst of preparations for a long trip West, so I won't be able to go through all this material and incorporate it into my records until after we return home.

We did hear from David Riker of Mechanicsburg, Pa., as I think I told you on the phone. I have now written to him and have sent him the first twelve pages of Jesse Penney Martin's family history.

Briefly, in answer to your request, Elizabeth's descent from William Gill is as follows:

William Gill (b. 1841) m. Patty Brady
Jane Gill (b. 1788) m. James Penney (b. 1784)
William Penney (b. 1811) m. Elizabeth Gilbert (b. 1817)
Josephine Penney (b. 1855) m. Frank Plumb (b. 1852)
Helen Irene Plumb (b. 1877) m. Alonzo Edward Kendall (b. 1870)
Elizabeth Helen Kendall (b. 1907) m. David Edward Witheridge (b. 1914)

This is all I have time for now, but we hope to be in touch with you again later this summer.

Yours sincerely,

David & Elizabeth Witheridge

From N.J. State Library at Trenton: John Sills, Gloucester Co. N.J. Militia 1776 and 1777, first a private, later a lieutenant. Was this John the father of the 1770 John Sill? Most probably because of the SAR marker on the 1770 John Sill's grave site.

Note the given name, Israel Taylor: The 1637 Cambridge Sills intermarried with the Lords, who intermarried with the Taylors. "Lord and Taylor, fine woolens – Phila. + N.Y.C." Many Lord families are found to be neighbors of the Gloucester Co. Sills.

The 1637 Cambridge, Mass. John Sill had a descendant, Edward Oswell Sill, grandson of sea captain, Richard Sill, who sailed from Boston to Barbadoes and other foreign ports.

Another descendant of this 1637 John Sill, Moses Sill, lived in Bucks Co. Pa for some years [early 1800's] before returning to N.J. state.

N.J. Archives – First Series – Vol. 30 1748, May 16 William Sill of Gloucester Co. guardian of William Sweetin (under 21) of said County, deceased – Gloucester Wills, 403 ff.

Futhey and Cope's 1881 "Hist. of Chester Co. Pa" (p. 18) – John Test – Sheriff of Upland, Chester Co Pa. 1681 (p. 172) John Test, a Darby taxable, 1715. Ashmead's 1884 "Hist. of Del. Co. Pa" (p. 200) William Still, taylor, 1677 Upland Court, indentured by John Test to Cap't Cantwell for 4 years. p. 222 Same information but William Sill, sold by John Test for unexpired 4 years of his indenture.

"New Jersey in 1793", Norton – Together with the 1770 John Sill enrolled in Woolwich Twp. Militia, Gloucester Co. were John Test, + Wright's, Taylor's, Peter, and Samuel Lord, Adam's besides many other Lords, and Tests in other townships there. Ezekiel Test was enrolled in Upper Freehold, Monmouth Co. Militia.

Virkus' Compendium of American Gen. Vol I, p. 550 gives this Phila. Sill ancestry as colonial back to Edward b. 1667 and m. 1690 to Margaret Atkinson [Did Joseph Sill b. 1725 and wife, Mary Barnes, return to Eng. (Cumberland) as loyalists preceding Am. Rev.?]

James Sill II, ~~oldest~~ ? son of James (ca 1700-1774) and Ann (Baker) Sill (1703-1796) married Sarah Sill, dau. of a Richard Sill. [Could this be the Richard Sill (1691-1729) married to Maria Jefferson?]

Thelma Pusey ~~Ott~~ Hay, Elkin's Park, Pa. descendant of James Sill II, has in her possession her grandfather's diary telling of his attendance at the funeral of Joseph Todhunter Sill, 2-20-1868, aged 41 yrs. This Joseph T. Sill was oldest son, born 1826 to Joseph b. England, 1801, who married Jane Todhunter, 1825, in Philadelphia.

[Were the Chester/Delaware Co. Pa. Sills cousins of the Phila. Sills who supposedly didn't arrive in Pa. until 1825?] Were the Phila. Sills early Pa. colonists who, as loyalists, returned to England (Cumberland) in the pre-Revolutionary era? The 1801 Joseph arrived in Phila. about 1824 or 1825 from London, but Sylvester had lived in Cumberland, in the north of England [That is also near to where the Mass/Conn Sills were from. (Newcastle on the Tyne)]

In 1669 vessels ~~carrying~~ from England carrying 92 colonists stopped in Barbados, proceeded to the Bermudas, where authority was given to Wm. Sayles to lead the expedition to the Ashley R. where by 1670 they had established the first permanent Carolina Colony at old Charlestown. Political strife soon developed, owing mainly to the incompetence of the aged executive [William Sayle]. In 1671 he died and Joseph West was chosen governor by the people."

The 1756 will of Richard Scott, naming Aswill Sill, admin., mentioned the surnames Wharton, Simpson, Morris, Earle, and Hudson. [wife Mary] pr. 1762

Could Mary be Mary Rose who married 1730 Michael Sill, progenitor of the Monmouth Co. N.J. Sills? [In those days son-in-law also meant step-son]

I have never found the whereabouts of Michael, most prob. father of the Thomas Sill I of Monmouth Co. N.J. who d. there 1810.

The main reason I am writing is because I did check out your Sill name at the Maryland Historical Society. They have a Norris Harris Church Register card file. It is not the end of of church records, but I did find one Sill listed as follows:

Sill, Joseph m Elizabeth
SON - Joseph b. 19 Mar. 1711
St. Paul's Parish, Kent Co., Md.
Vol. 11, p. 324

This is probably a relative, but there doesn't seem to any direct connection from your chart. I will see what else I can find when I go back to the Hall of Records. I have to look through some of their church records for some of my Pribbles, so will check the Sills too! as well as the wills which you have listed. ie # 116 p. 42 "Carolina Cradle" by Ramsey

Could the above Joseph and Elizabeth be parents of my James Sill, ca 1700-1774 whose son, Joseph, m. Martha Elliot 1744 at Christ Church, Phila? Could not they also be ancestors to the 1774 Joseph Sill who m. Elizabeth Ford in the Eng. Episc. Church, Chester, Pa. [Later called St. Paul's Episc] See below

Jan. 19, 1982

I also got a chance to check those Sill listings you mentioned in the Maryland Calendar of Wills. There were three listed and all three listed were simply testators:

Carter, William Kent Co. Ann Sill, Test.	22 Mar 1736 22 May 1736 Prob.	Vol 7 p. 176
Wetherell, George Kent Co. Joseph Sill, Test.	25 Apr 1743 Prob. 21 Mar 1743	Vol 8 p. 228
Davis, George Kent Co. Joseph Sill, Test.	21 Jan 1729 11 Jul 1729 Prob.	Vol 6 p. 124

At least it shows that there were Sills in Kent Co. in the early 1700's and it agrees with the birth record for Joseph b. 1711, and shows they were there until at least 1743. There are no Sill Wills listed at the Hall of Records however.

to a corner hickory thence east 320 poles to a corner white oak thence north 320 poles to a corner hickory thence west 320 poles to the beginning . . ."[113] It was common practice on the frontier for important creeks to bear the name of the first man to settle upon them. As has already been noted, Thomas Gillespie, "the first settler west of the Yadkin River," resided on a stream known as Sill's Creek. Moreover, a certain Bullock[114] lived nearby before the summer of 1751. Yet, the creek bore the name of neither Gillespie nor Bullock, indicating the presence of a man named Sill at a very early date, probably 1748. Rowan County court records show that John Sill was living there in 1753 and 1755,[115] and it was unquestionably he for whom the creek was named. Much the same logic may reasonably be applied in the case of James Marlin.

The Sill family was in Kent County, Maryland, as early as 1711 and in Chester County, Pennsylvania, by 1723.[116] John Sill appears to have left Edgmont township, Chester County, in 1747 and to have proceeded directly to North Carolina.[117]

Marlin, like Sill, probably moved west from Chester County, where Alexander and John Marlin obtained land warrants in 1736 and 1738.[118] A James Marlin was in St. Marys County, Maryland, in 1707,[119] and the family may have originated there.

written in 1745, mentions his daughter Catherine, the wife of Thomas Bell, and daughter Jennet, the wife of John Holmes.[120] The Bells originated before 1720 in Cecil or Talbot County, Maryland,[121] whence many of them removed to Philadelphia County sometime before 1739.[122] Accompanied by many of his kin, Thomas Bell removed to the Shenandoah Valley in 1741 or 1742,[123] and thence to Carolina.

The family of John Holmes, Bell's brother-in-law, was evidently in Lower Dublin township, Philadelphia County, between 1734 and 1741.[124] Holmes himself moved on to Prince Georges County in 1742[125] and proceeded from there to the Shenandoah Valley.[126] Holmes was a man of considerable prominence, for he served as constable of Augusta County in 1747 and was appointed justice of the peace for Anson County in September of the following year.[127]

Bell settled on Marlin's Creek two miles south of James Cathey.[128] Holmes' land was four miles to the northwest adjoining Thomas Gillespie on Sill's Creek.[129]

Felix and John Kennedy (or Canaday), probably from Kent County, Maryland,[130] entered the Shenandoah Valley prior to 1744.[131] Eleven years later, both were living in the Waxhaw settlement on the border between North and South Carolina,

Dear Mary Ellen,

I'm sorry to be so late in responding to your telephone conversation of several weeks ago. As I told you over the phone, at that time I was deeply involved in going over material about the Pine family of Devonshire in England, from which I am descended. I had to coordinate considerable information from a book about the Pines with information from one of my correspondents in England before I could write to him. Then, of course, Christmas preparations intervened.

In the meantime I have Xeroxed the sheets of Sill and Penney information that David Riker sent us last summer. I know you want to see this, so I am sending it on now, even though I have not had an opportunity to copy some of Jesse Penney Martin's typewritten history of the John Penney Family. Later I will do that and send it to you.

Elizabeth and I hope that you had a very good Christmas season and that you will have a prosperous 1983.

Yours sincerely,

David Willbridge

Dear Mr. Riker,

Last year you wrote to me in answer to an ad I had placed in the Genealogical Helper concerning my Stewart and Sill relatives. Since that time I have been able to trace the Stewart line to my immigrant ancestor but have made little progress concerning Susannah Sill.

However, on a recent trip to Pittsburgh, my husband and I visited the McKeesport Cemetery and found the graves of William and Jane Sill, some of their children and grandchildren. Perhaps you have already visited this particular lot, but in the event that you haven't, I thought that you might be interested in knowing what we found. The lot is in the name of John Sill and has a tall marker at the back of the lot with 7 smaller markers on one side and 6 on the other as shown below.

Col. Jesse 1782-1857
Elizabeth 1782-1860
William 1757-1841
Jane 1757-1838
Nancy A. 1786-1851
John R. 1850
Emaline M 1851

Do you know whether William Sill (1757-1841) had any brothers? It is possible that my Susannah could be related in this way since I did find that she married Samuel Stewart in Butler County, Penna., before moving to Pittsburgh. I can't figure out any other way to relate her unless William and Jane had lots more children than you show. My father ~~xxxx~~ claimed that these Sills were relatives but he wasn't able to tell me anything more than that. Hope the above was of interest to you.

Sincerely,

Rosemary Thomas

McKeesport - Versailles Cem.
Fifth Ave.
McKeesport, Pa. 15132

Dear Sirs:

We visited your cemetery last summer and found a large Hill family lot with about 12 markers. William Hill (1757-1841) is Mrs. Witheridge's great-great-great grandfather.

We should like to have a copy of all the information on each of the Hill record cards in your file, whether in this lot or buried elsewhere in the cemetery.

Enclosed is a $5.00 check to pay for copying this information and also a stamped, self-addressed reply envelope.

Thank you very much for your kindness.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

First Presbyterian Church
5824 Smithfield St.
McKeesport, Pa. 15135

Dear Friends:

A number of my wife's ancestors, notably Hills and Pennings, were members of the First Presbyterian Church of McKeesport in the 18th and 19th centuries. We are hoping that this is the church that continues that early one.

If there is a history of the First Presbyterian Church that is still available, we should like to purchase one. If there is one that is out of print we should like to have the title and author, so we could try to persuade it an institutional library loan.

Enclosed is a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

Dear Sir or Madame!

A distant relative of my wife, Col. Jesse Hill, died in McKeesport on Nov. 30, 1857. Do you have a file of early McKeesport newspapers? If so, we should greatly appreciate receiving a copy of an obituary of Col. Hill.

We should also be grateful for any other biographical material you might have regarding Col. Hill.

Enclosed is a check for $2.00 to cover the cost of copying any information you can find. Also a stamped, self-addressed reply envelope. Thank you for your kind assistance.

Yours sincerely,

McKeesport, Pa. 15132

Dear Mrs. Dulansky:

Thank you very much for your letter of Jan. 17 listing the information on the Hill record cards in your files. This has given us considerable new information. We appreciate your careful work.

Now we should like some further information on the Col Smith Reserve Cemetery from which some of the bodies were re-interred.

1. Were all the graves removed from that cemetery, and if so, at what date?

2. Where should we go to try to find any old records of that cemetery that may be in existence?

Any leads on information about that cemetery would be greatly appreciated.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

Sorry, we do not keep our newspapers more than three years so we cannot help with the obituary you requested.

We searched the early history of McKeesport and found only one paragraph which mentioned Jesse Sill -

McKeesport and the township of Versailles furnished a showing for the war of 1812. Among those taking part in the conflict were Col. William Loughead, Fauntley Muse, Major William Caven and Jesse Sill.

The above information was taken from:

"The First One Hundred Years of McKeesport" compiled and prepared by Walter S. Abbott and William E. Harrison published by the Press of McKeesport Times, McKeesport, Pa. in 1894.

Rev.David E.Witheridge
2425 Irving Avenue S.
Minneapolis, MN 55405

Dear Rev. Witheridge:

As far as I know all the records of the interments from the old Ninth Avenue Cemetery went with the burials to the new location. The only suggestion I have would be to write to the City of McKeesport and see if they have any further information.

Sincerely,

Wendy Dulaney

Secretary to Mr. Schneeman

THE THOMPSON FAMILY.

SINCE Saratoga's early days, long before it became a county, the Thompson family has been identified with its history. From sturdy Scotch ancestry, courageous, intelligent and upright, they had inherited qualities valuable alike to pioneers and the land of their adoption. Never seeking office, believing always that "the office should seek the man," four generations have held responsible offices in the county. Never forgetting that "a public office is a public trust," they conscientiously performed the duties of their positions, regardless of any sacrifice of popular favor or private interest. Their ancestors were among those Scotch families who early in the seventeenth century left Argyleshire and settled in Ireland in the Province of Ulster.

King James I who held the millions acres of land, confiscated after a rising of his rebellious Irish subjects, offered tempting inducements to these Scotch Presbyterians to migrate, hoping to promote peace and order by introducing a law-abiding element. A company from London had rebuilt the ancient city of Derry, destroyed by war, and called it Londonderry, to which Londonderry, New Hampshire, owes its name.

The migration from Scotland began in 1612, and later the colony had an accession of those determined Scotch Covenanters who, during the reign of James II, suffered brutal persecution from Claverhouse.

Unhappily the peace and religious liberty they hoped for was not to be found in Ulster. They were undaunted by the frequent attacks of their turbulent Irish neighbors and fought heroically in defense of Londonderry during the famous siege of 1689, but when, after several generations, they still found themselves not in accord with the neighboring Catholics, and deprived of their civil and religious rights by the arbitrary laws and exactions in favor of the Established Church of England, they resolved to seek in America a refuge from oppression.

A memorial dated March 26, 1718, and signed by the leading men of this Scotch colony, was sent to Governor Shute of New Hampshire by "our trusty and well beloved Friend, the Reverend William Boyd," whom "we doe commissionate and appoint" to express "our hearty inclination to transport ourselves to that very excellent and renowned Plantation upon our obtaining from his Excellency suitable encouragement." Among the signers were James, Robert, William and John Thompson. Nine subscribers were "ministers of the Gospel." Three others were "graduates of the University in Scotland." This document is still preserved. Naturally, Governor Shute sent every encouragement to such very desirable immigrants, who as soon as possible converted their property into money and set sail.

On August 4th of the same year five ships arrived in Boston Harbor bringing a band of pilgrims to whose indomitable spirit, intelligent and high principle America owes more of her prosperity and fine traits of national character than can ever be estimated. They were of a race quite distinct from the English Puritans.

From Boston, parties (always under the leadership of their beloved ministers) sought homes in various places. The Thompsons helped to found the new Londonderry, and afterwards, with others, removed to Litchfield where another settlement was formed.

In 1763 peace between England and France was declared. The Colony of New York, relieved of the danger from the cruel Indian allies of the French, offered advantages.

General Schuyler used his influence to attract desirable neighbors. Stillwater was between his two homes. In that year, to Stillwater in the Saratoga Patent came several families who became prominent in that locality and whose descendants still live there. New homes were made, and a house of worship, the "Yellow Meeting House," built as soon as possible. The Thompson family was one of the first to arrive. One of its members—a boy of fourteen—was destined to take an active part in the development of the new country, then not far from a wilderness. John Thompson's father, after establishing his family in a comfortable home, and securing to his son the best educational advantages within reach, died before the guns of an invading army disturbed the the peace of Stillwater. His son John, trained to a strong sense of duty as a citizen, bore his part manfully in the stirring events which followed. At an early age he married Fanny MacFarland, also of Scotch descent, whose ancestors came with his own to America. He took her to the Stillwater house, where they reared a family of seven children, teaching them "to fear God, love their country and help their neighbors." On this pleasant home farm they acquired the love of nature and agriculture which not one of them ever lost.

But the exigencies of the times took the young husband and father often away from his family. He was too ardent a patriot to remain inactive during the Revolutionary war, and was made captain of the company in which he and some of the neighbors enlisted. Fortunately he was spared to serve his country in times of peace. In 1788 when Stillwater township was organized, he was appointed one of its first justices. In that year and in 1789 he was a member of the State Assembly.

In 1791, when Saratoga took its place as a county, Governor Clinton appointed John Thompson "First Judge," which office he held for eighteen years until 1809 when he reached the age of sixty, the limit fixed by law. All contemporary testimony and records prove that he was an upright, fearless and impartial judge. Although the study of law had not been included in his education, he was so well informed, his intelligence so keen and quick and his judgment so sound that no fault could be found with his rulings. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1801, called to review the laws of the State, and was elected as a representative to the Sixth, Tenth and Eleventh Congresses. His letters to his son James during these sessions furnish most interesting reading now, though yellow with nearly a century's age. They throw light on the inner working of parties not only in Philadelphia and Washington but also in Saratoga county. While the father took pains to keep the son well informed on all subjects of national interest, he received from his son constant reports of affairs at home.

In December, 1799, he reaches Philadelphia "at 10 o'clock at night after a tiresome journey from New York by stage." While in New York he had "conversed with Colonel Burr and other influential men," and incidentally brought some important business to the young lawyer in Milton.

This man of direct methods chafes at schemes, delays and wasted time. "Little else is done but meeting and adjourning."

In February, 1800, he sends a paper containing General Washington's will "which is thought to be a masterly production. When you have perused it to your satisfaction, I wish you to hand it to Child, as it may help to fill his paper which may be an object to him." No telegrams and daily papers in those days! In April, he writes, "I am very sorry to hear from Judge Palmer that a division is likely to take place which may injure the Republican interest in our county. There ought to be some arrangement made to consolidate the interests of Washington and Saratoga counties. I had rather retire in favor of Colonel Thomas than to have the Republican[1] interest broken," but he leaves all to the judgment of his son who is "on the spot." Communication was very slow then. He adds, "I expect to go to Seneca Lake soon after my return and shall need a good, able saddle horse. As we have none fit for that purpose, I wish you to call on Michael Dunning. If he can furnish one, I will allow him a reasonable sum on his note, but do not engage one until I see it." He could trust the judgment of this son of twenty-four in regard to such minor matters as his business and political career, but horse flesh is another affair, especially a man's own saddle horse! In November, 1800, the seat of government had been changed to Washington and it is found "difficult to procure suitable lodgings as the city is but thinly settled."

One letter, February 17, 1801, is jubilant! "This day at one o'clock the speaker declared that Thomas Jefferson was duly elected President of the United States." Judge Thompson had greatly feared the success of Colonel Burr's machinations.

In October, 1807, he reaches Washington "after a tedious journey by land and water." In 1812 he returned to Stillwater and private life. His last years were shadowed by illness, but cheered by the devoted care of his family. He died in 1823 in his seventy-fifth year.

He had the great satisfaction of seeing his children established in prosperity, leading useful and honored lives. His son James filled the father's former office as first judge of the county. Dr. Nathan Thompson was a much respected physician in Galway, William a prominent lawyer of Ovid, N. Y., and Charles in active business at Seneca Falls. One daughter had married Dr. Aaron Gregory of Milton and the other Dr. Sears of Stillwater. Both physicians were eminent not only for skill, but high character. Those "times that tried men's souls" severely tested women's courage. When Mrs. Schuyler was applying the torch to her Saratoga wheat-fields—to keep the grain from the British troops (a hard alternative for such a thrifty housewife) Mrs. Thompson at Stillwater was trying to shield her little family from the coming storm of war—almost at her door, her husband exposed to its fury.

[1] The Republicans of that time were Jeffersonian Democrats.

When the battle of Bemis Heights began to rage, she was placed in an ox cart with her babe of three days, and a son not two years old, and taken from home for safety. A heavy rain impeded their progress, and these fugitives spent the night under the cart for lack of better shelter. By a strange coincidence, at that very time another young mother had left in alarm the future home of that little boy in the cart. On the Middle Line farm in Milton known later as "the Judge Thompson place," then lived Josiah Tallmadge, grandfather of Nathaniel Mann. His wife was terrified by reports of Hessian cruelties and it was found best for her to go to her mother in Dutchess county. The husband must stay to protect the property, so this "woman of '76" set out on a faithful horse carrying with her a child of two years. Alone, she made her way through that thinly settled country to her old home in Dutchess county, a journey of at least several days.

When the British and Hessians had been routed, her husband sent her assurance that Saratoga was now free from "war's alarms." Again she mounted her trusty steed which brought his mistress safely back—this time with two children—one a young babe.

Born and bred amid these stirring scenes, James Thompson naturally took a deep interest in the events which were making the history of his native county. Under his father's influence and training he could but feel a deep sense of responsibility for its welfare, and his duty as one of its citizens. He finished the course of study at the Scenectady Academy the year before it developed into Union College. Several of his classmates were from his own county, one—Joseph Sweetman of Charlton—was Union's first graduate.

Local interests were very strong when people lived, studied, labored, formed friendships and died near the place of their birth.

After graduating at Schenectady James Thompson began the study of law. Judge Emott was then the shining legal light of the county. He had married a daughter of Judge Palmer, and lived at the Palmer home on the Middle Line road where it forks to Burnt Hills and Ballston lake. The stately mansion now standing there was built—after a destructive fire—by Rev. Dr. Davis, Judge Emott's son-in-law. The judge's office was near by. There James Thompson, Samuel Young, Samuel Cook, Daniel L. Van Antwerp and Levi H. Palmer pursued their studies together. All were afterwards prominent in county affairs, the first two became first judges.

James Thompson was admitted to the bar soon after attaining his majority. When his father (who had spared no pains or expense in his son's education) presented him with a good horse, saddle and saddle-bags, a gold watch and a hundred dollars, the son felt himself generously supplied for the battle of life. So he was—in view of the resources and needs of the time and place. He set out to explore and decide upon a good location for the practice of his profession. Dr. Gregory induced him to open an office next his own, midway between Milton Hill and Milton Centre.

His professional success was remarkable. Clients came to him at once. Within two years this young man—not yet twenty-five—had established a high reputation and a lucrative practice. The Middle Line road was then the chief avenue for the business of the county, and a highroad between Albany and Canada. Upon it were the finest residences of the vicinity. Travelers found well kept "taverns" at every few miles.

At Milton Hill were two churches, an academy, a good "tavern," several shops, etc. A much busier place than "Ballstown Springs," which was then only an embryo watering place.

The court house was at "Court House Hill." Lawyers had homes and offices for several miles up and down the road. A farm was then essential to a comfortable living. These conditions were all changed when Ballston Spa became the county seat in 1819.

In 1802 James Thompson married a daughter of Abel Whalen, one of the early and influential residents of Milton. She was the mother of his three elder children. He bought the farm on the Middle Line road formerly called "the Judge Thompson place," in later years "Rose Hill farm." He built first his office, and then from its earnings (never a dollar of debt) the house in which he lived and died and which is still the home of one of his children. There are no such records as old letters! Fortunately Judge Thompson kept many. They now remain to show what his life and reputation were. Clients from all parts of the county asked his counsel. Strangers at a distance confided important business to him when he was still quite young. Grateful appreciation is constantly expressed for his fidelity to the interests of his clients. Poor debtors, in prison, seek and get help from him. Widows and orphans thank and bless him for saving their homes. His sympathy and help were counted upon by all sorts and conditions of men in all affairs of life. Business began to take him to Troy, Albany, New York and other large cities. Social by nature, as his circle of friends enlarged, his home became a gathering place for many eminent and interesting people. His hospitality was unbounded, especially to the unfortunate. The greater the need, the warmer the welcome. His advice was much sought in public affairs. His interest in politics did not prevent his refusing several nominations. He was appointed first judge of Common Pleas in 1818, which office he held for fifteen years.

He respected his office and scrupulously maintained its dignity for which his own character and bearing eminently fitted him. Few men had such personal influence. His intellectual power, energy and firm principles gave him weight in the community. His tastes and habits were scholarly. When he was to charge a jury, young lawyers came for a lesson in clear and forcible diction. He has been called "the father of the Saratoga county bar." No better wish can be made for it than that it may prove worthy of such parentage. When his judicial career closed in 1833, he allowed himself comparative rest, but his active interest in public affairs and the welfare of all about him never ceased, especially his fatherly interest in the careers and fortunes of younger men. He had married in 1831 a daughter of Daniel Stansbury of New York city, a woman whose many fine qualities, cultivated mind and tastes made his home very attractive. She shared his interests, and together they were a blessing to their neighborhood. Judge Thompson's sudden death in 1845 was a shock and grief to the community. Although he had reached the age of seventy, his vigor of mind and body was unimpaired. Every possible tribute of respect was paid to his memory by his legal associates and the public, and the sorrow of friends and neighbors was strikingly shown. He left a widow with three young children, beside his elder sons and daughter. His eldest son, George had entered into business at Ballston Spa where he died in 1871. He, too, shunned rather than sought office but was county treasurer from 1831 to 1844.

Judge Thompson's second son, John Whalen Thompson, born December 19, 1808, inherited the mental power of his father and grandfather. His education was carefully supervised by his father. Milton Hill Academy afforded good training for young students, and later he was sent to the Charlton Academy and the famous Lansingburg Academy to complete his preparation for college. He graduated with honor at Union College in 1827. His roommate in college was the Hon. Preston King of St. Lawrence county, and there existed between the two men an intimate and lifelong friendship. Law being the family profession, he began his studies in his uncle William Thompson's office at Ovid, N. Y., and finished in the office of Judge Stevens at Seneca Falls. In 1831 he was admitted an attorney of the Supreme Court and began practice in Ballston Spa, forming soon afterward a partnership with Hon. Anson Brown. In May, 1834, Governor Marcy appointed John W. Thompson—though very young for the office—surrogate of Saratoga county, and that position he held until 1846, when the new constitution took effect. The recorded testimony of that time shows that every duty of this responsible office was performed with scrupulous fidelity, intelligent judgment, and to the general satisfaction. Mr. Thompson's unusual ability in financial affairs led him early to take a deep interest in the organization of the Ballston Spa Bank, of which he was one of the original incorporators in 1858. There was then no other bank within convenient distance, and it was a great advantage to the village. His reputation for uncompromising integrity and conservative management were of great advantage to the bank. In 1856 Mr. Thompson was made president of the bank, and thereafter devoted himself to its care and management until his death. He rendered it a very successful and sound institution. He was fully recognized by all the old bank presidents of this section as an able financier, his knowledge of finance embracing both its minutiæ and its more abstruse and broader principles. In several instances, through correspondence with senators, his ideas were adopted and utilized by Congress in the financial legislation following the Civil war.

When the building of the Saratoga and Whitehall Railroad was considered a hazardous enterprise, Mr. Thompson regarded it differently, and by loaning his money and using his efforts did much to accomplish its success.

Reserved and retiring by nature, John W. Thompson avoided rather than courted prominence in public affairs. Deeply interested in politics, he preferred to quietly exercise his influence rather than actively enter the field. Only once, when the town needed him for supervisor, did he consent to taking a nomination. He served one term. With all his love of retirement and aversion to seeking precedence, he had too great mental activity and interest in the welfare of his native county to avoid taking an important place in its affairs. No citizen was more relied upon for sound advice in all public and private enterprises, and many a luckless struggler in a sea of financial difficulties was brought into safe harbor by his wise counsel and practical assistance. His dislike of ostentation and display was great. The accumulation of wealth never tempted him to alter his simple mode of life.

He married, early in life, a daughter of Joel Lee, who, after a life of devotion to her family and her church, died in 1871. John W. Thompson lived to the age of eighty-four and died on June 28, 1892, leaving three sons and one daughter. His eldest son, George Lee Thompson, succeeded his father as president of the Ballston Spa Bank, and like him took great interest in politics while refusing to hold office, except that of supervisor, which he filled for several terms. Ill health compelled him to withdraw from active life for some time before his death, which occurred on December 29, 1895, in his sixty-first year. Of a very generous nature, and having inherited ample means, he found his chief happiness in giving pleasure to all about him. The grateful affection of his fellow townsmen solaced his last years of illness, and was strongly manifested at his death. He left a widow and three children.

When his sister, Alice Thompson, died in Europe in 1898, a noble life ended. She had "done good by stealth" in such large measure that only her death revealed its extent. Her care for her native village and its needs was shown by her bequests.

John W. Thompson's two younger sons, Samuel and Frank, both live at the old homestead. Samuel Thompson served one term as supervisor.

REUBEN HYDE WALWORTH.

In the history and development of the judiciary of the State of New York, Chancellor Walworth[1] stands pre-eminent as an authority in equity law; and by his wisdom and fairness, his profound knowledge, and his force of character, he marks an epoch in the legal history of the State, and is entitled to that distinction which common usage has attached to this term. To praise him, we call him the last of the chancellors, as if, as Plutarch said of another, this Empire State has produced no other great equity jurist since that time. We may affirm this as true, and say, also, that possibly the dignity of the judiciary has suffered some loss in consequence of the absorption of the equity practice into the the courts formerly limited to common and statute law.

The history of the Walworth family is full of interest, on both the paternal and maternal sides. The chancellor's great-grandfather, William Walworth, came from England with Governor Winthrop of Connecticut, at his request, about 1680, to make a model farm and show the colonists English methods. Walworth settled on Fisher's Island, near New London, where he succeeded with the model farm, and had a handsome residence; and, as stated in his will, he had much table silver and other valuables. In the latter part of his life the pirates, then infesting the eastern shore of Long Island, caused so many alarms at Fisher's Island, that Walworth bought farms at Groton and other places in that vicinity, and moved his family to the mainland. He was suits, and she had similar dealings with Newnham Priory[1]—all with reference to the advowsons of churches. At another time there were difficulties with St. Alban's Abbey.[2] Matthew Paris[3] relates the story of the abbess of Elstow and the sword: how, at the time of the pulling down of St. Paul's church by Fawkes de Bréauté, she took the sword out of the hand of the image of St. Paul in her own church, and declared that she would not restore it until he avenged himself upon the common enemy. At the beginning of the fourteenth century, in the year 1306, a rather interesting suit was begun between the abbess at that time, Clemence de Balliol, and the brethren of St. Leonard's Hospital.[4] The latter had been erecting new buildings on either side of the pathway which led from Elstow to Bedford, and obtained permission in consequence to close it, and make another which should pass round instead of through the hospital. This the abbess objected to, on the ground that the old way was more direct and convenient for her people. The two paths were carefully measured, and it was decided, against the abbess, that the new way was not appreciably longer than the old. But she was still dissatisfied, and the brethren seem to have been hindered from carrying out their plans for another two years, when they obtained letters patent from the king for the closing of the path.

In 1337 Elizabeth Morteyn, who was then abbess, claimed the 'third penny' from the town of Bedford, in virtue of an alleged grant from Malcolm (IV.), King of Scotland; the case was carried before Parliament, and the burgesses were successful in proving that Malcolm never had any lordship in the town.[5] Six years earlier a previous abbess was summoned to show by what title she claimed view of frankpledge and 'judicialia' in Elstow, Wilshampstead, Maulden, and Kempston: she was obliged to confess that her administration had been lax, and could only secure her rights by the payment of a fine.[6] It was only a short time after this that the parish church of Elstow, as well as the tithes of both rectories, were finally appropriated by the monastery, under the sanction of Bishop Bek; and 'to avoid the inconvenience caused by the chanting of psalms in the nave of the monastery,' the chapel of St. Helen, which stood in the churchyard, was to serve in future as a parish church.[7] From this time forward little is known of the external history of the house, except that it was much patronised by seculars, whom the bishops never could succeed in keeping out for any length of time. Not long before the dissolution an attendant of Elizabeth of York, wife of Henry VII., was professed there.[8]

This house was constantly visited by the Bishops of Lincoln; and the records of their injunctions from time to time show us something of its internal history. The first notice of this kind is in a letter, dated 24 June 1270, from Bishop Gravesend to Walter Giffard, Archbishop of York.[9] A sister of the latter, Agatha Giffard, was prioress of Elstow at the time, and had been at fault (as had the abbess also) 'through connivance or remissness' in some scandal that had lately occurred. What it was the bishop does not say; only he remarks 'from that house more frequently than from any other false reports of disgraceful acts are brought to us'; and he is evidently putting the case as mildly as he can, so as not to offend the archbishop.

In 1300 the nuns of Elstow, as well as many others, were enjoined to observe the statute De Claustura Monialium of Boniface VIII.[10] This statute was aimed no doubt at Whatever the scandal was, it cost the prioress no serious loss of credit, for in 1280–1 she was very nearly elected abbess (Wigram, Chronicles of the Abbey of Elstow, 79, where the letter of Bishop Oliver Sutton reporting on the election is given in full).

a real abuse; but it imposed upon the nuns a degree of enclosure to which they were not bound by the Benedictine rule, and consequently was difficult to enforce. At Elstow it was probably not obeyed at all; for in 1359 Bishop Gynwell[1] at his visitation reported that there had been 'too much wandering of the nuns out of the monastery.' He had other complaints to make, which show for the first time what was then and afterwards the great snare into which this house fell. The story of Abbess Mabel and the sword of St. Paul shows a right and wholesome interest in the affairs of the church and the world, such as any good religious might take under the common interpretation of the rule of St. Benedict; but as time went on this interest became excessive, and was attended by an inevitable laxity of discipline. From the time of St. Hugh there had been a school in the monastery for children of both sexes;[2] most of the nuns were well born and had friends about the Court who sought various pretexts for visiting and lodging in the monastery. Even if the nuns had wished to prevent these visits, it would not always have been easy; the Papal Letters of the fourteenth century show that noble ladies, even queens, often asked licences from the pope to spend a few nights in a nunnery. And the depreciation of the value of property after the great pestilence made the poorer houses sometimes thankful to accept boarders, like many French convents at the present day. But at Elstow it is to be feared that the nuns were really at fault in this matter; that the spiritual life of the convent was marred by worldliness from first to last.

Bishop Gynwell enjoined that no secular women, except necessary maidservants, should dwell in the convent without special licence;[3] all were to depart within fifteen days on pain of excommunication, because 'by the living together of secular women and nuns, the contemplation of religion is withdrawn, and scandal engendered.' Only quite young children were to be allowed to remain;[4] and there was to be no more laxity or favour shown in the correction of breaches of rule.

Bishop Buckingham issued three different sets of injunctions. In 1379[5] he wrote to the Abbess Anstis to order the removal of all secular persons, men and women, from the precincts of the monastery, as 'dangerous to the purity and spiritual devotion of the religious.' In 1387 he held a regular visitation, and his injunctions, though they do not point to any serious irregularities, are of an interesting character; their aim seems rather to set forth to the nuns their duties in general, and to exhort them to greater fervour, than to correct abuses. There are the usual orders about the singing of the divine office, the administration of the revenues of the convent, the repair of the buildings, the due care of the sick; the nuns are cautioned to avoid scandal by refraining from conversation with all men, both secular and religious, especially the mendicant friars, and their near neighbours, the canons of Caldwell; not to go out without permission, and to return home before sunset; to be careful that they wear the religious habit of their order and the veil, and not to seek such ornaments as fur, or girdles ornamented with silver; to be humble, obedient, charitable, loving one another in the bond of peace; so that at last 'adorned with the fruit of good works, their lamps burning in their hands, they may be worthy to enter into the marriage chamber of the Heavenly Bridegroom unto whose service they have dedicated themselves.'[6] In 1388[7] the bishop only sent a personal admonition to the abbess to be sure and provide a 'fit and secure place' where offenders against the rule might be detained.[8]

Bishop Repingdon visited the monastery at the beginning of the fourteenth century. His injunctions show that no lasting reform had been effected by his predecessors. No secu-

[3] In 1350 he had himself granted such a licence to the widow of Sir John Pateshull, to dwell in the monastery with her daughter and maids. One of the brasses still in Elstow church is probably that of a lady who had spent her widowhood as a boarder in the monastery.

They were not to talk to the canons of Caldwell 'about the public highways and fields adjoining' under pain of excommunication: which shows that they were in no sense enclosed within the monastery. The last words quoted at the end of the injunctions are a reminder to them of the Office for the Profession of a nun with which they would all be familiar, and would constitute a strong appeal for renewed fervour.

lars male or female above the age of twelve were to be admitted; the nuns were not to go into Bedford or Elstow; only suitable persons were to be professed.[1]

Bishop Grey[2] admonished the nuns to increase their numbers, that the divine office might not be neglected; but none was to be admitted unless she could read and sing, and then only with the consent of the 'greater and wiser' part of the convent. No seculars except young children were to be allowed in the monastery; an apostate nun was to be brought back. This was the last visitation before the well known injunctions of Bishop Longland in 1530.[3] The tone of these makes it impossible to avoid the conclusion that the house had become thoroughly secularised. The ladies had for the most part given up the most distinctive features of their common life; they had forsaken the use of the refectory, and lived more like pensioners in a boarding-house, having their little private 'households,' where they received and ate with their friends. They were accustomed to wear scarlet stomachers, 'voyded shoes' and low-necked dresses like those of secular women, and 'cornered crests' instead of veils. The lady abbess when she walked in procession was followed by a train of servants, and leant upon the arm of one of them. The 'chapelayne,' Dame Katherine Wingate, had been wont to absent herself from matins, and to take her meals in the abbess's buttery with the steward. Nevertheless the bishop evidently thought the case was not past remedy, and it is noteworthy that after all nothing worse than secularity is implied in these injunctions. He reminds them that 'the more secret religious persons be kept from the sight and visage of the world and strangers, the more close and entire their mind and devotion shall be to God'; and so orders a door at least 5 feet high to be erected at the lower end of the choir, so that the nuns might neither see nor be seen by strangers at office time; and the cloister door between the monastery and the church, as well as the outer door towards the court, were to be kept shut as far as possible. There were to be no more 'households' kept except the abbess's, and a 'misericorde' where four or five of the sisters with 'one sad lady of the elder sort,' nominated by the abbess, might take their meals in turn and meet their friends. The rest were to go to the 'fratry.'[4]

How far these injunctions produced any effect it is impossible to say. The house was not mentioned by Layton in the letter[5] in which he records his visit to Bedfordshire. It did not fall under the Act of 1536, and was not surrendered until 26 August 1539.[6] The deed of surrender is still extant; it contains the ordinary formula, the same as that of Wardon and Chicksand, and has no signatures, but only the seal. The pension lists of 1539–40[7] assign £50 to the abbess, Elizabeth Boyvill, and smaller sums to twenty-three nuns besides. If there were so many at this time, we may conclude that the house held perhaps twice as many in the thirteenth century, but there is no record of the original number. The usual officials are named from time to time: the prioress, the sacristan, afterwards called the 'chapelayne,' the chantress. It appears that in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries there were a few lay brothers attached to the house, but it is not clear what was their exact status.[8]

The original endowment of the abbey included the vills of Elstow and Wilshampstead with 5 hides and 1½ virgates in Maulden, and the church of Hitchin in Hertfordshire.[9] Small portions of land in Buckinghamshire, Leicestershire, Gloucestershire and Northampton-

[1] Linc. Epis. Reg., Memo. Repingdon, 231. Rules of diet were also given at this visitation. No money was to be exacted from those seeking admission to the community. Two older nuns were to be responsible for all the money of the convent; the collector of rents was to give an account upon oath twice a year. A sacristan and a precentor were to be chosen from the nuns of good reputation: none convicted of immorality was to be admitted to any office. The sick nuns in the infirmary were to be duly visited, and the rest to sleep in the dormitory.

[4] It should be noted that there is no suggestion of actual immorality at this time, or at any other, except in Bishop Repingdon's injunctions (see above). But on the other hand the recurrence of the same corrections makes it clear that the standard of life in the house had never been high since the thirteenth century, and though there were doubtless always some of the 'sadder sort,' as at the end, yet they were in the minority.

reputation, and his death, 9 May 1641, was regarded by both parties as a calamity. Clarendon describes him as one who 'rather desired to bind up those wounds which were made than to make them wider by entertaining new jealousies between king and people,'[246] as 'a wise man, and of too great and plentiful a portion to wish a subversion of the government,'[247] and 'the greatest person of interest in the popular party.'[248] On the outbreak of hostilities, his son William, who had sat in the Long Parliament and had succeeded to his father's seat in the Lords as fifth earl, took service for the Parliament, and, commanding the reserve of horse at Edgehill, helped to turn a defeat into a drawn battle.[249] In 1643 he went with the Earl of Holland to Oxford, where he was graciously received and pardoned by the king, but got cold welcome from the Royalists.[250] He fought on the king's side at the first battle of Newbury,[251] but returned to London by the end of the year,[252] and after that took no active part in the conflict. His property was sequestered, but the sequestration was taken off in 1644.[253] A more active supporter of the king was the Earl of Cleveland, to whom the success of Cropredy Bridge in 1644 was mainly due;[254] but he was taken prisoner at the second battle of Newbury in the same year,[255] and passed most of his time in prison, with intervals of parole, till the end of 1648.[256] His son, Lord Wentworth, also fought gallantly as a Royalist.[257] Henry, Earl of Peterborough, after some hesitation took the same side, raised a troop, and was wounded at the first battle of Newbury,[258] and he and his brother John took part in the Earl of Holland's rising in 1648.[259] Finally, Lord Capel of Warden Abbey, who had sat in the Long Parliament as member for Hertfordshire, but had been made a peer in August 1641,[260] raised a troop of horse at his own cost. Of his fate something will be said later.

Besides these noblemen, a considerable number of the gentry of Bedfordshire supported the king. William Gery of Bushmead raised a troop of horse, and his brother George was captured at Naseby.[261] The former was one of the delinquents whose estates were decimated in 1655,[262] and in July 1660 his son William petitioned for a commissionership of excise, one claim being that his 'father lost his whole estate by adhering to the late king.'[263] Others who fought for the king or actively supported him were Sir Lewis Dyve,[264] William and Richard Taylor of Clapham, who were both taken prisoners, Spencer Potts of Chalgrave, Thomas Joyce, vicar of Haynes, Sir Francis Crawley of Luton, one of the judges who had decided against Hampden on ship-money; Edward and John Russell, brothers of the Earl of Bedford, Sir William Palmer of Hill (in Warden), the widow and son of John Wingate of Harlington, Sir Peter Osborn of Chicksands, Richard Conquest of Houghton, Robert Spencer of Eaton Socon, young Robert Audley of Northill, and Michael Grigg of Dunstable; while among those who did not take up arms, but declared their sympathies, were Sir George Bynnion of Eaton Socon, Sir Edward Ashton of Wymington, Sir Thomas and they were executed with the Duke of Hamilton 9 March 1648–9. Each met his death bravely, Lord Capel with the words, 'God Almighty, staunch, staunch this issue of blood: this will not do the business, God Almighty, find out another way to do it.'[362]

The earlier years of the Commonwealth appear to have passed quietly in Bedfordshire. Sir Samuel Luke, who was so conspicuous while the actual fighting was going on, disappeared from the leadership at its close. He was a staunch Presbyterian, and on the occasion of the king's stay at Woburn he was seized by a party of soldiers on suspicion that he was raising forces in the county to help the London Presbyterians against the army, 1 August 1647, but was speedily released by Fairfax. He was again under arrest for a time when Colonel Pride so effectively 'purged' Parliament in December 1648. From that time nothing more is heard of him till he reappears in the Convention Parliament in April 1660.[363] The county had two representatives in the assembly known as 'Barebone's Parliament,'[364] and under the 'Instrument of Government' five members were allotted to the county and one to the town of Bedford.[365]

When Cromwell in 1655 divided the country into districts under the rule of 'Major-generals,' Bedfordshire, with Northamptonshire, Rutland, and Huntingdonshire, was allotted to Major Butler,[366] who reported to Thurloe on 19 November that he did not find 'many delinquents in this county whose estates arise so high as to fall under our decimation.'[367] He asked for a decision about the Earl of Bedford and Sir Robert Napier, the latter having been 'sequestered three years together,' and having sat in the Long Parliament 'when he saw which way success was like to go.' Another difficulty concerned Richard Conquest, who had woods to the value of £8,000 or £10,000, 'and yet little or no yearly profit is made of them.'[368] The list of decimations includes sixteen names,[369] and the sums range from Sir Thomas Leigh, of Leighton Buzzard, £135, and Richard Conquest, of Houghton Conquest, esq., £120, to Mr. Audley of Biggleswade, £2 4*s.* 9*d.*, and John Russell, of Woburn, esq. (brother of the earl) £1,[370] the total amounting to £686 6*s.* 11*d.* Butler also undertook with the help of his commissioners to discover 'the prophane and idle gentry and others, whose lives are a shame to Christian commonwealth,' such as Goddard Pemberton, 'that was formerly in arms against the Parliament, a very desperate person, having no estate, and living at the rate of four or five hundred a year,' being supported by a Royalist lady of the county. HOLWELL

The parish of Holwell has an area of 892½ acres, almost the whole of which is arable land.[1] The soil is stiff clay, the subsoil, clay; the principal crops are oats, barley, beans, and peas. The land slopes from a height of 235 ft. above the ordnance datum in the south-west to 170 ft. in the north-east. It has been transferred, since the survey of 1831, from Bedfordshire to Hertfordshire.

The country is open and level, traversed from north to south by the main road from Shefford to Hitchin, and the few houses which form the village stand, together with the church and vicarage, at a little distance to the west of the road. In the south-east corner of the parish is a small group of houses, known as Cadwell, and on the northern boundary is Holwellbury, the only considerable building in the parish, with Old Ramerick Farm at a little distance to the west. This last is apparently but a fragment of a larger building, formerly of some importance.

Two small streams, tributaries of the Hiz, run across the parish from west to east, and the main line of the Great Northern Railway cuts through the eastern side, beyond the line of the main road, the nearest station being at Henlow.

The house at Old Ramerick has an eighteenth-century red brick front, but at the back, and also in one of the barns, there are remains of old stonework.

MANOR

The manor of HOLWELL originated in a charter of King Edgar, bearing date 968, and granting land in Holwell to the abbey of St. Peter of Westminster, which was confirmed in 1066 by Edward the Confessor when the land is described as 6½ hides.[2] At the Domesday Survey in 1086 the abbot of Westminster held a manor of the above extent in Holwell.[3] In the thirteenth century this manor was assessed for scutage at 9 marks yearly,[4] and included 6 hides,[5] and in 1490 Thomas Peyton held it of the abbey by service of £6 yearly,[6] but no further trace has been found of the overlordship, and it is not mentioned in the Valor Ecclesiasticus as belonging to Westminster Abbey.

The earliest lords of Holwell Manor, the Malories, are found settled in Holwell from the twelfth century holding their lands from the abbey of Westminster. A charter of John's reign contains the grant of half a virgate in Holwell from Simon Malory to his nephew Simon son of Robert.[7] Alice Malory, possibly the wife of the younger Simon, made good her claim to half a virgate here in 1228.[8] In 1241 Robert Malory held Holwell, described for the first time as a manor,[9] and a few years later was succeeded by his son John,[10] who justified his claim to Holwell by descent from one Bertram Malory.[11] John Malory held Holwell Manor in 1316,[12] and the family evidently retained the lordship, for in 1357 Simon Francis was holding land in Holwell of John Malory by service of suit of court.[13] Eleanor the daughter of a late John Malory married Sir John

Bernard of Islesham,[14] who in 1464 placed this manor in the hands of trustees,[15] preliminary to settlement on his daughter Margaret who married Thomas Peyton.[16] Thomas Peyton, son of the above Thomas, died in possession of the manor in 1490 and left a brother Robert as his heir.[17] Though there is little documentary evidence, this family appears to have continued to hold Holwell manor, for in 1561 it was in the possession of Thomas Peyton,[18] who in 1564 finally alienated it to Robert Ivory.[19] John Ivory, probably son of Robert, held the manor in 1600[20] and was followed by William Ivory who in 1656 alienated the manor to Thomas Stoneylove.[21] He transferred it in 1673 to George Nodes,[22] by whose son George it was alienated in 1704 to Ralph Wingate and Robert Raworth.[23] This manor subsequently passed to the Foresters, though no record of the transfer has been found, and in 1765 Baldwyn Leighton, nephew of Diana Forester, sold it to John Radcliffe.[24]

He died without issue in 1783, and was succeeded by Mr. Delmé who had married his niece Anne Clarke.[25] The manor then passed to Henry Delmé Radcliffe, their son,[26] who died childless in 1830, and was succeeded by his brother Frederick Peter, whose son Francis Delmé Radcliffe is at the present day lord of the manor.[27]

In the fourteenth century the family of Spigurnel held land in Holwell, of which the first mention is found in 1309 when Henry Spigurnel received a charter of free warren here.[28] In 1386 William son

The Indians making an assault upon Deerfield in this present war, they struck a hatchet some inches in the skull of a boy there, even so deep, that the boy felt the force of a wrench used by 'em to get it out, there he lay a long while weltering in his blood, they found him, they dressed him and considerable quantity of his brain came out from time to time when they opened the wound, yet the lad recovered and is now a living monument of the Power and Goodness of God.

BENEDICT

1. WILLIAM BENDICT (probably Guillaume Benoit or Benoist), is said to have gone from France through Holland to Nottinghamshire, Eng., about 1550. It is possible that this emigration may have occurred as late as the St. Bartholomew Massacre, 1572. He was born about 1500.

2. WILLIAM BENEDICT, only son, lived in Nottinghamshire.

3. WILLIAM BENEDICT, only son, born 1585; married Ann Hunlocke, died 1618, daughter of Henry and Margaret or Edith Hunlocke of Darbyshire. (Henry Hunlocke of Darbyshire, next to Notts., in his will of 1610 mentions his wife, whose name was either Margaret or Edith, probably one succeeded the other, and his son-in-law William Benedict, Gentleman, and daughter Ann.) This William Benedict later married a widow Bridgum (Bridgeham) with a daughter. He must have died somewhere between the birth of his son, 1617, and the emigration, 1638.

4. LIEUTENANT THOMAS BENEDICT, born about 1617; died in Norwalk early in 1690; married, 1640 Mary Bridgum, daughter of his stepmother. He came to America when he was 21 years old, and was an only son. He lost his mother early and his father married a second time, a widow, Mrs. Bridgum, who had a daughter, Mary Bridgum. When Thomas was of age (1638) he and Mary came to New England in the same vessel and settled in "The Mass. Bay"; shortly after, in 1640, he married Mary Bridgum and moved to Southold, L. I., where his children were born. He then went to Huntington, L. I., lived there June 1656, then moved to Jamaica, L. I. where Thomas, eldest son, married Mary Messenger. He later moved to New Jersey (now Elizabeth), then 1665 to Norwalk, Conn., where he was a deacon of the church.

He was a magistrate at Jamaica, 1663; Lieutenant, December 1663; Commissioner for Jamaica, 1664; was a member of Colonial Convention at Hempstead 1665 by order of Colonial Governor of New York, by authority of the English King; Lieutenant in Captain Byron Newton's Foot Company, April 1665; Deputy for Norwalk to Connecticut Legislature, May 1670, May 1675; on 19 Feb. 1666 was chosen town clerk and selectman (17 times) in Norwalk; in 1669 and 1672 again town clerk; one of committee
